EMIGRATION.

No. 6687.

The 2nd August, 1916.

RESOLUTION.—By the Government of India, Department of Commerce and Industry.

The following letter received from the Government of the East Africa Protectorate is published for general information :—

P. S.

THE SECRETARIAT,

No. S.-99-30. NAIROBI,

East Africa Protectorate,

June 27th, 1916.

SIR,

I have the honour to inform you that the Government of the British East Africa Protectorate has recently had under consideration the desirability of enforcing more strictly the provisions of the Immigration Restriction Ordinance, 1906 and the Immigration Restriction Amendment Ordinance, 1910, copies of which are enclosed herewith.

2. Section 11 of the original enactment provided that any person appearing to be a prohibited immigrant under Section 5 (a)* might be permitted to enter the Protectorate on payment of a deposit according to nationality†. In the course of time this restriction was shown to be acting as a deterrent in the case of persons who might well be admitted to the country, and the amending Ordinance was promulgated whereby the Immigration Officer was empowered to accept security in lieu of the deposit.

3. In the great majority of cases no arrangements for this security are made prior to embarkation and in consequence such persons have hitherto been allowed to land in order that they may be given the opportunity of finding a surety. This concession has led to abuse and is in itself objectionable inasmuch as the deposit prescribed by Section 11 of the Ordinance of 1906 is payable before landing, and if this Section is read together with Section 3 (I) of the amending Ordinance of 1910 it is clear that the demand for security must also be complied with before landing.

* The Section prohibits the immigration of any person without visible means of support or any person who is likely to become a pauper or a public charge.

† The deposit required from a native of India is Rs. 50.

4. The Government has therefore decided that all immigrants should either make the necessary deposit, or provide the security required, before leaving the ship on arrival in port. The strict enforcement of this regulation will take effect as from the 1st of September 1916 and I have the honour to request that steps may be taken to make this procedure known in those districts from which immigrants to British East Africa usually arrive. Persons who cannot deposit the necessary sum or have failed to find the requisite security will after that date be sent back to India, and the Government of this Protectorate will not hold itself responsible for any expenditure thus incurred.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

C. C. BOWRING,

Chief Secretary to the Government.

Local Governments and Administrations are requested to make the intimation contained in the letter as widely known as possible, particularly in places from which emigration to British East Africa is believed to be most common. Intending emigrants should also be warned of the risks they run in proceeding to the Protectorate if they are unable, before landing, to deposit the sum of Rs. 50 or to comply with the demand for the requisite security in lieu of the deposit.

Ordered that a copy of the above Resolution be forwarded, for information and guidance, to all Local Governments and Administrations, and to the Foreign and Political Department for communication to the Native States.

Ordered, also that a copy be published in the Gazette of India, for general information.

The limits of value and the other conditions laid down in the foregoing rules relating to inland telegraphic money orders shall apply to such telegraphic money orders :

Provided that the fees for such telegraphic money orders shall be made up of (1) the money order commission at the rates applicable to inland ordinary money orders and (2) a telegraph charge calculated at the rates for private telegrams for the actual number of words used in the telegram advising the remittance.

Provided also that telegraphic money orders for repayment to the remitters shall be returned by post to the offices of issue.

If delivery of the securities is applied for, the notes will be delivered endorsed in the name of such party or parties."

ORDERED that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India and that it be communicated to the Finance Department, the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs and the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 3rd August 1916, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The rainfall of the week was abundant and well distributed; all parts of the country received rain except upper Sind and west Baluchistan. Unusual pressure conditions in the northeast of the Arabian Sea produced an extension of rainfall over Gujarat into lower Sind. DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 29th July 1916.

Burma.—The rainfall in Lower Burma was good but in the dry zone it was scanty. Cultivation of the winter rice crop is proceeding satisfactorily and sowing for dry crops in Upper Burma is progressing normally. Standing crops are doing well. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has risen further to Rs. 115 per hundred baskets which is slightly above normal. The market for white rice is steady.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable and favourable to standing crops and ploughing operations. Moderate to heavy rain has fallen in all districts but more rain is still wanted in Kamrup, Darrang and the Lushai Hills. Preparation of lands for winter rice and sowing of paddy seedbeds are proceeding. Transplantation of winter rice seedlings, plucking and manufacture of tea, planting of sugarcane and harvesting of autumn rice and jute are in progress. Slight damage to jute by recent floods is reported from Goalpara. Prospects of jute, winter rice, sugarcane and cotton are fair and those of tea are fair to good. The price of common rice is almost stationary. Scarcity of fodder is reported from one district and cattle disease from all districts except Manipur and the Garo Hills.

Bengal.—During the week heavy rain fell in a number of places in Northern and Eastern Bengal but the fall varied from light to moderate elsewhere. Want of seasonable rainfall is keenly felt in Western Bengal especially in the districts of the Burdwan division. Some damage to paddy and jute has been reported from Malda owing to floods and from Cooch Behar, Dinajpur and Jalpaiguri owing to excessive rainfall. Harvesting of autumn paddy and jute continues in Eastern Bengal. Steeping and washing of jute have also commenced. Transplantation of winter paddy is in full swing everywhere. Insects are reported to have caused slight damage to paddy and jute in parts of Nadia and Burdwan. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has remained stationary with a tendency to fall.

The weekly report on famine and scarcity is as follows:—

Bankura District.—Distress in affected areas is generally unchanged. The rainfall was general but more rain is wanted for transplantation. Prospects of standing crops are favourable. Relief measures are adequate. The condition of people on relief works is generally good. Private charitable funds are giving relief. Adequate advances are being made to weavers. Cloths are being distributed by district charitable relief fund. Prices have fallen. The price of rice is 8½ seers per rupee. The number of persons on relief works was 10,070 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 21,510, total 31,580. The increase in the number on works is due to retardation of transplantation in local areas owing to insufficient rainfall. The number of persons relieved on private works was 2,939.

Tippera District.—Rain fell during the week but more rain is needed for the standing winter paddy and jute crops. Harvesting of autumn paddy has been nearly completed and cutting of jute continues. The public health is good. Relief works have been closed owing to agricultural employment being available and general improvement in conditions. Distress in the Sadar sub-division is abating. The price of rice is 7 seers per rupee. The number of persons on relief works was 622 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 4,957, total 5,579.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week rain was general over the Province, the fall being heavy in parts of Bihar and light to moderate elsewhere. Weeding of autumn crops is going on and transplantation of winter paddy is in progress but more rain is wanted for the purpose in parts of Chota Nagpur. Standing crops are generally doing well. The average price of common rice has remained almost stationary as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from eleven districts. The attendance of persons on test works in Manbhum and Singhbhum was 110 and 10,587 respectively. Gratuitous relief was given to 1,869 persons in Manbhum and 1,299 persons in Singhbhum. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—During the week good rain has fallen throughout the whole Provinces. Sowing of autumn crops continues and is nearing completion in places and weeding is in progress. Transplantation of rice is going on. Preparation of lands for spring crops is in hand. Standing crops are doing well though some damage by excessive rain was caused in parts of Bareilly, Aligarh, Mainpuri, Farrukhabad and Shajahanpur and by grass hoppers in Ballia. Cattle are generally healthy. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Prices continue to be generally stationary.

Punjab.—Light or moderate rain has fallen in nearly all the reporting districts and has been beneficial. More rain, however, is still wanted in parts of the southeast and southwest of the Province The condition of standing crops is good on irrigated and average on unirrigated areas. Sowings of autumn crops continue and are generally normal. Cattle are improving in the southeast. Elsewhere they are healthy. Water for drinking and irrigation is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary or are rising slightly. In the case of wheat they are close to normal rates but in other cases they range between normal and scarcity rates. Price of wheat :—Ferozepore, Rawalpindi and Lyallpur 10½, Lahore 11 and Ambala 11¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain has fallen. The weather is hot. More rain is badly required. The condition of standing crops is average but it is poor on unirrigated areas of Dera Ismail Khan. Harvesting of extra spring crops continues with outturn average in Bannu. The condition of cattle is generally good. Fodder and water are sufficient except on unirrigated areas of Lakki. The Paharpur canal is running. The public health is generally good. Prices are high but stationary. The price of barley is rising in Peshawar.

Kashmir.—The rainfall during the week was insignificant. Standing crops are in good condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are falling.

Rajputana.—The weather is cloudy. During the week good rain has fallen everywhere except in the southern Rajputana States, Mewar and the Hilly Tracts. Standing crops are in fair condition. Sowing and weeding continue. Green grass is growing and the condition of cattle is improving but they are still weak in parts of Mewar, Tonk, Jaipur and Kishengarh. Prices are high and are generally stationary. The number of persons on test works in Kishengarh was 164 and in Karauli 443.

The weekly report on scarcity in Merwara is as follows :—Distress is gradually decreasing owing to recent rainfall. There is no wandering or emaciation among applicants for relief. The physical condition of the people on works is satisfactory. Relief measures are sufficient. Cash advances are being liberally distributed. Cholera cases are reported from a few villages of the Beawar Tahsil. The public health is satisfactory in Todgarh. Orders have issued for closure of two works in the Beawar Tahsil. Prices are 10 seers per rupee. The number of persons on test works was 2,000 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 2,300, total 4,300.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general, the principal falls being over 4 inches in Dhar and Barwani, over 2 inches in Khargon, over 1 inch in Indore city, Kannod, Bundelkhand, Alirajpur and Manpur and sufficient everywhere. Autumn crops are being sown and weeded. Standing crops are in good condition. The probable outturn is good in Bhopal and the Southern States and fair in Indore. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are normal in Bhopal and Baghelkhand, slightly fluctuating in the Indore and Mehidpur districts of the Indore State and steady elsewhere

Central Provinces.—The weather was generally cloudy. Rain fell throughout the Provinces. The heaviest quantity registered at headquarters was 6½ inches in Chhindwara. More rain is required in some rice growing tracts while a break would be welcome in Chhindwara, Nagpur, Chanda and the Berar districts. Sowings are approaching completion and germination is satisfactory Fodder and water are adequate and agricultural stock is in good condition. Variations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States.—The rainfall during the week was general and good but more rain is needed in three States. Sowings are still in progress and standing crops are in good condition.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was general and beneficial in the Presidency Proper and in Thar and Parkar. Sowing of autumn crops continues. Transplantation is progressing. Germinated seedlings are generally thriving. The fodder supply is deficient in parts of Sind, Kathiawar, Cutch, Palanpur and Baroda. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition except in parts of Sind and Palanpur. Drinking water is inadequate in parts of Larkana and Baroda. Water for irrigation is deficient in parts of Larkana, Gujarat and Kathiawar. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding in parts with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The supply of water is sufficient in the Circars except Ganjam and in Kurnool, Cuddapah, Chingleput, Coimbatore, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, the West Coast and the Nilgiris and is insufficient in parts of other districts. Pasture is insufficient in parts of six districts, fairly sufficient in Bellary and sufficient elsewhere. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

Nepal.—Report for the quarter ending 15th July 1916.—The rainfall for the period was 19·17 inches against 29·88 inches for the corresponding period of last year.

April 1916.—The second crop of potatoes was dug and the outturn was good. Early rice, Indian corn and chillies were planted.

May 1916.—Wheat, barley and peas (small) were harvested in the hills and the Nepal valley. On account of there being no winter rains the outturn was below the average.

July 1916.—Plums and peaches were gathered in, the crop being good. Pears and apples commenced to ripen. Transplantation of rice continued. Standing crops of Indian corn, rice and chillies are doing well. The rainfall is very satisfactory. The market is well stocked but the prices of foodstuffs are somewhat high. The health of live stock is reported to be good.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

JUDICIAL.

Simla, the 4th August, 1916.

RESOLUTION.

In consequence of the transfer of the Imperial Capital to Delhi, and the constitution of the Province of Bihar and Orissa with a High Court at Patna and a separate cadre of law officers, the Government of India have had under consideration the question of revising the arrangements under which they, in common with the Governments of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, shared the services of the principal law officers, namely, the Advocate General, the Standing Counsel and the Government Solicitor. The altered conditions indicate, in the opinion of the Government of India, the desirability of reconsidering the remuneration and terms of appointment of these officers, as well as the strength of the legal staff now employed in Calcutta, including the recently created appointment of Director of Public Prosecutions in Bengal. For the proper examination of these and connected questions, the Government of India have decided, with the concurrence of the Government of Bengal, to appoint a small expert Committee which will be constituted as follows :—

President.—The Hon'ble Sir Basil Scott, Kt., Barrister-at-law, Chief Justice, High Court of Judicature, Bombay.

Members.—1. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, Kt., I.C.S., Member of the Executive Council of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bihar and Orissa.

2. Mr. S. R. Das, Barrister-at-law.

Secretary.—The Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal.

The Committee, which will meet at Simla at an early date and will proceed subsequently to Calcutta to take such evidence as it may require, is requested to examine, and furnish the Government of India with their recommendations on, the following matters :—

(a) The most suitable arrangements for that part of the legal business of the Government of India which is at present carried on through officers who are not whole-time servants of the Government of India, with particular reference to the latter's relations with the Advocate General, Bengal, the Standing Counsel and the Government Solicitor.

(b) The terms and conditions under which the post of Advocate General, Bengal, should in future be held.

(c) The suitability of the existing arrangements for the legal business of the Government of Bengal and the necessity or otherwise of maintaining all the existing posts, with particular reference to the territorial redistribution of 1912.

(d) The lines on which the experimental post of Director of Public Prosecutions has been created in Bengal, and the appropriate relations between it and other officers of the local Government, including in particular the Legal Remembrancer and the local Law Officers.

ORDER.—Ordered that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India ; and that a copy be forwarded to the Governments of Bombay, Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bombay, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, Kt., Mr. S. R. Das, Barrister-at-law, and the Finance and Legislative Departments.

By order,

CHIEF COMMISSIONER, DELHI.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Dated the 27th July 1916.

No. 5188.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 15, sub-section (1), clause (a) of the Cantonments Act, 1910 (XV of 1910), and with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council the Chief Commissioner of Delhi is pleased to impose in the cantonment named the New Cantonment, Delhi, with effect from 1st September 1916 a conservancy tax upon the occupier of any house, shop or part of a house or quarters situated within the limits of the said cantonment at the rate of two annas per rupee per mensem on the rental of such house or part of a house or quarters provided that—firstly, the total amount of such tax levied in respect of any such house or part of a house or quarters shall in no case exceed one rupee per mensem and shall not be less than 4 annas per mensem, when such house or part of a house or quarters has a private latrine or two annas when it has no private latrine, and secondly, the tax shall be levied on those houses, parts of houses, or quarters only in respect of which the cantonment authority has undertaken house scavenging as defined in section 158 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 (III of 1911).

No. 5189-Military.—In accordance with the provisions of section 15, sub-section 2, of the Cantonment Act, 1910 (XV of 1910), the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council is pleased to apply to the New Cantonment, Delhi, for the assessment and recovery of the Conservancy House Tax, the provisions of sections 3, 63, 64,65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 73, 79, 80, 81, 84, 85, and 86 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 (Punjab Act, III of 1911) in the adapted form set forth in the schedule hereto annexed.

THE SCHEDULE.

Sections 3 (1), 63-69, 72, 73, 79-81 and 84-86 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 (Punjab Act, III of 1911), as adapted for the purposes of the assessment and recovery of taxes imposed in the New Cantonment, Delhi.

1. The words "annual value" means :—

Definitions—Section 3 (1).

(a) in the case of land, the gross annual rent at which it may reasonably be expected to let from year to year :

Provided that, in the case of land assessed to land revenue, or of which the land revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, the annual value shall, if the Local Government so direct, be deemed to be double the aggregate of the following amounts :—

(i) the amount of the land revenue for the time being assessed on the land, whether such assessment is leviable or not ; or, when the land revenue has been wholly or in part compounded for or redeemed, the amount which, but for such composition or redemption would have been leviable ; and

(ii) when the improvement of the land due to canal irrigation has been excluded from account in assessing the land revenue, the amount of owner's rate or water advantage rate, or other rate imposed in respect of such improvement.

(b) in the case of any house or building, the gross annual rent at which such house or building, together with its appurtenances and any furniture that may be let for use or enjoyment therewith, may reasonably be expected to let from year to year, subject to the following deductions : —

(i) such deduction, not exceeding 20 per cent. of the gross annual rent, as the Cantonment authority in each particular case may consider a reasonable allowance on account of the furniture let therewith ;

(ii) a deduction of 10 per cent. for the cost of repairs and for all other expenses necessary to maintain the building in a state to command such gross annual rent. The deduction under this sub-clause shall be calculated on the balance of the gross annual rent after the deduction (if any) under sub-clause (i) ;

(iii) where land is let with a building, such deduction, not exceeding 20 per cent. of the gross annual rent, as the Cantonment authority in each particular case may consider reasonable on account of the actual expenditure, if any, annually incurred by the owner on the upkeep of the land in a state to command such gross annual rent.

Explanation (i).—For the purposes of this clause it is immaterial whether the house or building, and the furniture and the land let for use or enjoyment therewith, are let by the same contract or by different contracts, and if by different contracts, whether such contracts are made simultaneously or at different times.

Explanation (ii).—The terms "gross annual rent" shall not include any tax payable by the owner in respect of which the owner and tenant have agreed that it shall be paid by the tenant.

(c) in the case of any house or building the gross annual rent of which cannot be determined under clause (b), 5 per cent., on the sum obtained by adding the estimated present cost of erecting the building, less such amount as the Cantonment authority may deem reasonable to be deducted on account of depreciation (if any) to the estimated market value of the site and any land attached to the house or building : Provided that—

(i) in the calculation of the annual value of any premises no account shall be taken of any machinery thereon ;

(ii) when a building is occupied by the owner under such exceptional circumstances as to render a valuation at 5 per cent. on the cost of erecting the building, less depreciation, excessive, a lower percentage may be taken.

Preparation of assessment list—Section 63.

2. The Cantonment authority shall cause an assessment list of all buildings and lands on which any tax is imposed to be prepared, containing—

(a) the name of the street or division in which the property is situated ;

(b) the designation of the property, either by name or by number, sufficient for identification ;

(c) the names of the owner and occupier, if known ;

(d) the annual value, area, or length of frontage on which the property is assessed ; and (e) the amount of the tax assessed thereon by the Cantonment authority.

Publication and completion of assessment list—Section 64.

3. When the assessment list has been completed, the Cantonment authority shall give public notice thereof, and of the place where the list or a copy thereof may be inspected, and every person claiming to be either owner or occupier of property included in the list, and any authorised agent of such person, shall be at liberty to inspect the list and to make extracts therefrom without charge.

Public notice of time fixed for revising assessment list—Section 65.

4. (1) The Cantonment authority shall at the time of the publication of such assessment list give public notice of a time, not less than one month thereafter, when it will proceed to revise the valuation and assessment ; and in all cases in which any property is for the first time assessed or the assessment thereof is increased, it shall also give notice thereof to the owner or occupier of the property.

(2) All objections to the valuation and assessment shall be made in writing before the time fixed in the notice, or orally or in writing at that time.

Settlement of list—Section 66.

5. (1) After the objections have been enquired into and the persons making them have been allowed an opportunity of being heard either in person or by authorized agent, as they may think fit, and the revision of the valuation and assessment has been completed, the amendments made in the list shall be authenticated by the signature by two members of the Cantonment Committee who shall at the same time certify that no valid objection has been made to the valuation and assessment contained in the list, except in the cases in which amendments have been entered therein ; and, subject to such amendments as may thereafter be duly made, the tax so assessed shall be deemed to be the tax for the year commencing on the first day of January or first day of April next ensuing, as the Cantonment authority may determine, or in the case of a tax then imposed for the first time for the period between the date on which the tax comes into force and such first day of January or April, as the case may be.

(2) The list when amended under this rule shall be deposited in the Cantonment office and shall there be open during office hours to all owners or occupiers of property comprised therein or the authorised agents of such persons, and a public notice that it is so open shall forthwith be published.

Further amendments of assessment list—Section 67.

6. (1) The Cantonment authority may at any time amend the list by inserting the name of any person whose name ought to have been or ought to be inserted, or by inserting any property which ought to have been or ought to be inserted, or by altering the assessment on any property which has been erroneously valued or assessed through fraud, accident or mistake whether on the part of the Cantonment authority or of the assessee, or in the case of a tax payable by the occupier by a change in the tenancy after giving notice to any person affected by the amendment, of a time, not less than one month from the date of service at which the amendment is to be made.

(2) Any person interested in any such amendment may tender his objection to the Cantonment authority in writing before the time fixed in the notice or orally or in writing at that time and shall be allowed an opportunity of being heard in support of the same in person, or by authorized agent, as he may think fit.

7. It shall be in the discretion of the Cantonment authority to prepare a new assessment list every year or to adopt the valuation and assessment contained in the list for any year, with such alterations as may in particular cases be deemed necessary, as the valuation and assessment for the year following, giving to persons affected by such alteration the same notice of the valuation and assessment as if a new assessment list had been prepared.

New list need not be prepared every year—Section 68.

8. No assessment and no charge or demand of any tax shall be impeached or affected by reason of any mistake in the name, residence, place of business, or occupation of any person liable to pay the tax or in the description of any property or thing liable to the tax or of any mistake in the amount of assessment or tax or by reason of any clerical error or other defect of form; and it shall be enough in any such tax on property or any assessment of value for the purpose of any such tax if the property taxed or assessed is so described as to be generally known; and it shall not be necessary to name the owner or occupier thereof.

Tax not invalid for defect of form—Section 69.

9. (1) Every person shall on the demand of an officer duly authorized by the Cantonment authority in this behalf furnish such information as may be necessary in order to ascertain whether such person is liable to pay any cantonment tax; and every hotel or lodging house keeper or secretary of a residential club shall also on demand made as aforesaid furnish a list of all persons residing in such hotel, lodging house or club.

Duty of furnishing true information regarding liability to Cantonment taxation—Section 73.

(2) If any person so called upon to furnish such information omits to do so or furnishes information which is untrue, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one fifty rupees.

10. Any tax payable periodically shall be payable on such dates and in such instalments (if any) as the Cantonment authority, with the previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner, may from time to time direct.

Taxes when payable - Section 79.

11. (1) When any sum is due on account of a tax payable in respect of any property by the owner thereof, the Cantonment authority shall cause a bill for the amount, stating the property and the period for which the charge is made, to be delivered to the person liable to pay the same.

Recovery of taxes payable by owner—Section 80

(2) If the bill be not paid within ten days from the delivery thereof, the Cantonment authority may cause a notice of demand to be served on the person liable to pay the same and, if he do not within seven days from the service of the notice pay the sum due, with any fee leviable for the notice, or show sufficient cause for non-payment, the sum due, with the fee, shall be deemed to be an arrear of tax.

(3) The amount of every such arrear, besides being recoverable in any other manner provided by these rules, shall, subject to any claim on behalf of His Majesty, be a first charge on the property in respect of which it is payable, and shall be recoverable on application made in this behalf by the Cantonment authority to the Collector, as if the property were an estate assessed to land revenue and the arrear were an arrear of such revenue due thereon:

Provided that nothing in this rule shall authorize the arrest of a defaulter.

(4) If any tax or sum leviable under these rules from the owner is recovered from the occupier, such occupier shall, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, be entitled to recover the same from the owner, and may deduct the same from the rent then or thereafter due by him to the owner.

12. Any arrears of any tax, water rate or fee or any other money claimable by the Cantonment authority under these rules may be recovered on application to a Magistrate having jurisdiction within the limits of the Cantonment or in any other place where the person from whom the money is claimable may for the time being be resident by the distress and sale of any moveable property within the limits of his jurisdiction belonging to such person.

Recovery of taxes, etc.—Section 81

13. (1) An appeal against the assessment or levy of any, or against the refusal to refund any, tax under these rules shall lie to the Deputy Commissioner, or to such other officer as may be empowered by the Chief Commissioner in this behalf.

Appeals against taxation.—Section 84.

(2) If, on the hearing of an appeal under this rule, any question as to the liability to, or the principle of assessment of, a tax arises on which the officer hearing the appeal entertains reasonable doubt, he may, either of his own motion or on the application of any person interested, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer the statement, with his own opinion on the point, for the decision of the Chief Court.

(3) On a reference being made under this rule, the subsequent proceedings in this case shall be, as nearly as may be, in conformity with the rules relating to references to the High Court contained in Section 113 and Order XLVI of the Code of Civil Procedure.

(4) In every appeal the cost shall be in the discretion of the officer deciding the appeal.

(5) Costs awarded under this rule to the Cantonment authority shall be recoverable by the Cantonment authority as though they were arrears of a tax due from the appellant.

(6) If the Cantonment authority fail to pay any costs awarded to an appellant within ten days after the date of the order for payment thereof, the officer awarding the costs may order the person having the custody of the balance of the Cantonment Fund to pay the amount.

Limitation of appeal—Section 85.

14. (1) No appeal shall lie in respect of a tax on any land or building unless it is preferred within one month after the publication of the notice prescribed by rule 5 (2) or rule 7, or after the date of any final order under rule 6, as the case may be, and no appeal shall lie in respect of any other tax unless it is preferred within one month from the time when the demand for the tax is made: Provided that an appeal may be admitted after the expiration of the period prescribed therefor by this rule if the appellant satisfies the officer before whom the appeal is preferred that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within that period.

(2) No appeal shall be entertained unless the appellant has paid all other taxes due from him to the Cantonment authority up to the date of such appeal.

Taxation not to be questioned except under these rules—Section 86.

15. (1) No objection shall be taken to any valuation or assessment nor shall the liability of any person to be assessed or taxed be questioned, in any other manner or by any other authority than is provided in these rules.

(2) No refund of any tax shall be claimable by any person otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of these rules.

2337-W., dated the 29th April 1916, the following Order in Council is published for general information :—

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE,

PRESENT,

THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS by an Order in Council, dated the 20th day of August, 1914, His Majesty was pleased to declare that during the present hostilities the provisions of the Declaration of London should, subject to certain additions and modifications therein specified, be adopted and put in force by His Majesty's Government :

And whereas the said Declaration was adopted as aforementioned in common with His Majesty's Allies :

And whereas it has been necessary for His Majesty and for His Allies from time to time to issue further enactments modifying the application of the articles of the said Declaration :

And whereas Orders in Council for this purpose have been issued by His Majesty on the 29th day of October, 1914, the 20th day of October, 1915, and the 30th day of March 1916 :

And whereas the issue of these successive Orders in Council may have given rise to some doubt as to the intention of His Majesty, as also as to that of His Allies, to act in strict accordance with the law of nations, and it is therefore expedient to withdraw the said Orders so far as they are now in force :

NOW, THEREFORE, His Majesty, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the Declaration of London Order in Council No. 2, 1914, and all Orders subsequent thereto amending the said Order are hereby withdrawn ;

And His Majesty is pleased further to declare, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, and it is hereby declared, that it is and always has been His intention, as it is and has been that of His Allies, to exercise their belligerent rights at sea in strict accordance with the law of nations ;

And whereas on account of the changed conditions of commerce and the diversity of practice doubts might arise in certain matters as to the rules which His Majesty and His Allies regard as being in conformity with the law of nations, and it is expedient to deal with such matters specifically ;

It is hereby ordered that the following provisions shall be observed :—

(a) The hostile destination required for the condemnation of contraband articles shall be presumed to exist, until the contrary is shown, if the goods are consigned to or for an enemy authority, or an agent of the enemy State, or to or for a person in territory belonging to or occupied by the enemy, or to or for a person who, during the present hostilities, has forwarded contraband goods to an enemy authority, or an agent of the enemy State, or to or for a person in territory belonging to or occupied by the enemy, or if the goods are consigned "to order," or if the ship's papers do not show who is the real consignee of the goods.

(b) The principle of continuous voyage or ultimate destination shall be applicable both in cases of contraband and of blockade.

(c) A neutral vessel carrying contraband with papers indicating a neutral destination, which, notwithstanding the destination shown on the papers, proceeds to an enemy port, shall be liable to capture and condemnation if she is encountered before the end of her next voyage.

(d) A vessel carrying contraband shall be liable to capture and condemnation if the contraband, reckoned either by value, weight, volume, or freight forms more than half the cargo.

And it is hereby further ordered as follows :—

(i) Nothing herein shall be deemed to affect the Order in Council of the 11th March, 1915, for restricting further the commerce of the enemy or any of His Majesty's Proclamations declaring articles to be contraband of war during the present hostilities.

(ii) Nothing herein shall affect the validity of anything done under the Orders in Council hereby withdrawn.

Supplement dated the 20th June 1916, to the "London Gazette" of the 20th June 1916, pages 6127 to 6133.

War Office,

20th June 1916.

The following despatch has been received by the Secretary of State for War from Lieutenant-General The Hon. J. C. Smuts, Commander-in-Chief, East African Force:—

General Headquarters,

East Africa,

30th April 1916.

MY LORD,—

In accordance with your instructions, I assumed command of His Majesty's Forces in East Africa on the 12th February, and sailed from South Africa on that day.

I arrived at Mombasa on the 19th of February, and was met there by Major-General Tighe, who explained to me fully the situation in East Africa and the steps he had taken to push forward all preparations for an operation in the Kilimanjaro area before the rains. I decided to visit immediately the two proposed lines of advance by Mbuyuni and Longido, and to make a personal reconnaissance in company with General Tighe.

As a result of this reconnaissance I cabled your Lordship on arrival at my General Headquarters in Nairobi on 23rd February that I was prepared to carry out the occupation of the Kilimanjaro area before the rainy season, and received your sanction on 25th February.

2. It will, I think, assist a clear understanding of this despatch if I here briefly recapitulate the outstanding features of the military situation in East Africa, and also the steps recently taken by General Tighe towards the development of the advance into German territory which was made possible by the arrival of the reinforcements from South Africa.

At the commencement of 1916 the German forces in German East Africa were estimated at some 16,000 men, of whom 2,000 were white, with 60 guns and 80 machine guns. They were organised in companies varying from 150 to 200 strong, with 10 per cent. of whites and an average of two machine guns per company.

The enemy occupied a considerable tract of British territory. At Taveta they had established a large entrenched camp, with an advanced position at Salaita (El Oldorobo), an entrenched camp at Serengeti, and an outpost at Mbuyuni, the latter places thirteen and seventeen miles respectively east of Taveta. At Kasigau they maintained a garrison of 500-600 rifles with the object of delaying our concentration by blowing up the Uganda railway and the Voi-Maktau railway. Their numerous attempts to accomplish this end were uniformly futile. In the coastal area they maintained a considerable garrison on the Umba River, and actively patrolled thence to the vicinity of the Uganda railway, Mwele Mdogo and Gazi. At numerous points throughout the 600 miles of land frontier the opposing troops were in touch, and the result was that General Tighe had to disseminate widely his small force, and was unable to keep any large reserve in hand to meet a sudden call. In spite of the fact that he had to be constantly on the watch for the next move of his active and enterprising foe, General Tighe kept steadily before him the necessity of doing all in his power to prepare the way for the eventual offensive movement. With this end in view he organised such of his infantry as could be spared for active operations into the 1st and 2nd East African Brigades, acting on the Taveta and Longido lines, respectively, and proceeded to develop the organisation of the whole force into two divisions and line of communication troops.

3. On the 15th January the 1st Division, under Major-General Stewart, was ordered to occupy Longido and to develop the lines of communication between that place and Kajiado, on the Magadi railway. On the 22nd January the 2nd Division, under Brigadier-General Malleson, advanced from Maktau to Mbuyuni, meeting with slight opposition, and on the 24th occupied Serengeti camp. This advance had the immediate effect of making the enemy evacuate Kasigau. The railway was advanced from Maktau to Njoro drift, three miles east of Salaita, and arrangements made for the concentration of a large force at and near Mbuyuni. The greatest difficulty in the way of this concentration was the lack of water, the Serengeti plains being by nature a waterless desert. A 2½ inch pipe was laid from Bura, but this did not suffice, over 100,000 gallons being required daily, and the pipe yielding only 40,000. The balance had to be made good by railway and storage tanks. The whole of the watering arrangements were so carefully worked out that not a single hitch occurred when the main concentration eventually took place, in spite of the fact that an enemy raiding party succeeded in damaging the Bura headworks. For this great credit is due to Lieutenant-Colonel C. B. Collins, R.E., who was General Tighe's C.R.E.

I cannot speak too highly of all the preliminary work done by General Tighe in the direction of organisation and preparation for offensive measures. This left me free on arrival to devote my whole energies to active operations, and I take this opportunity of placing on record my appreciation of the fact that the success of those operations is in a large measure due to General Tighe's foresight and energy in paving the way for the expected reinforcements.

4. Early in February the 2nd South African Infantry Brigade arrived, and on the 12th of that month General Tighe directed the 2nd Division to make a reconnaissance in force of Salaita, and if possible to occupy that position. General Malleson carried out this operation with three battalions, 2nd South African Brigade, and three battalions, 1st East African Brigade, supported by 18 guns and howitzers. The Salaita position is one of considerable natural strength, and had been carefully entrenched. The enemy was found to be in force and counter-attacked vigorously. General Malleson was compelled to withdraw to Serengeti, but much useful information had been gained, and the South African Infantry had learned some invaluable lessons in bush fighting, and also had opportunity to estimate the fighting qualities of their enemy.

5. This brings the operations up to the date on which I arrived in East Africa, and decided, as mentioned above, that the occupation of the Kilimanjaro area before the rainy season was a feasible operation.

The original plan devised by General Tighe had been to occupy the Kilimanjaro area by making a converging advance from Longido and Mbuyuni with the 1st and 2nd Divisions respectively, with Kahe as the point towards which movement was to be directed. To this main plan I adhered, but I decided that some alteration of dispositions was necessary in order to avoid frontal attacks against entrenched positions of the enemy in the dense bush and to secure the rapidity of advance which appeared to me essential to the success of the operation in the short time at our disposal before the commencement of the rains, which might be expected towards the end of March.

Accordingly, I issued orders that the 1st South African Mounted Brigade under the command of Brigadier-General Van Deventer should be transferred from the 1st Division to Mbuyuni and act from there directly under my orders in a turning movement to the north of Taveta and Salaita. This transfer was carried out by rail most expeditiously, and by March 4th all minor concentrations were complete, the 3rd S.A. Brigade had arrived in the country, and my force was disposed as follows :—

1st Division (less 1st South African Mounted Brigade), Longido.

2nd Division (less detachments), Mbuyuni and Serengeti.

1st South African Mounted Brigade, Mbuyuni.

Army Artillery, Mbuyuni and Serengeti.

The 2nd South African Infantry Brigade, one field and one howitzer battery, were retained by me as Force Reserve.

6. The general outline of my plan has been explained to your Lordship in various telegrams, but I will recapitulate the main points here.

The task of the 1st Division was to cross the 35 miles of waterless bush which lay between Longido and the Engare Nanjuki River, occupy the latter, and then advance between Meru and Kilimanjaro to Boma Jangombe. My intention was thereafter to direct this division on Kahe, and cut the enemy's line of communication by the Usambara railway.

The task of the 1st South African Mounted Brigade and of the 2nd Division was to advance through the gap between Kilimanjaro and the Pare Hills against the enemy's main force, which was reported to be concentrated in the neighbourhood of Taveta, with strong detachments at the head of Lake Jipe, in the bush east of the river Lumi and at Salaita. The total force with which the enemy could oppose our advance into the Kilimanjaro area was estimated at 6,000 rifles, with 37 machine guns and 16 guns.

7. The manner in which I proposed to initiate the operation was as follows :—

(a) 1st Division to commence its forward movement on the 5th March and be allowed two clear days' start before the advance against Taveta should begin.

(b) 1st South African Mounted Brigade and 3rd South African Infantry Brigade, both under command of General Van Deventer, to leave Mbuyuni and Serengeti on the evening of the 7th March, and make a night march to the river Lumi east of Lake Chala. On the 8th to seize the high ground round Lake Chala and develop a turning movement by the west against Taveta. The object of this turning movement was partly to surprise the enemy and partly to avoid a frontal attack through the thick bush which lay between Salaita and Taveta.

(c) 2nd Division to advance against Salaita Hill on the morning of the 8th March, entrench a line facing the hill, and make preparations for an attack, supported by the Army Artillery.

(d) Force Reserve to follow General Van Deventer's column during the night of the 7th-8th March and take up a central position astride the Lumi, whence it could be used to reinforce either Van Deventer or the 2nd Division, as required.

It will be readily seen that these movements demanded the greatest energy and decision on the part of the commanders concerned. In order to be in close touch with the main operations round Taveta I decided to accompany the Force Reserve to the Lumi, leaving part of my General Staff at Mbuyuni to control operations elsewhere.

The initial movements were carried out successfully and with very slight opposition on the part of the enemy, who was undoubtedly taken by surprise. The 1st Division succeeded in crossing the waterless belt safely, and by the afternoon of the 6th March had its advanced troops established on the small hill Nagasseni just east of the river Engare Nanjuki. By 2 P. M. on the 7th the whole division was concentrated at this point, and on the 8th moved to Geraragua.

8. On the evening of the 7th March General Van Deventer's column started on its march across the Serengeti plains for Chala. The 1st South African Mounted Brigade from Mbuyuni and the 3rd South African Infantry Brigade from Serengeti Camp. The Force Reserve under General Beves followed in rear of the 3rd South African Infantry Brigade.

At 6 a. m. on the 8th March the 1st South African Mounted Brigade reached the Lumi River near the southern end of the Ziwani swamp, and the 3rd South African Infantry Brigade simultaneously arrived on the river east of Lake Chala. General Van Deventer at once proceeded to make good the high ground lying between Lake Chala and Rombo Mission. He then made a converging movement on the Chala position from the east and north-west, sending the brigade scouts to threaten the enemy's line of retreat to the south. Chala was only lightly held by the enemy, and these dispositions soon caused him to withdraw on Taveta. General Van Deventer occupied Chala and pursued towards Taveta, a portion of which position was occupied by the 2nd South African Horse. As, however, the enemy in Taveta were in considerable strength, General Van Deventer considered it wise to concentrate on the Chala position before dark.

Meanwhile the 3rd South African Infantry Brigade and the Force Reserve halted astride the Lumi to guard the crossing. During the afternoon an enemy force estimated at from 300 to 500, which had been cut off from the main body by our unexpected movement to Chala, advanced from the north along the line of the river in thick bush, and made more than one attack on the outposts of the infantry in bivouacs. These attacks were easily repulsed with loss to the enemy, but also caused most of the losses we sustained that day.

While the bulk of my forces were engaged in making good the Chala position and the Lumi crossing, the 2nd Division, under Major-General Tighe, carried out, on the 8th March, an artillery bombardment of Salaita, and the infantry of the 1st East African Brigade advanced and dug themselves in, in readiness for an attack on the 9th.

9. At dawn on the 9th General Van Deventer sent his mounted troops to get astride the Moschi road west of Taveta, which place the enemy evacuated in the course of the day. He also sent the 12th South African Infantry to made good Ndui Ya Waronbo Hill and the Lumi bridge east of Taveta The 2nd Division continued to bombard Salaita, and at 2 p. m. the infantry advanced to the attack, only to find that the bombardment, coupled with the turning movement via Chala, had compelled the enemy to evacuate, just in time to avoid two squadrons of the 4th South African Horse sent to intercept their retreat.

10. Early on the 10th a regiment of South African Horse despatched from Chala to make good Taveta were able to seize the position before a large body of the enemy, who had obviously been sent back to reoccupy it. After a brief fight the enemy withdrew towards the Latema-Reata nek, hotly pursued by mounted troops and field artillery. The enemy fought a stubborn rearguard action, and eventually was left in position on the nek.

On the same date the 2nd Division advanced to Taveta, detaching garrisons at Serengeti and Salaita. The Lumi crossing was found impassable for motor lorries and heavy guns and the bulk of the transport did not cross until the bridge had been improved about mid-day on the 11th.

11. On the morning of the 11th General Van Deventer on the right advanced via Spitze Hill and Kile on Mamba Mission and the line of the Himo. In the centre the 4th South African Horse, supported by the 12th South African Infantry, made good East Kitowa Hill after a brisk skirmish. On the left the mounted troops of the 2nd Division reconnoitred the Latema-Reata nek, which was found to be held in some strength. The Force Reserve was ordered to move from Chala to Taveta.

It was now clear that the enemy had withdrawn from Taveta in two directions, along the Taveta-Moschi road towards the west and along the Taveta-Kahe road between Reata and Latema Hills towards the south-west, but the exact line of retirement of his main forces was uncertain. The 4th South African Horse were in touch with what appeared to be merely a rearguard on the Moschi road, and an enemy force of unknown strength was in position on the Latema-Reata nek. It was essential to determine whether this was only a covering force, or whether the enemy was in such strength as to threaten a counter-attack towards Taveta. In either case it was necessary to drive him from the nek before I could advance beyond Taveta.

The 2nd Division had in Taveta only three weak battalions of the 1st East African Brigade, eight 12-pr. guns and a howitzer battery. With these I determined to clear up the situation and, if possible, make good the nek.

12. This operation was entrusted to Brigadier-General Malleson, commanding the 1st East African Brigade, who had at his disposal :—

Belfield's Scouts.

Mounted Infantry Company.

Nos. 6 and 8 Field Batteries.

No. 134 Howitzer Battery.

2nd Rhodesian Regiment.

130th Baluchis.

3rd King's African Rifles.

Machine Gun Battery, Loyal North Lancs.

Volunteer Machine Gun Company.

General Malleson selected as his objective the spur of Latema, which commands the nek from the north, and at 11-45 a. m. advanced to the attack. The 130th Baluchis on the right and 3rd K.A.R. on the left formed the firing line, 2nd Rhodesian Regiment the general reserve. The mounted troops watched both flanks, and the artillery supported the attack at a range of about 3,500 yards.

As they approached the bush-clad slopes of Latema the firing line came under a heavy rifle and machine gun fire. The enemy also had at least two guns and several pom-poms in action, and our infantry could make little headway.

13. At 4 p. m. the Force Reserve began to arrive in Taveta, and I reinforced the 2nd Division with the 5th South African Battalion. At the same time General Malleson, who was seriously indisposed, asked to be relieved of his command, and I directed General Tighe to assume command of the operation personally.

On the arrival of the 5th South African Infantry, General Tighe ordered the Rhodesians to advance, and to carry the King's African Rifles forward with them in an assault on the Latema ridge, the 130th Baluchis co-operating vigorously on the right. All ground gained was to be at once made good. The 9th Field Battery and 5th South African Field Battery, as they arrived in Taveta, were brought into action in support of the attack. This assault was gallantly pressed home, especially by the Rhodesians, but failed to make good the ridge. The 3rd K.A.R., who had been hotly engaged since the outset, had the misfortune to lose their gallant leader, Lieutenant-Colonel B. R. Graham, and several other officers. General Tighe found it necessary to support the Baluchis with half the 5th South African Infantry, and I further reinforced the 2nd Division with the 7th South African Infantry.

14. This latter battalion reached General Tighe about 8 p. m., and shortly afterwards he decided that the best chance of quickly dislodging the enemy from their position on the nek was to send in the two South African Battalions with the bayonet by night. This operation was no doubt fraught with considerable risk as there was no opportunity of adequately reconnoitring the ground over which the attack must be made, nor was it by any means certain that the enemy was not present in large numbers. On the other hand the moon was in the first quarter, and so facilitated movement up to midnight ; the bush along the line of the road to the nek did not appear to be very dense ; and, moreover, the volume of fire developed by the enemy did not seem to indicate that he had a large force actually in his first line, though he had, as usual, a large proportion of machine guns in action.

15. The night advance of the two South African Battalions was ably organised and gallantly led by Lieutenant-Colonel Byron, Commanding 5th South African Infantry. The 7th South African Infantry formed the 1st line, with the 5th in support. They advanced with great dash through the bush, which proved to be much thicker than was anticipated, driving the enemy before them till the latter was on the crest, where he checked our advance. A certain amount of disintegration was inevitable in a night advance through the dense thorn bush in the face of stubborn opposition. Groups of men and individuals who got separated from their leaders had no course but to fall back to the position where the 1st East African Brigade was formed up in general reserve, about 1,500 yards east of the nek. Colonel Byron had issued instructions that, on reaching the crest, Lieutenant-Colonel Freeth, commanding the 7th South African Infantry, and Major Thompson of the same battalion, should wheel outwards and make good the heights north and south of the nek respectively, while Colonel Byron himself secured the actual nek. These two gallant officers most ably carried out their task. Colonel Freeth fought his way up the steep spurs of Latema till he found that the party with him had dwindled to 18 men. He was joined by a few of the Rhodesians and King's African Rifles, who had clung on to the crest of the ridge after the assault in the evening, and the small party held on till daylight. Major Thompson wheeled towards Reata with 170 men and dug himself in in an advantageous position. About midnight Colonel Byron reached the nek within 30 yards of the enemy's main position. The opposition here was very stubborn. At one point Major Mainprise, R. E., Brigade Major, and 22 men were killed by the concentrated fire of three machine guns, and Colonel Byron, who was himself slightly wounded, reached the nek with only 20 men. The enemy was still in a position which commanded the ground he had won, and, finding it impossible either to advance or to hold his ground, he was reluctantly compelled to withdraw.

16. Meanwhile General Tighe found it extremely difficult to keep touch with the progress of the fight, of which he could only judge by the firing and the reports of officers and others sent back from the ridge, who naturally were only cognisant of events in their own immediate vicinity. About 1 a. m. several requests for reinforcements reached him, and he ordered forward the 130th Baluchis. These advanced at 1-20 a. m., and shortly met Colonel Byron, who reported that he had ordered his small party to retire. General Tighe accordingly re formed his force and dug in astride the road to await daylight. Attempts to gain touch with Colonel Freeth and Major Thompson failed.

Judging by General Tighe's reports, I considered that it was inadvisable to press the direct attack on the Latema-Reata nek further, and preferred to await the effect of the turning movement of the mounted troops, which was ordered for the next morning, and calculated to cause a speedy withdrawal of the enemy from this position. I accordingly, at 4-30 a. m., directed General Tighe to withdraw his whole force before daybreak to a line further back from the nek. This withdrawal was in progress when patrols sent to gain touch with the flank detachments on Reata and Latema found the latter in occupation of both hills and the enemy in full retreat from the nek. I once at despatched the 8th South African Infantry to make good the ridge, and some artillery to shell the retiring enemy, who was now estimated to be between 1,500 and 2,000 in number. Effective pursuit through the dense tropical forest which stretched from Kitowo to Kahe was out of the question.

17. Our casualties in the engagement were about 270, which cannot be considered excessive in view of the important results gained. We captured, besides rifles and ammunition, a 6 cm. gun and three machine guns. Some 40 to 50 enemy dead were found on the position, and, as they are always most careful to remove their dead and wounded, there can be no doubt that their casualties were severe. While this action was in progress on the Taveta-Kahe road, the 4th South African Horse and 12th South African Infantry kept up a brisk engagement with the enemy on the Taveta-Moschi road, where the enemy was found to be in strong force on the northern slopes of Latema and on North Kitovo Hill. At one point 20 of the enemy dead were found after the engagement.

18. With the end of this action the first phase of the battle for Kilimanjaro came to a conclusion. On the 12th March General Van Deventer continued his advance up to Mamba Mission and the Himo Bridge on the Taveta-Moschi road, in the face of slight opposition. The enemy in his retirement during the night and the early morning had destroyed all bridges on the road, and great difficulty was experienced in rationing Van Deventer's force. On the 13th he advanced and occupied Moschi unopposed, the enemy having withdrawn the previous night towards Kahe. The 2nd and 3rd South African Brigades were thereupon concentrated at the Himo Bridge, the remainder of the 2nd Division at Taveta.

19. It is necessary now to refer to the movements of the 1st Division, which had arrived at Geraragua on the 8th, having encountered only slight opposition. On the 9th General Stewart halted to reconnoitre and let his supplies catch up The direct road from Geraragua to Boma-Ja-Ngombe was reported impassable for wheels, all bridges having been destroyed by the enemy. As a result of this and of the exhausted state of his ox transport, General Stewart considered it necessary to halt on the morning of the 10th, and reconnoitre for a road further to the west. A difficult but passable track was found, and the march was resumed at mid-day. The mounted troops left Geraragua at 16 hours on the 10th, on which date they encountered some opposition, sustaining 13 casualties. The Division and the mounted troops eventually joined hands on the Sanja River on the night of the 12th-13th, and on the 13th advanced to Boma-Ja-Ngombe. On the 14th, when the main force of the enemy had already retired to the Ruwu and Kahe positions, the 1st Division joined hands with General Van Deventer in New Moschi, through which place the six companies of the enemy who had been opposing General Stewart had already passed on the night of the 12th March, as previously stated.

20. The next few days, from the 13th to the 18th March, were spent in improving the road from Taveta to Moschi, reorganising transport, bringing up supplies, etc., and in reconnoitring towards Kahe and the Ruwu River. The whole of the country bordering that river on the north is dense tropical forest, and the enemy took advantage of this to display some boldness in firing into our camps by night.

On the night of the 17th-18th Belfield's Scouts were sent from Himo bridge to occupy Unterer Himo, and at dawn were driven off by a superior force of the enemy. A position on the Ruwu river appeared to me from patrols, intelligence reports and somewhat incomplete air reconnaissance, to be the next which the enemy might hold, and it was of vital importance for purposes of railway extension and future advance that the enemy should be driven south of this river before the rains commenced.

I therefore, on the 18th, issued orders for a general advance towards the Ruwu. On the extreme right the East African Mounted Rifles and a squadron of the 17th Cavalry advanced from Mue viâ Masai Kraal. The 3rd South African Brigade moved from Himo bridge on Euphorbien Hill, and the 2nd South African Brigade from the same point on Unterer Himo, to which place the 1st East African Brigade of the 2nd Division sent forward two battalions from Latema. The advance was supported by field and mountain artillery. The infantry occupied the line Euphorbien Hill-Unterer Himo without difficulty, while the East African Mounted Rifles encountered three enemy companies at Masai Kraal. During the day I ordered the 2nd East African Brigade of the 1st Division from New Moschi to Mue to support the mounted troops on the Kahe road.

21. On the 19th the general advance continued, but the 1st East African, 2nd and 3rd South African Brigades could make little progress through the well-nigh impenetrable bush which surrounded the enemy's position on the Himo about Rasthaus. The 3rd Brigade, ably supported by the 28th Mountain Battery, had a sharp engagement with the enemy at dusk while occupying its line for the night, and sustained 30-40 casualties. The fresh graves of twenty-seven of the enemy's askaris were afterwards found in the vicinity of the action. The 2nd East African Brigade and the mounted troops of the 1st Division under General Sheppard pushed the enemy back to Store, four miles south of Masai Kraal, and bivouacked there for the night. On the 20th I withdrew the 2nd South African Brigade from Unterer Himo, and sent three battalions to reinforce General Sheppard on the Mue-Kahe Road, where I anticipated the strongest opposition. At 2 P.M. on the 20th General Van Deventer, with the 1st South African Mounted Brigade, the 11th South African Horse, and two field batteries, left Moschi with instructions to cross the Pangani, and get in rear of the enemy's position at Kahe Station. That night General Sheppard's camp at Store was heavily attacked from 9-30 P.M. to midnight. These attacks were repulsed with loss to the enemy. The enemy force actually engaged was estimated by prisoners at 500 men, with another 500 in reserve. Their casualties were estimated at 70—100, ours were 20.

22. At daylight on the 21st Van Deventer was approaching the Pangani from the west at a point south-west of Kahe Hill. He experienced some difficulty in crossing the river, but by midday had occupied in succession Kahe Hill, Bauman Hill and Kahe Station with slight opposition. The enemy had already earlier in the day blown up the main railway bridge over the Ruwu (or Pangani).

After the loss of Kahe Hill the enemy realised its importance as the key to the Ruwu position, and made several determined attempts to recover it, which were, however, beaten back with loss. A mounted party which moved forward from Kahe Hill to cut off the retreat of the enemy by the wagon road south of the Ruwu found the enemy in force, and had to retire. Van Deventer therefore waited for the following day to develop the turning movement, after his whole brigade should have been brought across the Pangani. During the whole day the enemy had two 4·1-inch naval guns in action, one on a railway truck and the other from a concealed fixed position south of the Ruwu.

23. On the 21st General Sheppard had the following troops under his command :—

2nd East African Brigade.

25th Battalion, Royal Fusiliers.

29th Punjabis.

129th Baluchis.

2nd South African Brigade.

5th South African Battalion.

6th South African Battalion.

8th South African Battalion.

Divisional Troops.

East African Mounted Rifles.

1 Squadron, 17th Cavalry.

1st and 3rd South African Field Artillery Batteries.
27th Mountain Battery.
No. 12 Howitzer Battery.
1st King's African Rifles.
2 Royal Naval Armoured Cars.

As soon as I heard that General Van Deventer was nearing Kahe I ordered General Sheppard to advance. This he did at 11-30 A.M., with the 2nd South African Brigade on his right, and the 2nd East African Brigade on his left, the dividing line being the Masai Kraal-Kahe road. By 12-30 P.M. the enemy had been driven back on to his main position on the south edge of a clearing in the dense bush, with his east and west flanks protected respectively by the Soko Nassai and the Defu Rivers, both of which were considerable obstacles to the movements of infantry. General Sheppard's intention was to attack the enemy frontally, and, with or without the aid of the 3rd South African Brigade, to envelop his right (eastern) flank. Unfortunately the advance of the 3rd Brigade from Euphorbien Hill was so impeded by the dense bush that it was unable to exercise any influence on the fight, and without its aid the task proved to be beyond the powers of the force at General Sheppard's disposal. His infantry tried to cross the clearing, which varied in width from 600 to 1,200 yards, but the enemy's dispositions were so skilfully made that these attempts were met and repulsed by rifle and machine-gun fire, both from front and flank. Two double companies of the 129th Baluchis crossed the Soko Nassai, and endeavoured to turn the enemy's right, but here, too, they were held up. Our guns were well handled, the 27th Mountain Battery being in action in the actual firing line, but definite targets were difficult to obtain owing to the density of the bush. The whole force, in fact, was ably handled by General Sheppard, and the men fought like heroes, but they were unable to turn the enemy from his strong position. General Sheppard did not know that Van Deventer was already at Kahe Station, some miles in advance of his right flank, and no contact could be established through the intervening thick bush. He accordingly gave orders to dig in on the ground won, with a view to renewing the attack on the 22nd. At dawn on the 22nd patrols found the enemy gone. He had waited only for the cover of night to retire across the Ruwu River and proceed down the main road towards Lembeni, abondoning his stationary 4·1-inch gun, which had been blown up.

Our casualties at the Soko Nassai action were 288. It is not easy to estimate those of the enemy, but a large pile of used field dressings found south of the Ruwu told a significant tale. As far as can be ascertained, the enemy forces employed on the 22nd were 14 or 15 companies, distributed along the Himo and Ruwu from Rasthaus to Kahe.

Besides the two 4·1 inch naval guns, the enemy employed several field guns and pom-poms.

24. The result of these operations from the 18th to 21st March was to drive the enemy out of the country north of and along the Ruwu River. Aruscha had meanwhile been occupied by our mounted scouts, who drove off an enemy company in a southerly direction, and thus the conquest of the Kilimanjaro-Meru Area, probably the richest and most desirable district of German East Africa, was satisfactorily completed. I accordingly established my Headquarters at Moschi, placed a chain of outposts along the line of the Ruwu, and set to work to re-organise my force for the next move, meanwhile concentrating the troops as far as possible in healthy localities to give the men a rest after the hardships they had endured.

25. I am particularly indebted to the following officers for their services during the operations :—

Major-General M. J. Tighe, C.B., C.I.E., D.S.O., commanding the 2nd Division, loyally co-operated by carrying out my wishes in the spirit and the letter. He also commanded at the successful action at Latema nek. I have already mentioned his great services in paving the way for the offensive campaign.

Brigadier-General J. L. Van Deventer, commanding 1st South African Mounted Brigade, commanded throughout the operations an independent column, and executed the turning movements to which the rapidity of our success was undoubtedly due. He displayed soldierly qualities of a high order in controlling the mounted troops in their long night marches and manœuvres through unknown and extremely difficult country.

The Air Services performed valuable reconnaissance work throughout the operations, and on several occasions considerably demoralised the enemy by the use of bombs.

The Royal Artillery were ably handled by Brigadier-General J. H. V. Crowe, and on all occasions when they had an opportunity of preparing the way for and covering the infantry advance their support was most effective.

The Supply and Transport Services worked with great zeal, and the fact that no hitch occurred in the supply of units scattered over such a large area is evidence of the efficiency displayed by all executive ranks. Such roads as do exist are merely clearings through the bush and swamp, and these rapidly become well-nigh impassable for heavy lorries. The existing track had constantly to be improved, and deviations cut, causing endless delays, and the result was that transport drivers were frequently at work continuously night and day.

The rapidity of the advance, and the distance to which it was carried, must almost inevitably have caused a breakdown in the transport had it not been for the unremitting exertions of the railway engineers, who carried forward the railway from the Njoro drift east of Salaita, to Taveta and the Latema nek at an average rate of a mile a day, including surveying, heavy bush cutting and the bridging of the Lumi river. This fine performance is largely due to the ripe experience and organising power of Colonel Sir W. Johns, Kt., C.I.E.

Exceptionally heavy work, too, has been thrown upon the medical officers and personnel. All wounded have been treated and evacuated expeditiously, and the number of sick who passed daily through the hands of the medical authorities, more especially since the cessation of active operations, has been very great. Great credit is due to Surgeon-General G. D. Hunter, C.M.G., D.S.O., and his assistants.

The excellent manner in which communication has been maintained throughout reflects great credit on my Signal Service, the officers and men of which, under the able control of Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. Hawtrey, R.E., have spared no efforts in overcoming the many difficulties attendant on operating in such country and on such a large front.

The Officers of my Staff have throughout rendered me every possible assistance. I would especially mention Colonel (now Brigadier-General) J. J. Collyer, my chief of the General Staff, whose sound judgment, ability and tact made possible the harmonious working of a curiously heterogeneous force, and Brigadier-General R. H. Ewart, C.B., C.I.E., D.S.O., A.D.C., Administrative Staff, who has done everything possible to perfect and coordinate the working of the various administrative services on which an army operating in equatorial Africa is peculiary dependent.

Brigadier-General W. F. S. Edwards, D.S.O., my Inspector-General of Communications, rendered invaluable services, and the rapidity and smoothness with which the concentration of troops was carried out were very largely due to his energy and powers of organisation, while the manner in which he extended the lines of communication during the actual operations left nothing to be desired.

It is not easy for me to express my appreciation of the conduct of the troops during these operations. General and Staff Officers, Commanding, Regimental and Departmental Officers, rank and file and followers, British, South African, Indian and African, all have worked with zeal and single-minded devotion to duty that is beyond praise. Shortage of transport necessitated the force moving on light scale, and the majority of the troops had no more than a waterproof sheet and a blanket for three weeks on end. Rations at times unavoidably ran short. Long marches in the hot sun and occasional drenching rains were calculated to try the most hardened campaigner. Yet all these hardships were endured with unfailing cheerfulness, and a chance of dealing a blow at the enemy seemed to be the only recompense required.

A list of those officers, N.C.O.'s and men whom I desire to bring to your Lordship's special notice in connection with these operations will be forwarded at an early date.

I have the honour to be, my Lord,

Your Lordship's obedient servant,

J. C. SMUTS,

Lieutenant-General,

Commander-in-Chief, East African Force.

Third Supplement dated the 21st June 1916, to the "London Gazette" of the 20th June 1916 pages 6163 to 6159.

War Office,

21st June, 1916.

The following despatches have been received by the Secretary of State for War from General Sir John Maxwell, K.C.B., on military operations in the Egyptian Command :—

DESPATCH No. I.

From Lieut.-General Sir J. G. Maxwell, K.C.B., C.V.O., C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding the the Force in Egypt.

Army Headquarters, Cairo,

16th February, 1915.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward for the information of the Secretary of State for War the accompanying report from Major-General A. Wilson, C.B., Commanding the Suez Canal Defences, who has conducted the operations to my complete satisfaction. He has been ably assisted by Brigadier-General A. H. Bingley, C.I.E.

I fully endorse what General Wilson says of the conduct of the regimental officers and men, both British and Indian.

The French Hydroplane Squadron and the detachment Royal Flying Corps have rendered very valuable services. The former, equipped with hydroplanes with floats, ran great risks in undertaking land reconnaissance, whilst the latter were much handicapped by inferior types of machines. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, they furnished me regularly with all information regarding the movements of the enemy.

I take this opportunity of bringing to the notice of the Secretary of State for War the great services rendered by the Count de Serionne and the officials of the Suez Canal Company; they have one and all been most helpful, and have unreservedly placed their own personal services and the entire resources of the Suez Canal Company at my disposal. The success of our defence was greatly assisted by their cordial co-operation.

Also Sir George Macauley, K.C.M.G., Major Blakeney and Captain Hall of the Egyptian State Railways. In addition to building two excellent armoured trains, these officers worked most assiduously in organizing and superintending the railway arrangements, both along the Canal and in the transportation of reinforcements from Cairo. No difficulties of any sort were made, and such difficulties as existed were speedily overcome, and I cannot sufficiently express my obligation to them.

Also Major Liddell, late Royal Engineers, Director of Telegraphs under the Egyptian Government. This official was largely responsible for the excellent system of inter-communication which prevailed throughout the Canal Defences.

It is needless for me to add that from Admiral Peirse and the ships of His Majesty's Navy, as well as those of France under his command, most important and valuable assistance was received.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your obedient servant,

J. G. MAXWELL, Lieut.-General,

Commanding the Force in Egypt.

Headquarters, Canal Defences, to the General Staff, Headquarters, Cairo.

Ismailia,

11th February 1915.

SIR,—

I have the honour to submit the following report on the recent attack on the Suez Canal In order to make the narrative complete, I will preface it with a brief account of what has taken place since I took over command of the Canal Defences.

2. I landed at Suez on the 16th November, 1914, and went to Ismailia the same day, having been preceded ten days before by Brigadier-General A. H. Bingley, my Chief Staff Officer, who was sent from India in advance of the troops to make preliminary arrangements for their landing and despatch to destination. I there took over command of the Canal Defences from Colonel W. G. Walker, Commanding 9th Indian Brigade, which had been detached from the 3rd (Lahore) Division for temporary duty in Egypt.

3. In accordance with the instructions received from the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, the Canal Defences were organized in three sections, with headquarters at Suez, Ismailia Ferry, and Kantara, respectively, my own headquarters and the general reserve being placed at Ismailia, with the advanced base at Zagazig and base general hospital at Cairo.

These arrangements were completed by the 5th December, 1914, when the last units of the force arrived from India.

4. Preparations for defence.—The months of November, December and January were devoted to a systematic development of the naturally strong line of defence afforded by the Canal, thus completing the work which had been initiated previous to my arrival. A number of defensive posts were prepared on the east bank, to cover the more important ferries and provide facilities for local counter attacks. Trenches were dug on the west bank to cover the intervals between posts and frustrate attempts at crossing. Communications were improved by the construction of landing stages and removable pontoon bridges for use at important points. A flotilla of armed launches, manned by the Royal Navy, was organized for canal patrols. A complete system of telegraph, telephone, and wireless communication was installed, linking up all the posts with headquarters. A system of defence was established for the protection of the railway, the telegraph lines, and the sweet water canal. The detachment of the Royal Flying Corps was organized, staffed with observers, and equipped with accommodation for its planes.

5. The resources of the Suez Canal Company in tugs, launches, lighters, &c., were carefully examined, so as to utilise them for military purposes. Arrangements were made with the Railway Administration for the collecting of rolling stock at convenient places, in order to expedite the dispatch of reinforcements to threatened points. Provision was also made for the organization of the water-supply of the troops and the formation of supply depôts, as well as for the rapid collection and evacuation of the sick and wounded. A system of intelligence, censorship and police surveillance was established, and plans were devised, in consultation with the Canal Authorities, for the control of shipping in the event of an attack. Last, but not least, a scheme for making inundations, and so limiting the front over which the enemy could attack, was carried out successfully by the Irrigation Department at Port Said and the engineering staff of the Canal Company at El Cap, Kantara and Ballah.

6. During this period no active operations took place, except a Bedouin raid made by the enemy in the direction of Kantara. A patrol of the Bikanir Camel Corps under Captain A. J. H. Chope, 2nd Gurkha Rifles, consisting of one Indian officer and twenty other ranks, encountered a force of some 200 Bedouins and Turks on the 20th November, 1914, near Bir-el-Nuss, and in spite of the enemy's treacherous attack, due to the abuse of the white flag, extricated itself successfully from a somewhat difficult position. Our patrol, which lost one Indian officer and twelve other ranks killed and three sepoys wounded, inflicted some sixty casualties on the enemy. For their gallant conduct on this occasion, No. 1534 Sepoy Ali Khan was awarded the Indian Order of Merit, 2nd Class, and No. 115 Sepoy Faiz Ali Khan the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

7. General summary of events.—During the first fortnight in January little direct news of the enemy's advance was forthcoming, though reports of considerable preparations in Syria were constant, and information was received to the effect that advanced posts and depôts had been formed at Khan Yunis, El Arish, El Auja, and Kosseima. The country to the east of the Canal within the radius of our aeroplane reconnaissances remained clear of formed bodies of hostile troops, though frequently visited by Bedouin patrols which, in some cases, were accompanied by German officers in Arab dress.

About 15th January, however, it became clear that hostile forces of some strength had entered Sinai, and on the 20th the Canal Defence troops were reinforced from Cairo by the 1st and 3rd Brigades, R. F. A., East Lancashire Division, T. F., which proceeded at once to previously prepared positions.

8. On 18th January a hostile force of 8,000—10,000 was located near Bir-es-Saba by a French naval hydro-aeroplane, and on 22nd a Turkish force was reported to be at Moiya Harab, having arrived there from Gifgaffa. This was confirmed by aerial reconnaissance the next day, and about the same time reports of the presence of hostile troops at Ain Sadr were received, and our mounted troops obtained touch with hostile patrols near Bir-el-Duedar.

9. On the 22nd small detachments were told off from the reserves to hold lightly the trenches prepared along the west bank. On the 26th forces of some 2,000—3,000 men each were located at Bir Mabeuk, Moiya Harab, and Wadi Muksheib, and the enemy advanced and engaged our covering troops near Kantara, retiring at 3-30 P.M. On the same day two battalions 32nd Brigade (33rd Punjabis and 4th Gwalior Infantry) were sent to hold the trenches along the west bank from Bench Mark post to Ballah, while G.O.C.'s of sections reinforced the west bank trenches in their sections from local reserves. The New Zealand Infantry Brigade arrived from Cairo, the Otago and Wellington battalions proceeding to reinforce Kubri, while Headquarters and the Auckland and Canterbury battalions detrained at Ismailia. H.M.S. "Swiftsure," "Clio," "Ocean," and "Minerva" entered the Canal, taking station near Kantara, Ballah, El Shatt, and Shalouf respectively.

10. During the 27th and 28th the enemy was further reinforced, and established himself in an entrenched position about 5 miles east of Kantara, astride the El Arish road. On the morning of the 29th attacks on the Baluchistan and El Kubri posts in No. 1 Section were made at about 4 A.M. Both were beaten off without loss. On the morning of the 25th the outposts at Kantara were attacked, and the enemy was driven off with little difficulty. One battalion from the 1st Brigade (2nd Rajputs) was sent to reinforce Serapeum.

11. From the 29th-31st the enemy closed towards the Canal, the largest concentration appearing in the vicinity of Gebel Habeita. The 5th Battery, Egyptian Artillery, was sent to Tousoun.

12. On the 1st February an advance from the north-east towards the Ismailia Ferry post was detected, and that post, as well as Bench Mark post, was reinforced under the orders of the General Officer Commanding, No. 2 Section. On the 2nd February our advanced troops from Ismailia Ferry encountered the enemy at some distance from the post, and a desultory action ensued. This was broken off at 3-30 P.M., and the enemy then entrenched himself about 2½ miles south-east of our defences. In the course of the day considerable bodies of troops were also seen on the move in front of El Ferdan, Bench Mark, Toussoum and Serapeum. During the night of the 2nd-3rd some firing at El Kubri took place, but nothing further of note occurred in No. 1 Section.

13. At about 3-30 A.M. on the 3rd a determined attempt was made to effect a crossing some 2,000 yards south of Toussoum. The enemy brought up a number of pontoons and rafts, several of which they succeeded in launching, while two, if not more, actually crossed the Canal. This attack was covered by heavy rifle and machine-gun fire from the east bank. It was met by parties of the 62nd Punjabis under Major Skeen and Captain Morgan, as well as by fire from the 5th Battery, Egyptian Artillery. Several pontoons were sunk and all the men who crossed were disposed of, except twenty, who hid under the west bank and surrendered to the 2nd Rajputs next morning.

14. At daylight the enemy were found to have closed on the Toussoum post, and a counter-attack pushed forward from Serapeum encountered a large force about half a mile from camp. The enemy's attack was not pushed closer than three-quarters of a mile from our position, and they retired about 2 P.M. after shelling our positions intermittently up to that time. Seven officers and 280 men were taken prisoners opposite Toussoum during the course of the fight. A large number of the enemy's dead were found outside Toussoum post and along the east bank of the Canal.

15. At 4-30 P.M. two battalions 31st Brigade (27th Punjabis and 128th Pioneers) arrived at Serapeum, and Major-General A. Wallace, Commanding 11th Division, took over command of the Section from the Great Bitter Lake to Lake Timsah. During the morning H.M.S. "Hardinge" was struck by two 6-inch shells, her funnel being split and forward steering gear disabled. She moved into Lake Timsah, and later in the day to Kantara her place being taken by H.M.S. "Swiftsure." H.M.S. "Ocean" also moved up into this section of the defence. At Ismailia Ferry post the enemy were found at daylight to be entrenching some 700-800 yards from the defences, and two hostile batteries opened fire shortly afterwards. The infantry attack was not pushed home, and no casualties occurred, though many shells burst in the camp and in the vicinity of the town. Shipping detained in Lake Timsah was under fire and suffered slight damage, but no loss of life.

16. Circumstances were similar at El Ferdan, where a considerable number of shells were fired, chiefly at the Canal Gare and railway station, both of which were damaged. No casualties occurred.

17. At Kantara the outposts were attacked between 5 and 6 A.M., the enemy being driven off, leaving many killed and wounded and unwounded prisoners. Later in the day a partial attack from the south east was stopped some 1,200 yards from the position.

18. During the day H.M.S. "Swiftsure," "Clio," "Hardinge," and the French ships "Requin" and "D'Entrecasteaux" were engaged, as were also the torpedo boats and armed launches, all rendering valuable services. The bulk of the fighting fell to the 22nd and 29th Infantry Brigades, but the 28th as well as portions of the 31st, 32nd, and New Zealand Infantry Brigades, the Artillery and Engineers of the Lancashire Division, T.F., and No. 3 Field Company Australian Engineers, were also engaged. Very efficient service was rendered by the detachment Royal Flying Corps, several reconnaissances over the enemy's lines being undertaken during the day.

19. The enemy engaged at different points along the Canal on the 3rd appeared to number some 12,000 to 15,000 men in the aggregate, and six batteries, with at least one 6-inch gun, were located. It appears from accounts received from prisoners that the attacking force consisted of the VIIIth and portions of the IIIrd, IVth, and VIth Turkish Army Corps, and that Djemal Pasha was in chief command. The enemy's plan contemplated simultaneous attacks on Kantara, Ferdan, Ismailia, Shalouf, and Suez, coupled with the main effort to cross the Canal near Toussoum. At the first three of the above-mentioned places their efforts were only half-hearted, while at Shalouf and Suez no attacks materialised, though forces are known to have been in the vicinity of those places.

Headquarters, with the 7th and 8th Battalions, 2nd Brigade, 1st Australian Imperial Force, arrived at Ismailia during the evening of the 3rd February.

20. On the 4th February, as some firing had taken place from the east bank during the night, two companies of the 92nd Punjabis were sent out at 8 A.M. to clear that bank, and located a body of some 200 to 250 men still entrenched there. On the approach of this detachment the enemy made signs of surrender, but subsequently re-opened fire. Supports of one double company each of the 27th and 62nd Punjabis and 128th Pioneers were despatched under the command of Major Maclachlan, 92nd Punjabis, who concentrated his men, opened a heavy fire, and then charged. This time the enemy threw away their rifles and surrendered, six officers, 251 men, and three machine guns being captured; 59 men, including a German officer (Major von den Hagen), were found killed at this point.

21. The trenches in front of Ismailia and Kantara were found to have been deserted and the Imperial Service Cavalry Brigade, supported by infantry, moved out from the Ismailia Ferry post A large body of enemy, estimated at three to four brigades were encountered seven miles east of Toussoum, and another body some miles to the north. Twenty-five prisoners and ninety camels were captured. No other incident occurred along the front.

Reinforcements, consisting of the Herts Yeomanry, 2nd County of London Yeomanry (Westminster Dragoons), and one squadron Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry, arrived at Ismailia the same evening.

22. On the 5th instant our aeroplanes reported that the enemy were retiring towards Katia, while those who had been in front of No 2 Section appeared to have concentrated about Gebel Habeita. Mabeuik was still occupied, and a reconnaissance from No. 1 Section encountered some of the enemy's infantry near Gebel Murr during the day. There was no change during the 6th, the enemy being still in strength near Gebel Habeita. A reconnaissance by a mixed force, which had been contemplated this day, was cancelled owing to information gathered from prisoners to the effect that considerable reinforcements of the enemy were expected and might be at hand about this time. On the 7th, however, our aeroplanes found this camp deserted. Mabeuik was also found to have been vacated, and the nearest enemy on the northern line appeared at Bir-El-Abd. On the 9th the only enemy located were in camps at El Rigum, Wadi Muksheib, and Moiya Harab. On the 10th instant only some 400 men were left at Rigum camp, and these appeared to be moving eastwards.

23. The actions at Toussoum and Kantara.—I will now supplement the general summary of events given in the foregoing paragraphs with a more detailed account of the fighting that took place at Toussoum on 3rd February, and at Kantara on 28th January and 3rd February.

24. The troops in the Toussoum—Serapeum—Deversoir portion of No. 2 Section on the morning of 3rd February were as follows :—

The 19th Lancashire Battery, R.F A, T.F. (four guns), commanded by Major B. Palin Dobson.

The 5th Battery, Egyptian Artillery (four mountain guns and two maxims), commanded by Major I. D'E. Roberts, R.A.

1st Field Company, East Lancashire Royal Engineers, T.F. (two sections), under Captain J. G. Riddick.

Canterbury Battalion New Zealand Infantry (two platoons), under Major C. B. Brereton.

2nd Queen Victoria's Own Rajputs, under Lieut.-Colonel F. P. S. Dunsford.

62nd Punjabis, under Lieut.-Colonel E. W. Grimshaw.

92nd Punjabis, under Major T. R. Maclachlan.

2/10th Gurkha Rifles, under Lieut.-Colonel F. G. H. Sutton.

137th Field Ambulance, under Major R. W. Knox, I.M.S.

25. These troops were disposed as follows :—

(a) On the east bank, in the posts of Toussoum, Serapeum, and Deversoir, a half battalion in each, furnished by the 92nd, 62nd, and 2/10th Gurkha Rifles, respectively.

(b) On the west bank, from the entrance to Lake Timsah, to Deversoir inclusive, 12 posts, each held by two platoons. Each platoon was allotted some 600 yards of front and found three sentry groups, about 200 yards apart.

(c) In reserve at Serapeum, three double companies.

26. At about 3-25 A.M. on 3rd instant, the enemy were seen on the east bank near mile 47·4. As the firing was heavy, a double company of the 62nd Punjabis was sent from the reserve to support this point, and this double company was subsequently reinforced by six platoons of the 2nd Rajputs.

27. The enemy made three distinct attempts to cross the Canal at points between miles 47·4 and 48·4. One boatload of the enemy landed opposite mile 48·3, and were charged by a small party under Major O. St. J. Skeen, 62nd Punjabis. All were killed or wounded. Two more boatloads landed opposite mile 47·6, and these were promptly attacked by Captain M. H. L. Morgan, 62nd Punjabis, who was wounded. Six Turks were killed and four captured at this point, and some 20 who got away and hid themselves under the west bank were captured later by a party of the 2nd Rajputs.

28. At 8-40 A.M. Colonel S. Geoghegan, commanding 22nd Brigade, after a personal reconnaissance of the enemy's positions, sent a detachment consisting of four double companies drawn from the 2nd Rajputs and the 2/10th Gurkha Rifles to clear the east bank. As this counter-attack developed, the enemy fled in large numbers from the broken ground whence they had made their attempt to cross. Meanwhile the enemy, from their camp at Kateid El Khel, deployed a force estimated at two brigades with at least six guns, and formed a line about two miles north east of Serapeum, and facing that post. Our troops, delivering a counter-attack, now occupied a ridge about half a mile north-east of Serapeum, and formed a line facing the enemy with their left flank drawn back to the Canal. They consisted of two double companies 92nd Punjabis facing north-east, two platoons 2nd Rajputs facing north, with six platoons 2-10th Gurkha Rifles in support. The whole was under command of Lieutenant-Colonel F. G. H. Sutton, 2-10th Gurkha Rifles.

29. The advance northward on the east bank of the two platoons, 2nd Rajputs, was checked short of the broken ground by fire from the enemy posted there, aided by the fire of small parties which were still hidden at the foot of the west bank. It was here that Captain R. T. Arundell was killed while gallantly leading his men.

30. While this attack was in progress, the Commander of H. M. T. B No. 043, Lieutenant-Commander G. B. Palmes, R. N., was asked by Colonel Geoghegan to destroy the enemy's pontoons which were lying on the east bank. Those on shore were destroyed by shell fire, and a party then landed from the boat to see whether there were any others lying behind the bank. The leading party found themselves in front of a trench full of the enemy, and on getting back to their boat Lieutenant-Commander G. B. Palmes, R. N., and Sub-Lieutenant C. V. Cardinall, R. N. V. R., were wounded.

31. The enemy's main attack from the north-east did not get within 1,200 yards of our line. They, however, shelled our positions on the west bank intermittently until about 2 P.M., when their main body retired eastwards, and our forces withdrew to the positions held in the morning. A small party of the enemy reached the ridge which we had vacated, but they were shelled off it by our artillery, and soon disappeared.

32. In the attack on the Toussoum post, about 351 of the enemy managed to establish themselves during the night in some of the outer trenches which are only occupied by the garrison by day. A number of this party were killed as soon as it was light by the fire of our machine guns, and the remainder were either driven out or killed, and some 80 prisoners captured by a local counter-attack which was skilfully led by Lieutenant J. W. Thomson-Glover, 92nd Punjabis. Seven Turkish officers and 280 other ranks, with much material, were taken on this occasion.

33. At 4-30 P.M., reinforcements from the 31st Infantry Brigade began to arrive at Serapeum, and in the course of the evening four double companies were placed in support at various points on the west bank, and the garrison of the Serapeum post was strengthened.

The armed launches commanded by Lieutenants W. H. B. Livesay and E. H. Daughlish, R.I.M., rendered valuable service in this section during the day, and were frequently under fire of the enemy's snipers.

34. On the morning of the 4th instant, as there was no sign of the enemy's main body to the east, and as the armed launch "Mansura" had been fired upon on the previous evening and some sniping had taken place during the night from the east bank, Major-General A. Wallace, who had taken over command at Serapeum from Colonel S. Geoghegan, ordered two double companies of the 92nd Punjabis to move north along the east bank of the Canal to examine this locality. This party, which was commanded by Captain L. F. A. Cochran, got to the south edge of this area, which they found to be held by the enemy, and then extended round to the east and north-east to round the latter up. The enemy held up a white flag and made signs of surrender, whereupon Captain Cochran and some of his party advanced towards them. After three Turks had surrendered fire was re-opened by the enemy, and our troops had to fall back. Major-General Wallace then ordered out reinforcements, consisting of one double company each of the 27th and 62nd Punjabis and the 128th Pioneers, the whole under Major T. R. Maclachlan, 92nd Punjabis. The latter collected his men and charged, and the enemy immediately threw down their arms. The prisoners taken here numbered six officers and 251 men, of whom 52 were seriously wounded. The enemy's killed numbered 59, and among them was a German Officer, Major von den Hagen. Three machine guns were captured, as well as a quantity of miscellaneous stores. It was in this second attack that Captain Cochran was killed.

35. Turning from events at Toussoum to those at Kantara, the only engagements that need be referred to are the attacks made by the enemy on our outposts on the 28th January and 3rd February. In the attack of the 28th January, the enemy advanced along the telegraph line on one of our piquets, consisting of a detachment of the 14th Sikhs under Captain Channer, which they attacked about 2-45 A.M. The action continued for about half an hour, and the enemy attempted to advance, but was unable to do so. Firing gradually ceased, and by daylight the enemy had withdrawn gradually to Point 70 on the Kantara—El Arish road, from which they were driven out by five rounds of lyddite shell fired by H. M. S. "Swiftsure."

The attack of the 3rd February was conducted on much the same lines, and was directed on two of our piquets furnished by the 89th Punjabis. The enemy's advance was stopped without difficulty, and at daylight 36 unwounded prisoners were found in our entanglements. The enemy left 20 dead on the ground, but their casualties were very much heavier, as they removed many of their killed and wounded.

37. As the events described may represent but the opening phase of the campaign, I do not propose at this stage, to mention the staff and departmental officers who have rendered specially good service. I, however, submit the names of the following regimental officers whose conduct is deserving of notice :—

* * * * * * * *

Imperial Service Troops.—Major A. K Rawlins, 24th Punjabis, and Captain G. C. W. Willis, 31st Lancers, Special Service Officers, have displayed energy and enterprise, their reconnaissance work being particularly valuable.

2nd Queen Victoria's Own Rajputs.—Captain R T. Arundell led his double company with great gallantry in the counter-attack on the 3rd February, in which engagement he was killed.

Jemadar Partab Singh proved himself a cool and capable leader in trying circumstances. Jemadar Assa Singh held an exposed position throughout the day, and the skill with which he controlled and directed a covering fire proved of great assistance to troops crossing gullies where they were exposed to the enemy's fire.

62nd Punjabis.—Major O. St.J. Skeen displayed great promptitude and courage in charging the enemy when disembarking from their pontoons on the 3rd February. His skilful leading in the attack of the 4th February was instrumental in causing the surrender of the enemy, upon whose trenches he brought to bear an effective enfilading fire.

Captain M. H. L. Morgan, by his exertion and example, frustrated a very determined attempt of the enemy to effect a landing. Though wounded early on the 3rd, he continued in command of his double company throughout the day.

Subadar Kalu Khan and Jemadar Sher Zaman Khan supported Major Skeen very pluckily on the 3rd, and Jemedar Sher Zaman Khan again distinguished himself in the action of the 4th February.

92nd Punjabis.—Major T. R Maclachlan commanded the garrison of the Toussoum post with great ability on the 3rd February and showed resourcefulness and capacity for command in the final stage of the fight on the 4th.

Captain W. H. Hastings, as machine-gun officer at Toussoum, rendered valuable service in stopping the enemy's attempts to bring boats on to the Canal and in preventing the retreat of the enemy when they were turned out of the trenches which they had occupied.

Lieutenant J W. Thomson-Glover, 35th Sikhs (attached 92nd Punjabis), led the counter-attack at Toussoum very gallantly.

Lieutenant H. Greene took over the command of Captain Cochran's double company after the latter was killed, and handled it very well.

Subadar-Major Farman Ali led his men very gallantly and ably assisted Lieutenant Thomson-Glover.

128th Pioneers.—Lieutenant R. A. Fitzgibbon behaved with conspicuous gallantry. When severely wounded he ran a considerable distance under fire with a message to the 5th Egyptian Battery. He has since died of his wounds.

2nd Battalion, 10th Gurkha Rifles.—Captain H. E. Weekes led his double company skilfully and displayed promptitude and initiative in supporting the double company of the 2nd Rajputs after Captain Arundell had been killed.

137th Field Ambulance.—Major R. M Knox, I.M.S., and his officers were energetic and expeditious in the disposal of the large number of wounded on their hands.

38. I submit a list of the non-commissioned officers and men whose names have been brought to notice for gallant conduct, with particulars of the services they have rendered.

39. All the units engaged proved cool under fire and did their duty in a highly satisfactory manner, the conduct of officers and men being all that could be desired.

40. In conclusion I desire to express my high appreciation of the valuable work done by the pilots and observers of the French hydro-aeroplane squadron and the detachment Royal Flying Corps in the numerous reconnaissances carried out by them previous to and during the advance of the enemy. They were constantly under shrapnel and rifle fire and carried out their difficult and dangerous duties with courage, resourcefulness and success

I have, etc.,

ALEX. WILSON, Major-General.

DESPATCH No. II.

Army Headquarters, Cairo,

19th August, 1915.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward the accompanying despatch of Major-General A. Wilson, C.B., Commanding the Suez Canal Defences.

The troops under General Wilson's command have been on service for over eight months, and though the actual fighting they have experienced has not been severe, yet their work has been heavy and monotonous owing to the large amount of patrolling necessitated by the enemy's attempts at minelaying and to cross the canal.

Owing to the withdrawal of troops to other theatres of war, and to sickness incidental to the hot season, this patrolling has become very arduous, especially at night.

The list of recommendations for rewards in which I concur and forward is not, I submit excessive, having regard to the strength of the force, which rose in February and March to 80,000 men.

A considerable number of the officers mentioned are now serving either in the Dardanelles, Aden or France, some have been killed and many wounded, but, none the less, I feel it my duty to mention their services in Egypt.

It will be seen that a good many recommendations on behalf of the administrative staff have been made, especially the Medical Branch ; but as Egypt has developed into an Intermediate Base and Clearing Station for the Indian Forces serving in France and in the Mediterrean, the work and responsibilities of the administrative staff and services have greatly increased, and are consequently specially deserving of consideration.

In conclusion I would like very specially to bring to the notice of the Secretary of State for war the eminent services of Major-General A. Wilson, C.B., who has commanded the Canal defences with ability, tact, and resource since the 16th November, 1914.

I have, &c.,

J. G. MAXWELL, Lieut.-General,

Commanding the Force in Egypt.

From the General Officer Commanding, Canal Defences to the General Staff, Army Headquarters, Cairo.

Headquarters, Canal Defences.

Ismailia,

1st August, 1915.

SIR,—

On the 11th February, 1915, I submitted a report on the operations which took place early in the month in the Canal zone, and also a brief resumé of events since I assumed command of the Canal Defences on 16th November, 1914.

At the time this report was made it appeared from information at our disposal that the operations under reference might only be a preliminary to further hostilities, and that a more determined attack on the Canal would be undertaken in the near future. These anticipations have, however, not been realised, and though the enemy has continued to hold the Sinai Peninsula in some strength and has undertaken several minor enterprises, with a view to causing damage to the Canal and the shipping using it, no further advance in force has taken place. This result may be attributed to the fact that the losses suffered by the enemy in the attack on the Canal were, according to subsequent reports from Turkish sources, heavier than had been originally estimated, while the demoralisation of the force, consequent on its retreat across the desert, necessitated a considerable pause for reorganisation.

2. Now that the hot season is well established, and also as considerable forces of the enemy have been withdrawn to other theatres of operations, it is probable that the existing state of affairs will continue for some months. I therefore consider it a suitable opportunity to forward a narrative of events subsequent to my last report, and also to submit the names of officers whose services during the past eight months are, in my opinion, worthy of mention

3. My last report dealt with the operations in the vicinity of the Canal up to 10th February, 1915, by which date hostilities in its immediate neighbourhood had ceased for the time being.

On the 12th February, in accordance with instructions from Army Headquarters, a ½-battalion 2-7th Gurkha Rifles, under Lieut.-Colonel Haldane, embarked at Suez on board H.M.S. "Minerva" to proceed to Tor, with a view to dispersing a force which had been threatening that place for some time past. This force landed at Tor during the night of the 12th/13th, and, in conjunction with 150 men of the 2nd Egyptian Battalion, which had been in garrison at Tor, attacked the enemy at dawn on the 13th. The attack was completely successful, the enemy losing some 60 killed and 102 prisoners ; our losses were 1 killed and 1 wounded. Since this occasion no further forces of the enemy have appeared near Tor.

4. For the remainder of February and till the 22nd March no incident of note took place. The Imperial Yeomanry Brigade, as well as the Australian and New Zealand Infantry, who had reinforced the troops on the Canal, returned to Cairo.

Several reconnaissances, principally to Abu Zenima (by sea), El Haitan, Wadi Muksheib, Moiya Harab and Katia, were pushed out, but no enemy encountered.

From information received from agents and through aerial reconnaissances, it appeared that during this month the Turks had concentrated mainly at El Arish and Nekhl, while considerable bodies of the beaten troops were withdrawn to Syria, being, it was rumoured, replaced by fresh formations from the north.

5. On 22nd March an infantry patrol moving from Kubri Post encountered a force of some 400 men north-east of that post at dawn. The enemy withdrew on being engaged by troops from the nearest posts, and a subsequent aerial reconnaissance discovered a force of some 800 infantry and 200 mounted men with guns about 10 miles east of the Canal.

From the report furnished it appared that the Turks were entrenching and intended to stay, and, consequently, orders were issued for a column, consisting of 2 squadrons Hyderabad Lancers, 1/5th Lancashire Battery R.F.A. (T.F.), detachment Bikanir Camel Corps, 51st and 53rd Sikhs, and ½-battalion 1-5th Gurkhas, to move out next day to engage and drive off the enemy.

This column, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Boisragon, V.C., moved out from Kubri at daylight (23rd), and attacked the enemy in an entrenched position some 10 miles east of the Canal. After some resistance the enemy fled hastily, leaving behind a quantity of equipment and rifle ammunition, the heavy going across the sandhills preventing our cavalry from cutting off their retreat. Our casualties on 22nd and 2rd were 5 killed and 19 wounded (Indian ranks). The enemy's losses were estimated at about 50.

6. The only other incident of note during the course of the month was the departure of the 30th Brigade for the Persian Gulf on 23rd. Its place in No. 1 Section was taken by the 28th (F. F.) Brigade, which in turn was relieved by the 31st Brigade from the reserve. Towards the end of the month reports were received of a considerable concentration of the enemy near Es Sirr, some 80 miles due east of Ballah. These reports were verified later by aeroplane observation, which estimated the hostile force as some 4,000, with guns.

7. On the 7th April our mounted patrols from Kantara encountered a hostile force, estimated at 1,200 men, which withdrew after shots had been exchanged. On the same day an aerial reconnaissance reported considerably fewer numbers retiring through Ducidar. The Imperial Service Cavalry Brigades was moved up to Kantara the same day, and on the 8th moved out in conjunction with part of the Kantara garrison. No enemy was encountered and the cavalry moved back to Ismailia, reconnoitring the country for some distance east of the Canal. On the 8th April, owing suspicious tracks having been noticed on the east bank of the Canal between El Kap and Kantara, the Canal was dragged and a mine discovered and destroyed. The mine had evidently been placed in the Canal under cover of the demonstration of the previous day. Owing to this occurrence it became necessary greatly to increase our patrols. Intermediate night piquets were established between Posts and a system of hourly patrols along the east bank instituted. Arrangements were made for a thorough search of the Canal bank at day-light every morning, and Officers Commanding Posts were authorized to stop shipping in case of any supicious circumstances being detected.

8. On the 28th April a reconnaissance of 90 rifles, Bikanir Camel Corps, encountered a hostile force estimated at some 200 men, with guns, about 12 miles due east of Ismailia Ferry Post. After a short skirmish the patrol withdrew to the Ferry Post with the loss of 3 killed, 4 wounded, and 2 missing ; the enemy did not follow up their retirement. Later in the day an aerial reconnaissance located a body of the enemy in bivouac near El Hawawish, and the Imperial Service Cavalry Brigade (eight squadrons), supported by half-battalion 27th Punjabis and one section Egyptian Artillery, crossed the Canal after dark with a view to engaging the enemy at his camp next morning; or should he have moved towards the Canal during the night to cut off his retreat. During the night, 28th/29th a hostile party, evidently from Hawasih, opened fire on a dredger in the Canal north of Bench Mark Post, but retired when engaged by one of our piquets. At daylight on 29th an aeroplane found Hawawish evacuated, but later on located the hostile force moving into Mahadat from the south-west, and the cavalry were directed on that place. Our column, however, only succeeded in engaging the rearguard at about 2 P.M., by which time the enemy had left Mahadat and was moving on Bada. The pursuit was carried on for three to four miles, but the great exhaustion of men and horses, owing to the heat and heavy going through the sandhills, prevented it from being carried further.

Our losses were one British, one Indian officer, and one sowar killed; one British officer and seven rank and file wounded. The enemy's losses in killed were about 20, and 13 prisoners were taken. The column returned to Ismailia early on the 30th.

9. On 7th April, the 7th Indian Mountain Artillery Brigade left the Canal Defences to join the Mediterranean Force, and on 26th the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade left for the same destination, being replaced in No. III Section by the East Lancashire Brigade (Territorial Force).

10. On 1st May a half battalion 56th Rifles were despatched from Suez to Abu Zenima owing to rumours of an attack on the Egyptian garrison of that place. This detachment returned on 3rd, no enemy having appeared in the vicinity. On several occasions during the month hostile patrols were located at some distance from the Canal, but these all retired eastwards as soon as forces moved against them. On the 29th a small party reached the shore of the Little Bitter Lake, and, wading out, boarded a Suez Canal pile driver, destroying one small boat and taking prisoner an Italian employee of the company. Pursuit was undertaken from the nearest Post as soon as the occurrence was reported, but without result.

On the night of 30th-31st a party of Turks was detected trying to approach the Canal between El Ferdan and Ballah. On being fired on they retired, leaving behind a mine, which was discovered and brought in next morning. The next night the party returned with the evident intention of recovering the mine, but hastily retired on being fired on by a piquet which had been left near the spot to deal with any such attempt.

On the night of the 2nd/3rd June, parties of the enemy opened fire on the Posts of Kantara and El Ferdan, but withdrew hastily when engaged. Small columns from the above Posts moved out in pursuit, but were unable to come up with the raiders, who appeared to be all mounted men. One Turkish officer was taken prisoner.

11. Several changes in the garrisons of the Canal Defences took place during the month of May. Early in the month the Artillery and Engineers, as well as the East Lancashire Brigade of the Lancashire Division (T. F.), left to join the Mediterranean Force; the 4th Mounted Brigade and Divisional Artillery, 2nd Mounted Division, arriving in replacement. On the 29th May orders were received for the 1-5th and 2-10th Gurkha Rifles to reinforce the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade with the Mediterranean Force, and these Battalions left on the 31st May and 1st June respectively.

Consequent on the above changes and reductions certain modifications in organisation became necessary, and were carried into effect during the month. It was decided to abolish the divisional organisation of the 10th and 11th Divisions and to include the whole of the forces in the Canal zone in one command, with a Headquarter Staff approximating to that of a division. These changes were brought into effect from the 1st June.

12. During the month of June there was little change in the situation.

Early in the month the 9th Bhopal Infantry and 125th Rifles arrived from France and were taken on the strength of the Canal Defence Force in replacement of the 1-5th and 2-10th Gurkha Rifles.

On the 11th and 12th five Turkish deserters arrived at El Shatt saying that they had deserted from a force of some 300 men who had reached the vicinity of Mabeiuk with a view to attacking the Canal. A column was at once organised at Kubri to deal with the threat, but nothing materialised, the enemy withdrawing to Nekhl.

A party of somewhat similar strength was located by an aeroplane near Katia about the middle of the month, but retired on El Arish without undertaking any offensive.

On the 30th of the month the British s. s. "Teresias" struck a mine laid in the Naval Section of the Canal Defences, near the South end of the Little Bitter Lake. From investigations it appeared that a party had reached the East bank of the lake, waded out to the main channel, and succeeded in evading the naval launches which patrol this section and in placing a mine. Thanks to the skilful handling of the ship and the prompt action of the Canal Company's officials, the accident only blocked the Canal for 14 hours, and the ship, though seriously damaged, has since been towed into Alexandria for repair.

13. During July nothing of any note occurred. On two occasions, owing to the reported presence of Turkish patrols in the neighbourhood of Katia, a small column was moved out from No. III Section to engage or cut them off should they approach the Canal; but on each occasion the hostile party retired without touch having been obtained. The extreme heat in the desert made military operations very difficult, and practically confined all movements to the night time.

On the 8th July orders were received for two batteries R. H. A. (T.F.) and one infantry brigade to proceed urgently to Aden, and accordingly "B" Battery, H. A. C., the Berkshire Battery, R. H. A. (T.F.), and the 28th (T. F.) Brigade (51st, 53rd Sikhs, 56th Rifles and 62nd Punjabis) left Suez on the 12th and following days.

The Artillery were replaced by the 1-15th and 1-17th Batteries, E. Lancs. R.F.A. (T.F.), while the Derbyshire Yeomanry (dismounted) were also sent to the Canal Zone.

14. From the foregoing it will be seen that no fighting of any importance has taken place during the past six months, and it appears evident that, owing to the lack of water, climatic conditions and inability to prosecute campaigns on so many fronts, the Turks will be unable to undertake serious operations in this region till the cold weather arrives and a considerable change in the strategical situation takes place.

At the same time there is no doubt of their intention to detain as many of our troops as possible on the defence of the Canal by attempts to endanger navigation, and, if possible, to block the Canal by sinking a ship in the fairway. Consequently the chief danger that has had to be guarded against, since the main attack in February, has been that of minelaying in the Canal; and, to meet this danger, it has been necessary to employ a large number of men on night patrol duty, especially along the east bank. Up to date, however, except during the actual attack, traffic has continued practically as in times of peace.

15. During the period under review the morale and, with certain exceptions, the health of the troops has been well maintained. During March an outbreak of dysentery occurred in one battalion, while one or two others were less seriously affected. A great improvement has, however, taken place lately, and the health of the Force may now be taken as normal for the conditions under which it is serving.

When it became apparent that a large force would have to be kept on the Canal during the hot weather, a scheme for providing shelter against the sun was initiated and efficiently carried out. It has proved of great value, especially in the case of the British mounted troops.

I have, &c.,

ALEX. WILSON, Major-General,

Commanding Canal Defences.

DESPATCH No. III.

Army Headquarters, Cairo.

1st March 1916.

MY LORD,—I have the honour to submit this report on Military Affairs in the Egyptian Command since the Turks attacked the Suez Canal in February 1915, which attack was made the subject of a separate Despatch. I feel it my duty to make this report because so much of the arduous work done in Egypt by the Force under my Command, with the cordial assistance of the Egyptian Government, was in connection with the operations of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force in the Dardanelles.

So far as I am aware, no detailed mention of the services performed has been made in any other Despatch.

The entire resources of Egypt, Military and Civil, were unstintingly given to further the necessities of that expedition.

The operations in the Gallipoli Peninsula by threatening Constantinople drew off the bulk of the Turkish forces belonging to Djemal Pasha's command, which had already been beaten back from the vicinity of the Suez Canal. It was therefore possible, whilst retaining just sufficient force to safeguard the Canal, to move troops to other theatres where their presence was most required. But throughout the summer and autumn of 1915, my principal cause of anxiety was the possibility of trouble on the Western Frontier, which might lead to serious religious and internal disorders. The attitude of Sayed Ahmed the Senussi was becoming more and more truculent notwithstanding my efforts to preserve peaceful relations; everything possible was done to avoid hostilities, and they were avoided until late in the year, when hostile acts on his part led to the withdrawal of the Egyptian Frontier post at Sollum and subsequent operations.

Suez Canal Zone.

The duty of guarding the Suez Canal was allotted to the Indian Expeditionary Force "E" under the command of Major-General Sir A. Wilson, K.C.B.

This force was gradually reduced by calls on it for other theatres; thus the 29th Brigade under Major-General Sir H. Cox, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.S.I., was sent to Gallipoli; subsequently the Punjabi-Mohammedan battalions of that brigade were withdrawn from the Peninsula and replaced by Gurkha battalions taken from brigades on the Canal; two double companies of Sikhs from the Patiala Imperial Service Regiment were sent to replace losses in the 15th Sikhs, and every British and Indian officer who could be spared was sent to replace casualties; the 30th Brigade under Major-General C. J. Melliss, V.C., K.C.B., was sent to Basra, the 28th Brigade under Major-General Sir G. Younghusband, K.C.I.E., C.B., was sent first to Aden and then to Basrah; the force was further weakened by the exchange of tired units from the Indian divisions in France with some of the best battalions on the Canal.

To this force fell the tiresome and onerous duty throughout the entire summer of exercising ceaseless vigilance over the 100 miles of Canal front. Great credit is due for the way this duty was performed; indifferent troops would have been demoralised. Though small bodies of the enemy were constantly endeavouring, occasionally with success, to place mines in the Canal or damage the railway, yet no accident of importance occurred except that one merchant ship, s.s. "Teresias," struck a mine. She fortunately escaped with but little damage. The passage of the Canal was interrupted on this one occasion for only a few hours.

A little affair, creditable to the Imperial Service Troops engaged, occurred on the 23rd November, when a squadron of the Mysore Lancers operating 15 miles east of El Kantara came upon a force of 60 or 70 Turks, the advance party of a raiding party 200 strong. These they pursued for 7 miles, killing seven, capturing 12 and wounding many others. Amongst the dead was a Bedouin leader named Rizkalla Salim, who was responsible for most of the raids on the Canal; since his death they entirely ceased.

Part of 30th Squadron Royal Flying Corps, under the command of Brevet Major S. D. Massy, I. A., with Headquarters at Ismailia, carried out daily reconnaissances without a single important accident.

The French Naval Seaplane detachment, with Headquarters at Port Said, under the command of Capitaine de Vaisseau de l'Escaille, whose services were placed at my disposal for Intelligence purposes, was continually employed in reconnoitring the Syrian and Anatolian Coast from the requisitioned vessels "Raven" and "Anne". The results of their work were invaluable. The "Anne" was torpedoed near Smyrna during an armistice while employed by the Royal Navy, but was fortunately able to reach Mudros, where she was patched up and returned to Port Said. I cannot speak too highly of the work of the seaplane detachment. Lengthy land flights are extremely dangerous, yet nothing ever stopped these gallant French aviators from any enterprise. I regret the loss of two of these planes whilst making dangerous land flights over Southern Syria.

I would be failing in my duty were I not to bring to Your Lordship's notice the valuable and whole-hearted assistance always readily given by the Count de Serionne and his able assistants of the Suez Canal Company. The whole of the resources of this Company were put unreservedly at my disposal.

It is perhaps needless for me to report that His Majesty's Royal Navy, under Vice-Admiral Sir R. Peirse, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief, East Indies, were always ready and anxious to help and facilitate the duty of protecting the Canal and advising in any enterprise that needed Naval assistance. To the Navy fell the duty of guarding the Bitter Lakes.

To the Vice-Admiral Commanding the French Syrian Squadron I am especially indebted, in that he and the Officers and ships under his command maintained a constant watch throughout on the Syrian and Anatolian Coasts. They supplied me with the fullest information of enemy movements that it was possible to obtain by means of agents, etc. I had only to express a wish and it was at once carried out.

I now submit my report as follows :—

OPERATIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT TO 31ST JANUARY, 1916.

Outbreak of Hostilities on the Western Front.

Early in November, during my temporary absence from Egypt to meet your Lordship at Mudros, the situation on the Western Frontier, which, as your Lordship is aware, had for some months been a subject for anxiety, became suddenly acute, and a series of acts of hostility committed against our frontier posts at Sollum and Barrani made final rupture with the Senussi inevitable.

As early as May, 1915, signs were apparent that the steadily increasing pressure brought to bear upon the Senussi by the Turkish party in Tripoli, under the leadership of Nuri Bey, a half-brother of Enver Pasha, was beginning to take effect.

For some time, even after the outbreak of hostilities between Great Britain and Turkey in 1914, the anti-British influence of this party was not strongly felt, and the attitude of the Senussi towards Egypt remained friendly. It was not until the advent of Gaafer, a Germanised Turk of considerable ability, who arrived in Tripoli in April, 1915, with a considerable supply of arms and money, that this attitude underwent a change.

From that moment it became evident that the Turkish influence was gaining weight, and it was only by means of great forbearance, and by tactful handling of a delicate situation by Lieutenant-Colonel Snow, commanding the Western Desert, that a rupture was so long deferred.

The first incident of importance occurred on August 16th, 1915, when two British submarines, sheltering from the weather near Ras Lick, on the coast of Cyrenaica, were treacherously fired upon by Arabs under the leadership of a white officer, casualties being suffered on either side.

The incident was, however, closed by the acceptance of the Senussi's profound apologies and of his assurances that the act had been committed in ignorance that the submarines were British.

A period of quiet followed, but at the beginning of November a series of events occurred which placed beyond all doubt the insincerity of the Senussi's continued assurances of friendship.

In the first week of that month (November) the crews of H.M.S. "Tara" and of H.M.T. "Moorina," torpedoed by enemy submarines on the 5th and 7th respectively, were, on landing in Cyrenaica, captured and held prisoners by the Senussi, who, in reply to strong representations for their immediate release, merely feigned ignorance of these occurrences, which he pretended to discredit.

Even then a last effort was made to preserve peace, and Sayed Mohamed el Idris was sent to arrange negotiations whereby the Senussi should get rid of his Turkish advisers in return for a sum of money. But before any decision could be reached matters had got beyond control, and the negotiations collapsed On the 9th an Emergency Squadron of the Royal Naval Armoured Car Division was sent to strengthen the post at Sollum, which three days earlier had been shelled by enemy submarines, the Egyptian Coastguard Cruiser "Abbas" being sunk at her moorings, and another, the "Nur el Bahr," receiving considerable damage from shell fire.

On the night of the 14-15th two Egyptian sentries at Sollum were rushed by Mohafizia (Senussi regulars), and were severely handled and their arms carried off; the following night the camp at Sollum was systematically sniped, though no casualties resulted.

On the 17th the Zawia at Sidi Barrani (50 miles east of Sollum) was occupied by a force of some 800 Muhafizia, and on the 18th the Coastguard Barracks at that place were twice attacked during the night, one coastguard being killed.

This was followed on the 20th by an attack on the Coastguard Outpost at Sabil, a small post about 30 miles south-east of Sollum, though in this case, as at Barrani, the attack failed.

In view of these circumstances there was clearly no alternative but to recognise a state of war and to take action accordingly.

The events recorded above had caused a spirit of great unrest to prevail throughout the country, and the possibility of internal disturbances was a source of greater anxiety than the external danger.

This unrest was specially evident amongst the Arab population inhabiting the western edge of the cultivation—amounting in the Behera Province alone to over 120,000.

The religious influence of the Senussi is great amongst these people, and their natural sympathies are inclined towards their brethren in the Western Desert.

The above considerations made it imperative, on the one hand to keep the sphere of hostilities as far as possible to the west of the Delta and, on the other hand, to avoid anything in the nature of a reverse.

In pursuance of this policy it was decided to withdraw the Western Frontier posts to Mersa Matruh, and to concentrate at that place a force sufficient to deal swiftly with the situation ; secure the Alexandria-Dabaa Railway as a secondary line of communication by land with the railhead at Dabaa ; to occupy the Wadi Natrun and the Fayum as measures of precaution ; and to watch closely by constant and careful reconnaissance the Oasis of Moghara.

This course offered the following advantages :—

(a) The advance of the enemy would be opposed at the most westerly point at which a suitable harbour could be found, within one night's journey by sea from Alexandria, defensible on the land front.

(b) The enemy would be met on ground generally practicable to all arms and comparatively well supplied with water.

(c) The Egyptian Bedouin of the coastal belt east of Matruh would be protected if loyal, and coerced if disaffected.

(d) Native opinion in the Delta would be affected favourably by an offensive policy.

(e) As more troops and transport by sea became available an opportunity would be afforded of striking at the enemy's main lines of communications by means of a landing at Sollum.

On the 20th November orders were issued for the assembly of the following force at Alexandria :—

In Command.—Major-General A. Wallace, C. B.

Composite Mounted Brigade.—Under Brigadier-General J. D. T. Tyndale Biscoe :—

Three Composite Yeomanry Regiments (from details 2nd Mounted Division).

One Composite Regiment Australian Light Horse (from details Australian Light Horse Brigades).

Notts Battery, Royal Horse Artillery and Ammunition Column.

Auxiliary Services.

Composite Infantry Brigade.—Under Brigadier-General the Earl of Lucan :—

1-6th Battalion, Royal Scots (T.F.)

2-7th Battalion, Middlesex Regiment (T.F.)

2-8th Battalion, Middlesex Regiment (T.F.)

15th Sikhs.

Auxiliary services.

A Detachment Egyptian Army Military Works Department (no Royal Engineers being available).

Divisional Train, 1st Australian Division.

The 2nd Battalion New Zealand Rifle Brigade, one Company 15th Sikhs, a detachment of 150 Bikanir Camel Corps with an attached Egyptian Army Machine Gun Section, and one armoured train garrisoned by the 1-10th Gurkha Rifles with two 12 pdr. guns of the Egyptian Army Artillery, were despatched on the 21st instant to make good the Alexandria-Dabaa Railway and patrol to Moghara Oasis.

The 1 1st North Midland Mounted Brigade, with the Berks Battery Royal Horse Artillery, were sent on the 29th November to preserve order in the Fayum, and on the same date a Squadron of Egyptian Army Cavalry and a detachment of 50 Bikanir Camel Corps occupied the Wadi Natrun.

Finally, to provide for possible contingencies among the Arab population of the Western Behera Provinces, a Composite Battalion was made up from details of the 29th Division at Alexandria, detachments being despatched to Hosh Isa and Damanhur on December 7th.

By November 23rd concentration was completed, and on the night of the 23rd-24th the first detachments of the 15th Sikhs, under Lieutenant-Colonel J. L. R. Gordon, sailed from Alexandria, arriving at Mersa Matruh the following morning.

The presence of enemy submarines necessitated the sea journey being performed by night only. Moreover, the depth of water over the bar in Matruh Harbour limited the ships immediately available for transporting troops and supplies to six trawlers and two small Coast-guard Cruisers. Four additional small steamers were obtained as soon as possible, and a third cruiser was fitted up as a hospital ship.

The mounted troops and transport were assembled at railhead at Dabaa, and an advanced force was sent forward to make good and develop the wells at Abu Gerab, Baggush and Jerawla, which constitute the only watering places on the 85 miles of desert which separate Dabaa from Mersa Matruh. The condition of the wells at the extreme end of the dry season only permitted of two squadrons being passed across at a time.

The concentration of the force at Mersa Matruh, less five squadrons left at railhead on account of insufficiency of water, was completed on December 7th, and on the same date Major-General Wallace moved his headquarters to Matruh.

Meanwhile Sollum post had been evacuated by sea on the afternoon of the 23rd November, such motor cars of the Royal Naval Armoured Car Squadron as could be moved having been dispatched by land previously.

In the evacuation it was unfortunately found necessary to disable and abandon three light Ford cars and the two Egyptian Army 9 c-m Kruppp guns, and to abandon an outlying post of one Egyptian officer and fourteen other ranks which failed to reach the beach in time to embark, and were made prisoners.

The garrison of Sollum—strength, British, five officers and twelve other ranks, Egyptian, two officers and ninety other ranks—reached Matruh safely on November 24th.

The evacuation of the posts at Bagbag and Sidi Barrani was effected by land on November 23rd, everything of value being removed, except four light cars at the latter post, which were disabled before abandonment. During the march, and after arrival at Matruh, a number of desertions took place among the Egyptian Coastguard Camel Corps These desertions amounted in all to twelve native officers, two cadets, and 120 other ranks, the deserters taking with them their arms, equipment, and 176 camels.

A detailed distribution of the Western Frontier Force on the 10th December, and of troops garrisoning districts in the West of Egypt, in which the population was mainly Arab, and therefore likely to be affected by the invasion, is given in Appendix "A" (not printed).

It must be acknowledged that this force, although the best available in Egypt at the moment, was by no means well adapted for the task which lay before it. Regiments and Staffs had been somewhat hastily collected, and were not well known to one another. The Composite Yeomanry Brigade, to give an instance, contained men from twenty or more different regiments. Before a really efficient fighting force could be collected much rearrangement was necessary, with the result that the composition was constantly changing; and it was, in fact, not until the middle of February that the conditions of the Western Frontier Force could be considered really satisfactory.

Moreover, the lack of sufficient and suitable transport made it necessary for General Wallace to withdraw his troops to Matruh after each engagement.

I mention these facts because it should be realised that General Wallace had to overcome many difficulties beyond those caused by the enemy.

On the 11th December the undermentioned force moved out from Mersa Matruh, with orders to disperse a hostile gathering reported in the neighbourhood of Beit Hussein and Ras Um Rakhum, and to reconnoitre towards Unjeila:—

Commander, Lieut.-Colonel J. L. R. Gordon, 15th Sikhs (350 men).

One section Nottinghamshire Battery, Royal Horse Artillery (Territorial Force).

Detachment Royal Naval Armoured Car Division (six armoured cars, one wireless car).

One section South Midland Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps (Territorial Force).

Marching at 7 a.m., the force moved westwards by the Coast road, and on reaching Wadi Senaab the Cavalry, pushed forward in advance of the column, became engaged with the enemy holding the southern side of the Wadi in considerable strength.

Owing to the bad going marching was difficult, and the infantry were unable to co-operate, but, on the arrival of a reinforcement of a squadron of Australian Light Horse in the afternoon, the enemy were finally driven out of the Wadi with loss estimated at not less than 100 killed and wounded.

Our casualties on this day were one officer and thirteen other ranks killed, and two officers and sixteen other ranks wounded. Among the former I regret to report the death of Lieutenant-Colonel Snow, killed late in the day by an Arab whom he was endeavouring to persuade to surrender. In the death of this experienced officer the force suffered a heavy loss.

In the action valuable assistance was rendered by the armoured cars of the Royal Naval Armoured Car Division. After dark the column concentrated at Um Rakhum, where the night was spent. On the 12th, owing to the fatigue of the Yeomanry horses, nothing further was attempted than the clearing up of the Wadi Shaifa, which resulted in the capture of some twenty-five prisoners and a number of camels and cattle abandoned by the enemy in his retreat.

Meanwhile air reconnaissance disclosed the presence of the enemy in some force at Ras Manaa, about thirteen miles west of Um Rakhum.

The column was accordingly reinforced by two companies of the 1-6th Royal Scots from Matruh, and orders were issued for an advance on Ras Manaa on the following day.

On the 13th the column moved at 8 a.m. in the direction of Beit Hussein, but on crossing Wadi Shaifa became engaged with the enemy, and a sharp and somewhat critical action developed.

The enemy, estimated at about 1,200 with two guns and machine guns, attacked with considerable vigour, but after a critical period the arrival of reinforcements (two guns Notts Royal Horse Artillery and two squadrons Australian Light Horse) from Matruh, turned the scale in our favour, and the enemy were driven back about a mile with heavy loss, though dark put an end to further pursuit.

The column retired for the night to Um Rakhum, and the following morning returned to Matruh.

Our casualties in this operation amounted to nine rank and file killed and six officers and 50 other ranks wounded. The enemy's losses, on the other hand, as estimated from observation and confirmed by subsequent reports, must have reached a total of at least 250, of whom about 180 killed.

On the night of the 14-15th December the posts at the wells of Abu Gefab, Baggush and Gerawla were withdrawn owing to their somewhat dangerous isolation, this operation being carried out without incident.

From the 15th to the 23rd no operation of importance was undertaken, the period being devoted to the further organizing and strengthening of the force at Matruh.

The experience of the operations of the 11th and 13th December had clearly shown that to obtain a rapid and decisive result more strength was necessary.

During the third week of December, therefore, the force at Matruh was reinforced by the 1st Battalion, New Zealand Rifle Brigade, two Naval 4-in. guns and "A" Battery, Honourable Artillery Company (2nd Mounted Division), while shortly afterwards the 161st Brigade (54th Division) relieved the 2nd New Zealand Rifle Battalion on the lines of communication, the latter being withdrawn to Alexandria.

In the meantime the enemy was concentrating in the neighbourhood of Gebel Medwa, about eight miles south-west of Matruh, and by December 24th his strength at that place was estimated from air reconnaissance and other sources to have reached about 5,000 men, of whom more than half were Mahafizia or regular soldiers, with four guns and some machine guns, the whole under the command of Gaafer.

Against this concentration, on December 25th, force detailed above, with Major-General Wallace personally in command, moved out from Matruh. General Wallace's plan was to divide his force into two columns :—

(i) The right column, under the command of the Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, 15th Sikhs, and comprising the bulk of the Infantry, with the Bucks Hussars and a section of Royal Horse Artillery, to advance directly on Gebel Medwa.

(ii) The left column, under Brigadier-General Tyndale Biscoe, including the remainder of the mounted troops and Horse Artillery, to make a wide detour southward round the right flank of the enemy to deny his retreat to the west.

H. M. S. " Clematis " to assist as occasion offered with gun fire from the sea.

Both columns moved before daylight, and by 7·30 the Cavalry had cleared the Wad Toweiwa, about seven miles due south of Matruh.

Meanwhile the right column followed the Khedivial Motor Road westward, until, at 6-30 a.m., the advance guard came suddenly under fire from artillery and machine guns from the south-west. The enemy were soon driven off, and by 7-15 a.m. the main body had crossed the Wadi Raml and could see the enemy occupying an escarpment about one mile south of Gebel Medwa.

At 7-30 a.m., the 15th Sikhs were ordered to attack the enemy from his right flank, the Bucks Hussars and 2-8th Middlesex to co-operate by a containing attack along his front, to be delivered simultaneously with the attack of the Sikhs.

The 15th Sikhs accordingly deployed west of the road and commenced their advance, despatching one company to occupy Gebel Medwa in order to secure their right. At the same time, the Bucks Hussars moved forward, while the Middlesex Battalion, keeping to the north-east of Gebel Medwa, sent a company to relieve that of the 15th Sikhs occupying the hill, which thereupon rejoined the battalion.

The section Notts Royal Horse Artillery, which came into action on the high ground near the road 2,000 yards east of Gebel Medwa, quickly silenced the enemy's artillery, thereby greatly assisting the advance of the infantry, and at 7-45 a.m. H. M. S. " Clematis " opened an accurate and useful fire at a range of about 10,000 yards.

By 9-30 a.m., the Sikhs, reinforced by two companies of the 1st New Zealand Rifle Brigade (from the Reserve), were still meeting with considerable opposition, and shortly before 10 o'clock a third company of New Zealanders was ordered up to prolong their line to the left and to clear a Nullah running parallel to the line of advance from which the Sikhs were suffering casualties.

Before this company could reach its position the crest in front of the Sikhs was carried and that battalion, with the two New Zealand companies on the right, pushed rapidly forward, driving the enemy into caves and small gullies, all of which had in turn to be cleared.

At 11 a.m., the western edge of the plateau was reached, and the left column could then be seen operating about two miles to the south-west. Signal communication was opened, and the left column, which had been a good deal delayed by some hostile mounted troops, then changed direction north-east, and subsequently north, along the Wadi Majid where it again became engaged.

By 2-15 p.m., the Nullahs at the head of the Wadi Majid had been thoroughly cleared and after an hour and a half's sharp fighting the Wadi was in our possession—over 100 dead 51 prisoners, 81 camels, and much live stock, as well as 50,000 rounds of small arm ammunition and three boxes of gun ammunition, falling into our hands. At 4 p.m., the Cavalry Column joined up with the left of the 15th Sikhs, having finally driven off the enemy, with

Unfortunately the remnants of the enemy had already made good their escape westwards along the sea shore, and the approach of darkness precluded the possibility of further pursuit.

After eight hill the Cavalry returned to Matruh, the Infantry bivouacking for the night at Gebel Medwa and returning to Matruh the following morning.

Our casualties during the day which amounted in all to 14 rank and file killed and 3 officers and 37 other ranks wounded, were very light in comparison with those of the enemy of whom over 300 dead and 51 prisoners were accounted for apart from the wounded—probably a considerable number—whom they were able to get away. Amongst the booty were the office and personal effects of the enemy's commander, Gaafer, abandoned by him in his flight.

The energy, resolution, and initiative displayed by Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon throughout this operation is deserving of the highest praise, and in his difficult task he was magnificently backed up by his own regiment, the 15th Sikhs, temporarily commanded by Major Evans, and by the 1st Battalion, New Zealand Rifle Brigade, under Major Austen.

The immediate result of the action was the retirement of the Senussi with his Staff and the remains of his force to Unjeila and Bir Tunis.

General Wallace was now free to deal with the situation between Matruh and Dabaa, and to this end, on 28th December, a small column, under the command of Brigadier-General the East of Lucan, was despatched from Mersa Matruh to Jerwala. Several enemy encampments were visited, but no resistance was encountered, and on the 30th the column returned to Matruh, having destroyed some eighty tents and large quantities of grain, and bringing in nearly 100 camels and 500 sheep.

During the early days of January the weather made active operations impossible.

On the 1st of the month a collection of eighty tents was reported by aeroplane at Gebel Howimil, and a column was formed to clear up the situation in that neighbourhood. On the 2nd, however, torrential rain fell, which continued, with rare breaks, almost incessantly for a week, the country becoming a sea of mud, so that the start of the column was postponed from day to day. Finally, on the evening of 9th January, the weather cleared, and by the 12th the roads were sufficiently passable to warrant a start being made.

On the 13th the column reached Baggush, and on the 14th the march was continued to Gebel Howimil, where several small camps were destroyed, a quantity of stores burnt, and some camels and live stock taken; nowhere was opposition encountered. The column returned the same evening to Baggush, having covered during the day close upon fifty miles.

Under cover of this operation the damaged telegraph line between Matruh and Dabaa was successfully restored by the Royal Naval Armoured Car Division, and by the evening of the 14th communication was restored.

On 15th January the section Honourable Artillery Company and two squadrons Australian Light Horse left the column for Dabaa, the remainder of the force returning to Bir Gerawla, and the following day to Matruh. Marching throughout had been very difficult and tedious owing to the deep going and swampy condition of the ground.

On 19th January, aerial reconnaissance discovered the presence of a considerable force of the enemy at Hazalin, twenty-five miles south-west of Matruh, the camp comprising at least 100 European and 250 Bedouin tents, including that of the Grand Senussi, which was recognised by the Captain Royle, the observer.

In view of the estimated strength of the enemy, General Wallace decided, before striking, to await the arrival of a reinforcement of one battalion of the South African Infantry Brigade, then under orders to sail from Alexandria. This battalion reached Mersa Matruh on the 20th and 21st, and on 22nd January, air reports showing that the enemy's position at Hazalin was unchanged, the forces shown below set out with General Wallace in command, reaching Bir Shola (16 miles) after dark, where troops bivouacked for the night :—

1 Squadron, Royal Bucks Hussars.

1 Squadron, Berks Yeomanry.

1 Squadron, Herts Yeomanry.

1 Squadron, Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry.

1 Squadron, Surrey Yeomanry.

2-8th Battalion, Middlesex Regiment (T. F.) (less two Companies).

At 6 a.m. on January 23rd the force moved off disposed as under :—

3 Squadrons, Royal Bucks. Hussars.

1 Squadron, Dorset Yeomanry.

1 Squadron, Herts. Yeomanry.

Mounted Brigade Machine Gun Section.

"A" Battery, H. A. C. (less one Section).

Reserve.—Two Troops Yeomanry, 1-6th Battalion, Royal Scots (less half Battalion) and S.A.A., moved half a mile in rear of the Right Column. The train, with half Battalion, 2-8th Middlesex Regiment, remained parked at Bir Shola.

At 8-30 a.m., when the Right Column were about 7 miles from Bir Shola, the Left Column reported that the enemy could be seen about 2 miles ahead of their advanced Squadron, and shortly afterwards the latter (Australian Light Horse) became engaged The Bucks. Hussars and H.A.C. were immediately sent forward in support, and simultaneously Colonel Gordon's Column pushed on in attack formation, the 15th Sikhs leading.

Relieved by the advance of the Infantry, the mounted troops pressed on, endeavouring to work round the enemy's right, and at the same time covering the left flank of Colonel Gordon's attack. The latter, spread over a front of nearly a mile and half, led across ground absolutely destitute of cover, while mirage in the early stages made it impossible for a considerable time to locate the enemy's positions. During this advance the Infantry suffered somewhat severely from artillery and machine guns, the enemy's fire being both rapid and accurate. Nevertheless, the enemy was gradually pressed back, but his retirement of nearly 3 miles on to his main positions was conducted with great skill, denying all our efforts to come to close quarters.

By 2-15 p.m., the Sikhs and South Africans, with part of the New Zealand Battalion, on the left of the Sikhs, had reached the enemy's main line. But in the meantime the flanks had not made equal progress, and bodies of the enemy were working round both north and south, the line gradually forming the arc of a semi-circle.

Soon after 1 p.m., so great was the activity of one of these detachments on our right, or northern flank, that the reserve Battalion (1-6th Royal Scots) had to be put in to restore the situation, but by 2-30 p.m., all danger from that quarter was past. On the extreme left, however, by 3-30 p.m., the Cavalry of the Left Column had been forced to give some ground, and with the H.A.C. guns were occupying a position nearly 1,000 yards in rear of the Field Ambulance.

Colonel Gordon was called upon to detach 2 companies of New Zealanders to assist the Cavalry, who were being pressed. With this reinforcement the threat against our left rear was finally repulsed and the enemy driven off.

In the meantime the main attack by Colonel Gordon's Column had progressed satisfactorily. By 3 p.m. the enemy had been driven from his positions, and shortly afterwards his camp was occupied and burnt, the work of destruction being completed by 4-30 p.m.

As darkness was approaching, and the exhaustion of the cavalry horses forbade pursuit, General Wallace decided to bivouac the force about 2 miles east of the captured position, where the Field Ambulance had been placed, and whence it could not be moved owing to the deep mud. Throughout the day this factor—of mud—had played an important and unfortunate part. The whole country had been converted by the abnormal rains into a quagmire, which had hampered the operations of the mounted troops, preventing their full co-operation with the Infantry. Owing to the mud, again, the Infantry were deprived of the support of the Royal Naval Armoured Car Division, intended to co-operate against the enemy's left flank, a loss seriously felt during the day.

The troops spent the night in considerable discomfort, as the train was unable to proceed further than about 3 miles west of Bir Shola; neither supplies nor blankets could be brought up, and the night was intensely wet and cold. The enemy showed no inclination to renew operations, and at 8-30 a.m. on the 24th the force started for Bir Shola.

The march to Bir Shola, through deep mud, proved an arduous undertaking, all vehicles having to be drawn by hand, but, above all, the transport of the wounded presented the greatest difficulty. Those unable to ride had to be carried on stretchers a severe strain upon the troops, tired and thirsty after a cold and sleepless night. Eventually, however, the train was met where it had parked, about three miles west of Bir Shola, and the infantry were relieved of their burden, the force reaching bivouac at Bir Shola at about 5 p.m.

On the 25th the weather cleared and the troops marched back in good spirits to Mersa Matruh, the whole column getting in by 4-30 p.m.

Our casualties in the action of the 23rd were unfortunately heavy, as the figures show :—

	Killed.	Wounded.
British Officers	1	10
British other ranks	11	164
Indian Officers	...	3
Indian other ranks	19	114
Total ...	31	291

Nevertheless those of the enemy must have been far heavier, and, although difficult to gauge accurately, a conservative estimate based on observation and on the reports of prisoners places his losses at not less than 200 killed and 500 wounded.

In this action the enemy received a very severe blow, and, if deserters are to be believed, the effect of this reverse, following upon that at Gebel Medwa on December 25th, has gone far to discourage the Senussi and to shake the faith of his followers in the cause.

It was unfortunate that in this, as in previous actions, it was impossible for the infantry to pursue their success to the full, owing to the intense difficulties of transport experienced on every occasion. With greater mobility, allowing of an active pursuit, particularly after the action on Christmas Day, the success obtained would undoubtedly have been far more complete, and would have contributed largely to a more speedy termination of the campaign.

In the success attained on the 23rd special praise is due to the leading of Colonel Gordon, who commanded the main attack, and to the gallantry of the Sikhs, the South Africans and the New Zealanders, who fought with invincible dash and resolution throughout the day.

It was at this stage of the campaign that General Wallace felt himself obliged, owing to age, to tender his resignation of the command which he had held with unvarying success for the past three months.

I had decided that the time had now come to undertake the reoccupation of Sollum, and as General Wallace considered that the operations involved a physical strain which would be beyond his powers, I appointed Major-General W. E Peyton, C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O., in his place

By this time the force was thoroughly well adapted and equipped for its work. The loss of the 15th Sikhs, ordered to India, was severe, but it and the New Zealand Battalion had been replaced by the South African Brigade. The Composite Yeomanry Brigade had vanished, and its place had been taken by the 2nd Mounted Brigade. Two sections of Hong Kong and Singapore Mountain Battery had joined, and with the necessary services this little force was complete in every respect. Lord Lucan's Composite Brigade of three Territorial regiments was almost all that remained of the original command.

In closing this account of the operations on the western frontier up to the end of January, 1916, I wish again to emphasise the unvarying and whole-hearted support accorded throughout by the Royal Navy. In the onerous and often difficult task of transporting troops and material by sea to Mersa Matruh, and in the active co-operation of H.M.S. "Clematis," which by her vigilant patrolling of the coast considerably lightened the burden of the troops, and by her effective gunnery materially assisted in the operations in December; the assistance and the support of the Navy has been from start to finish as ungrudging as effective.

The Western Frontier Force also owes much to the Royal Flying Corps, whose work was, as always, of a high order. Special mention should be made of a flight by Lieutenant Van Ryneveld to Qara, by Lieutenant Tipton from the Fayum to Moghara, and regular flights to Baharia. The distances covered were very great, and flights of 200 miles have become quite common.

I desire to place on record my high appreciation of the invaluable co-operation of all Departments of the Egyptian Government.

My relations with His Highness The Sultan and his Ministers have been most close and cordial, and their influence has set a tone which has been followed by the better-class Egyptian throughout the country.

The intricacies and difficulties of martial law in a cosmopolitan country such as Egypt have been made comparatively easy by the advice and assistance of the advisers to the Ministry of Finance and Interior. To Lord E. Cecil, K.C.M.G., D.S.O., Sir R. Graham, K.C.M.G., C.B., Sir W. Brunyate, K.C.M.G., Sir M. Macdonald, K.C.M.G., Mr. Burnett-Stuart, of the Ministry of the Interior, and Mr. Ward Boys, of the Ministry of Finance, my thanks are especially due. I am also greatly indebted to Colonel Harvey Pasha, C.M.G., and Colonel Hopkinson Pasha, C.M.G., the Commandants of the Cairo and Alexandria Police respectively, for their strenuous and difficult work in keeping order under most difficult circumstances in these large cities, and who, in addition to their civil duties, have taken on that of Provost-Marshals at my special request.

In fact, every branch of the Egyptian Government has been used to the uttermost with their whole and ungrudging consent. Consequently the resources of Egypt have been probed and developed with a result which has surprised even those who know them best, and I have not only been able to carry on the administration of my command, but also to assist materially the interests of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force which were centred here, and to administer Martial Law without inconvenience and with a staff scarcely larger than that of the small garrison maintained here before the war.

I therefore desire to bring to Your Lordship's notice for favourable consideration the names of those officials of the Egyptian Government whom I have mentioned.

In conclusion I wish to express my gratitude for the assistance and advice of His Britannic Majesty's High Commissioner, Sir H. MacMahon, G.C.V.O., etc., and to bring to your notice the valuable work and assistance of Major-General H. E. Stanton, Brigadier-General in charge of Administration, and Brigadier-General N. Malcolm, Brigadier, General Staff.

I am submitting in a separate Despatch the names of those I wish to bring to your Lordship's notice for favourable consideration on account of the services they have rendered.

I have the honour to be,

Your Lordship's obedient Servant,

J. G. MAXWELL, General,

Commanding the Force in Egypt.

DESPATCH No. V.

Army Headquarters, Cairo,

London, 9th April, 1916.

MY LORD,

On 1st March I submitted a report on the Force in Egypt up to the 31st January, 1916. I now have the honour to supplement that report up to 19th March 1916, the date on which I handed over command to General Sir A. J. Murray, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., C.V.O., D.S.O., Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean Expeditionary Force.

The present Despatch describes the operations under Major-General W. E. Peyton, C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O., for the re-occupation of Sollum. I also venture to submit herewith, for Your Lordship's favourable consideration, the names of those officers, non-commissioned and men, who have especially distinguished themselves during the period covered by this despatch.

I have the honour to be,

Your Lordship's obedient servant,

J. G. MAXWELL, General.

THE RE OCCUPATION OF SOLLUM.

My last Despatch ended with the successful engagement at Hazalin*, and General Wallace's resignation of the command of the Western Frontier Force, on grounds which have already been explained.

General Peyton's assumption of command on the 9th February practically coincided with the final reorganisation of the force, and the provision of sufficient camel transport to render the column completely mobile. Henceforth it was possible to follow up any success, instead of having to return to Matruh after each engagement. This meant that the re-occupation of Sollum, which had already received War Office sanction, was now a possibility, and preparations were pushed on as rapidly as possible.

* The correct name of this place is now known to be Halazin. The incorrect spelling is adhered to in this Despatch, as it is that on all our existing maps.

Information from various sources was to the effect that the main hostile force, with certain reinforcements, was in the neighbourhood of Barrani, and that another smaller body was in the Camp at Sollum. It was clear that if the country was to be pacified these forces must be beaten. Two courses were open to me :—

(i) To attack at Barrani, and simultaneously to land a force at Sollum by sea.

(ii) To move by land, to supply the force by sea at Barrani, and to arrange for naval co-operation at any point which might be necessary.

The Navy were, as always, prepared to give me every assistance in whichever course I might decide to adopt.

On the one hand, Sollum Bay is completely commanded by encircling heights and, as it would be necessary to remove the mines which had been laid at the entrance, surprise would be impossible. On the other hand, the country between Barrani and Sollum was known to be almost devoid of water, and the physical difficulties to be overcome would certainly be great.

After visiting Matruh, and going into the question on the spot with General Wallace, who had not yet left, and with Commander Eyres Monsell, Royal Navy, I decided to utilise the land route only ; supplies to be put by sea into Barrani and Sollum as soon as possible after their re-occupation by us.

These were my instructions to General Peyton when he left Cairo to take over command. As you are already aware, he carried them out, with the assistance of the Navy, to my complete satisfaction.

Just as the preparations for the advance were approaching completion, news was received that a hostile force had occupied the Baharia Oasis on the 11th February. This oasis lies 200 miles south-west of Cairo and about 100 miles from the rich and thickly populated districts of Fayum and Minia. The strength of this force, which was discovered by an air reconnaissance on the day of its arrival, was said to be about 500 men ; it was increased on the following day to about 1,000. Further reinforcements are known to have arrived from the west, and the more southerly oases of Farafra and Dakhla had both been occupied by the 27th. All reports are to the effect that an orderly form of Government has been set up—indeed in most cases the Egyptian officials are believed to be carrying on their ordinary duties, but a few Copts have been induced to embrace the Moslem faith This move of the enemy had, of course, been foreseen, and I had obtained War Office sanction to organise a command, under Major-General J. Adye, C. B, for the defence of the southern provinces of Egypt. This command had recently come into being, and General Adye was able to establish his head-quarters at Beni Suef and to arrange for a thorough system of patrols from the Fayum to the neighbourhood of Assiut and the south, with a small guard on the important bridge over the Nile at Nag Hamadi. Subsequently, as our successful operations cleared the situation in the north, and the centre of gravity began to shift south-ward, General Adye was able to strengthen and to extend his defensive line until, at the moment of handing over my command to Sir A. Murray, his most southerly detachment was Esna.

Meanwhile I had withdrawn the Civil Officials from the Kharga Oasis as soon as it was known that Dakhla was in the enemy's hands. I had the choice of occupying and protecting that oasis or of withdrawing from it everything which would be of value to the enemy, and contenting myself with occasional patrols. The strategical importance of these oases is, of course, very obvious, but in view of the uncertainty as to what troops would be under my command at any moment I considered that any enterprise distant from the Nile Valley would be out of place, and I restricted General Adye to purely defensive measures, with, however, instructions to prepare a small mobile column with which he could strike at the enemy should he approach the cultivation.

All this time the oases were kept under constant observation by means of aeroplanes. Very long flights were necessary, and to reduce them as much as possible a system of advanced depôts in the desert was started. The credit for originating this system is due to Lieut. (now Captain) Van Ryneveld, R.F.C., and to Mr. Jennings Bramley, of the Sudan Civil Service, and was first put into practice on the occasion of the flight to Qara mentioned in my previous Despatch.

Such was the situation when I handed over my command on the 19th March.

Meanwhile the preparations for the advance in the North were steadily proceeding. An advanced depôt was established at Unjeila on the 16th February, and, on the 20th February, General Peyton despatched a force, under Brig.-General H. T. Lukin, C.M.G., D.S.O., consisting of one squadron Royal Bucks Hussars, Queen's Own Dorset Yeomanry, Notts Battery, R.H.A., 1st South African Brigade less the 2nd and 4th Battalions, a detachment 1-6th Royal Scots and two field ambulances, with orders to establish itself at Barrani, and thus to secure the second stepping-stone on the way to Sollum.

On the following day the hostile forces were located by air reconnaissance at Agagia, some fourteen miles south east of Barrani. Reports by surrendered Bedouin confirmed the accuracy of this information, and added that both Nuri Bey and Gaafer Pasha were in the camp, although Sayed Ahmed himself had left for Siwa.

As General Peyton considered that the advanced force was sufficiently strong to overthrow any opposition which it was likely to encounter he ordered General Lukin to continue his march and to attack so soon as he was within striking distance of his enemy.

In accordance with this order the original March programme was adhered to, and on the 24th February General Lukin camped at the Wadi Maktil. The 25th was to be a day of rest preliminary to a night approach and attack at dawn on the 26th. However, as on all previous occasions, Gaafer Pasha again showed that he was by no means disposed passively to await attack, and at 5-30 p.m. on the 25th two field guns and at least one machine gun opened fire upon the camp. The action which followed was without importance as the enemy's artillery was soon silenced and the threatened attack was repelled with a loss to ourselves of one man killed and one wounded. Nevertheless it had been sufficient to bring about a change in General Lukin's plans, and the night march was abandoned in favour of daylight operations.

A Yeomanry reconnaissance sent out at day-light on the 26th found that the position occupied by the enemy on the previous evening had been vacated during the night, but aerial reconnaissance and officers' patrols discovered him in his old position near Agagia. Having collected sufficient information to enable him to form his plans General Lukin moved out at 9-30 a.m. with his whole force except for a small detachment left to guard his camp. By 10-15 a.m. the Yeomanry had seized a hillock 4,000 yards north of the enemy's position, and three quarters of an hour later the attack was developed. In the centre the 3rd South African Infantry advanced on a front of about 1,700 yards, the Yeomanry (less one squadron) and two armoured cars operated on the right flank with orders to pursue the moment the enemy should break; on the left was the remaining squadron with two more armoured cars. The 1st South African Infantry and two armoured cars formed the general reserve.

As the attack developed the enemy opened a fairly heavy fire with rifles and machine guns, and two or three field guns distributed their fire over the field. The 3rd South African Infantry moved forward with admirable steadiness. Then, acting exactly as on previous occasions, the enemy's infantry moving very rapidly, attempted an outflanking movement against General Lukin's left. This was met by a company from the reserve sent up in echelon behind the threatened flank, and the counter-attack at once faded away.

As soon as the danger was over General Lukin, acting with admirable promptitude, withdrew his squadron from his left flank and sent it to strengthen his main pursuing force on his right, and there is little doubt that this quick decision did much to ensure the success of the subsequent operations. As the firing line was now within 500 yards of the position, General Lukin threw into the fight the greater portion of his reserves, including his last two armoured cars, and at the same time sent a staff officer to warn Colonel Souter, of the Dorset Yeomanry, to be ready for his opportunity. In the face of this vigorous action the enemy was compelled to evacuate his position, and, in exact accordance with the plans, the fight was taken up by the cavalry. The rest of the story may be told in the words of Colonel Souter's report:—

"About 1 p.m. I received a message from the G. O. C. saying that he wished me to pursue and to cut off the enemy if possible. It was my intention to let the enemy get clear of the sandhills, where there might have been wire or trenches, and then to attack him in the open. I therefore pursued on a line parallel to, and about 1,000 yards west of, the line of retreat, attacking with dismounted fire wherever the horses wanted an easy. About 2 p.m. I saw for the first time the whole retreating force extend for about a mile with a depth of 300 to 400 yards. In front were the camels and baggage, escorted by irregulars, with their proper fighting force (Muhafizia) and maxims forming their rear and flank guard. I decided to attack mounted. About 3 p.m. I dismounted for the last time to give my horses a breather and to make a careful examination of the ground over which I was about to move. By this time the Dorset Regiment was complete, and as the Squadron of the Bucks Yeomanry had gone on ahead and could not be found, I attacked with Dorsets alone. The attack was made in two lines, the horses galloping steadily, and well in hand. Three maxims were brought into action against us, but the men were splendidly led by their squadron and troop leaders, and their behaviour was admirable. About 50 yards from the position I gave the order to charge, and with one yell the Dorsets hurled themselves upon the enemy, who immediately broke. In the middle of the enemy's lines my horse was killed under me, and, by a curious chance, his dying strides brought me to the ground within a few yards of the Senussi General, Gaafer Pasha."

At this moment Colonel Souter was alone, except for Lieutenant Blaksley and Yeoman Brown, both of the Dorset Yeomanry, who had also had their horses shot under them. Around them about 50 fit or lightly wounded enemy, and the situation was distinctly threatening until the arrival of the machine gun section decided the issue. Gaafer Pasha and his staff were then escorted from the field to a place of safety.

For this happy result great credit is due to Colonel Souter, whose resolution and coolness stood him in great stead at a very critical moment. His name has already been submitted to Your Lordship for reward.

Colonel Souter adds—

"It is difficult accurately to express the effect of this cavalry charge on the enemy. Throughout the day he had fought with extreme boldness, but when the horses got into him he had only one thought, and that was to get away."

The losses in this remarkable exploit were severe, but they were justified by both the moral and material result achieved. One squadron was deprived of all its leaders, two being killed and two having their horses killed under them. Without their officers' control the men carried on too far, and it was this squadron that suffered most of the casualties. The enemy's losses were also heavy, and it is most improbable that anything would have induced them to stand up to well-handled cavalry again.

This action on the 26th completed the first stage of General Peyton's advance on Sollum, for Barrani was occupied without further opposition on the 28th February. The next stage was to bring up the remainder of his force and to put sufficient stores into Barrani to enable the advance to be continued. This was a naval operation. For various reasons the advance had been begun some days earlier than I had intended or than the Navy had been led to expect. The Australian Train, which had worked splendidly, was required for duty elsewhere, and, although 2,000 transport camels had been provided, we were still dependent upon the supply ships. Fortunately, these had been provided, and stocked in ample time, and Captain Burmester, R. N., and Commander Eyres, Monsell were, in fact, able to put supplies into Barrani about a week earlier than the date originally given to them.

The remainder of the South African Infantry Brigade, and the second Mounted Brigade, together with two sections of the Hong Kong and Singapore Mountain Battery, were accordingly brought from Mearsa Matruh, and the whole force was assembled at Barrani by the 8th March.

After their defeat at Agagia on the 26th February the enemy retreated westwards towards Sollum, and the Egyptian Bedouin (Aulad Ali) began to desert him in large numbers and to appeal to General Peyton for pardon. A number of prominent Sheikhs came into his camp, but the necessity of pushing on the operations made it impossible to enter into lengthy negotiations for the moment. Air reconnaissance and native report established the fact that the enemy had reoccupied their old camps at Bir Warr and Msead, which had been Sayed Ahmed's headquarters before the opening of hostilities, and it was possible that reinforcements might be coming up from Cyrenaica.

From Barrani to Sollum two possible routes were open to General Peyton. One, following the Khedival road along the coast line; the other climbing on to the inland plateau by the Nagb Medean or some other of the various passes, and then following along the higher ground towards the camp at Msead. Tactically and strategically the latter route was undoubtedly to be preferred, since at Sollum the escarpment rises sheerly from the shores of the bay, and to climb it there in the face of opposition must entail heavy loss of life. As is usual in African campaigning the water question was as important as either tactics or strategy. In this case all information was to the effect that a good supply could be found in the wells at Augerin, and that there were large cisterns at the Nagb Medean and Siwiat. This meant that by careful use of the reserve water park which had been organized, and by moving in two bodies, the whole force could use the inland road by the plateau.

The first column, which comprised all the infantry and slow moving troops, left Barrani on the 9th March, under General Lukin, with orders to secure a foothold on the plateau, using the Nagb Medean. The second column, comprised of mounted troops, horses and camels, was to leave two days later and to reach Augerin on the day after the Nagb Medean had been secured. That is to say, that the whole force would have been concentrated at Augerin with its outposts in the high ground ready to make its final and decisive attack upon Bir Warr and Msead. This plan was upset by the discovery, on March 12th, that previous reports as to water were far too optimistic. The supply at Augerin was found to be quite inadequate, and the cisterns at Medean and Siwiat were both reported to be dry. Some reconsideration, therefore, became necessary. The situation at that moment was as follows:—The armoured cars had reached the plateau, using the most westerly pass near Alim er Rabia. Telephone conversation cleverly intercepted at Barrani by a Turkish-speaking operator showed that the enemy was anxious, and in two minds whether to fight or fly; and Captain Blunt, R. E., had discovered a cistern at Alim Tejdid containing sufficient water for two battalions for one night. General Peyton was still rightly averse to risking the losses which he would suffer if compelled to attack the Sollum heights from the coastline, especially as he had already made good a footing on the plateau. On the other hand, the water on the inland route was only sufficient for a portion of his troops. He therefore decided to send two battalions of infantry, the armoured cars, his camel corps company, and his mountain guns under General Lukin along the top of the escarpment, while the remainder of his force was to move by the coast. At midnight on the 13th-14th General Lukin was at Siwiat, the remaining infantry was at Alim Tejdid, and the mounted troops at Bagbag. On the morning of the 14th both columns moved towards Sollum; at 9 A.M. aeroplane reconnaissance reported that the enemy was evacuating his camps. The mounted troops under General Peyton then joined General Lukin's column on the high ground, and, as the aeroplane had discovered a hostile force some 20 miles to the west, the armoured cars, under Major the Duke of Westminster, were sent on in pursuit.

The result of this pursuit has already been fully reported. It resulted, as Your Lordship is aware, in the capture of all the enemy's guns and machine guns, together with about 40 prisoners, including three Turkish officers, and in inflicting on the enemy a loss of 50 killed and many wounded. Our loss in this exceptionally successful affair was one British officer slightly wounded.

By the re-occupation of Sollum and this pursuit by the armoured cars, the defeat of the northern column operating against Egypt was made complete. In little more than three weeks General Peyton's force had cleared the country of the enemy for 150 miles, had captured his commander, had taken all his artillery and machine guns, and had driven his scattered forces far beyond the Egyptian frontier.

Nevertheless, one more object remained to be achieved. It was known that somewhere in Cyrenaica the Senussi held some 95 British prisoners, survivors from the "Tara" and "Moorina" which had been torpedoed in November. After thorough examination of prisoners taken on the 14th, Captain Royle came to the conclusion that these prisoners could be found at a place some 75 miles west of Sollum. It was decided to make the attempt, and, as has also already been reported, it also was a complete success. The task was again entrusted to the light armoured car battery, under Major the Duke of Westminster, accompanied by the motor ambulances. The distance travelled was 120 miles, and the fact that rescue was effected without any loss of life does not, in my opinion, detract in any way from the brilliance of the exploit. To lead his cars through perfectly unknown country against an enemy of unknown strength was a feat which demanded great resolution, and which should not be forgotten even in this war, where deeds of rare daring are of daily occurrence.

With the rescue of the prisoners and the safe return of the armoured cars, the campaign in the west came to an end and, I think, it may fairly be claimed that seldom has a small campaign been so completely successful or had such far-reaching results.

The effect of this success has been to remove the anxiety which was at one time felt as to the possibility of hostile outbreaks in Egypt itself, where agitation was known to be rife. The attitude of the people in Alexandria, and more especially of the very large Bedouin population of the Behera province, has completely changed, and prestige which we have lost through the evacuation of Sollum has been more than recovered. Moreover, through his failure as a temporal leader, Sayed Ahmed has lost much of the influence which was attached to him as a spiritual head.

On the west the Aulad Ali, who had been induced to throw in their lot with the Senussi in the belief that they would soon be able to raid the rich lands of the Delta, have been reduced to a state of starvation, and are now surrendering in such large numbers that feeding them has become so serious a problem that it has been necessary to establish a special branch of the administration for their protection and control.

On the east, the failure of the Turks to carry out their threat to attack Egypt and seize the Suez Canal has similarly resulted in a loss of credit and prestige. In the south, scattered forces still hold the Oases, and the inherent difficulties of desert campaigning will make them troublesome to deal with; but the failures in east and west have, it may fairly be claimed, had the result of establishing our hold upon Egypt more firmly than ever, and of convincing all the more enlightened of the people that they can gain nothing by intriguing with our enemies.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 5th August 1916.

Burma.—Except on the Tenasserim coast where the fall was good the rainfall in Lower Burma was mostly light and in the dry zone meagre. Agricultural operations for winter rice continue satisfactorily in the rice growing areas. Cultivation of dry crops in uplands is progressing normally. The condition of the standing crops is favourable. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon is stationary at Rs. 115 per hundred baskets which is slightly below normal. The market for white rice is steady.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable and favourable for agricultural operations. Light to moderate rain has fallen in all districts. More rain is still wanted in the Surma Valley and in Kamrup. Ploughing of land for and transplantation of winter rice, harvesting of autumn rice and jute, plucking and manufacture of tea and planting of sugarcane are in progress. Damage by insect pests to autumn rice is reported from Sylhet and Kamrup. Prospects of jute, winter rice and sugarcane are fair, of cotton fair to good and of tea generally fair. The price of common rice is almost stationary. Scarcity of fodder is reported from one district and cattle disease from all districts except Manipur and the Lushai Hills.

Bengal.—Heavy rain fell in a few districts of North Bengal but generally the fall varied from light to moderate in the rest of the Province. More rain is urgently needed in the western districts for the transplantation of winter rice and for the growth of standing crops. Some damage has been caused to the standing autumn crops in North Bengal by excessive rainfall and floods during the past week. Injury to jute crops by insect pests is also reported from some districts of the Presidency division. Harvesting of autumn paddy and jute is in progress. Cattle disease prevails in six districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has fallen by about 0·5 per cent as compared with that of the preceding week. Scarcity continues to be reported among the hill tribes of the Chittagong hill tracts.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows —

Bankura district :—Distress in the affected areas is generally unchanged. Transplantation of winter paddy is being retarded owing to insufficient rainfall. Relief measures are adequate. The condition of people on relief works is generally good. Private charitable funds are giving relief. Advances are being made to weavers. Artizans are being relieved in their own trade. Prices are stationary. The price of rice is 8¼ seers per rupee. The number of persons on relief works was 12,772 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 20,707, total 33,479. The increase in the number on works is due to paucity of agricultural employment in some local areas. The number of persons relieved on private works was 2,717.

Tippera district :—Harvesting of autumn paddy and jute has begun. Gratuitous relief has been stopped since July 29th owing to improved conditions. No further relief measures are necessary.

Bihar and Orissa.—Generally light rain fell in all districts of the Province. Weeding of autumn crops continues. Transplantation of winter paddy is going on but more rain is wanted for the purpose in several districts. Standing crops are on the whole doing well. The average price of common rice has risen slightly as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. The attendance of persons on test works in Manbhum and Singhbhum was 1,224 and 10,922 respectively. Gratuitous relief was given to 2,009 persons in Manbhum and 2,255 persons in Singhbhum. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—During the week rain was general throughout the Provinces but the distribution was uneven. Most districts would welcome a short break though some report the need for more rain. Sowing and weeding of autumn crops and transplantation of late rice are in progress. Preparation of fields for spring crops continues. Standing crops are generally doing well, though some damage from excessive rain is reported in places, while grasshoppers continue to damage crops in Ballia. The manufacture of indigo has begun in Bulandshahr and Aligarh. Very little cattle disease is reported and the condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Prices are for the most part stationary with an upward tendency in a few districts.

Punjab.—Fairly heavy and well distributed rain fell in all the reporting districts. The fall has been sufficient except in parts of the southwest where more rain is still wanted. It has immensely benefited the standing crops which are good on irrigated and average on unirrigated areas. Sowings of autumn crops continue and are generally normal. Cattle are improving in the southeast, elsewhere they are healthy. Water for drinking and irrigation is sufficient. Prices of wheat have risen slightly and range between normal and warning rates but in other cases they range between normal and scarcity rates. Price of wheat :—Lyallpur 10½, Rawalpindi 10½, Lahore 10¾, and Amballa and Ferozepore 11 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell throughout the Province and proved beneficial for autumn sowings. The weather is comparatively cool. The condition of standing crops is average and of cattle good. Fodder and water are sufficient. The public health is good except for a few cases of cholera in Dera Ismail Khan. Prices are high but stationary. The price of barley is rising in Dera Ismail Khan and of wheat and maize in Peshawar.

Jammu.—Good rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9½ to 12 and maize from 11 to 19 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. Sowings of autumn crops have been finished. Cattle disease is reported from the Akhnur tahsil. Fodder is sufficient except in a few places.

Kashmir.—The rainfall during the week was sufficient. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are falling. Water and fodder are sufficient.

Rajputana.—The weather is cloudy. Rain is reported throughout Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara. The maximum fall was 627 cents in Bharatpur. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Sowing and weeding continue. Grass has grown and in consequence the condition of the cattle is improving but cattle disease is reported in parts of Mewar, Kotah and Tonk. Prices are stationary. The number of persons on test works in Kishengarh was 60 and in Karauli 244.

The weekly report on scarcity in Merwara is as follows :—The recent good rains have resulted in appreciable decrease in distress. There is no wandering or emaciation among applicants for relief. The physical condition of workers is satisfactory. Relief measures are adequate. Cash advances are being liberally distributed. The public health is good, but cases of cholera have occurred in one village of the Beawar and three villages of the Todgarh tahsils. Cattle immigration depôts have been closed. Prices are 10 seers per rupee. The number of persons on test works was 1,100 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 1,900, total 3,000.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general. The principal falls were over 6 inches in Dhar, over 5 inches in Ratlam, over 4 inches in Kannod, Bagli, Alirajpur and Manpur, over 3 inches in Indore City, over 2 inches in Jaora, Barwani, Jhabua and Jobat and over 1 inch in Sailana and sufficient everywhere. Autumn crops are being sown and weeded. Standing crops and the probable outturn are good. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are normal in Bhopal and Baghelkhand, slightly fluctuating in parts of the Indore State and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather continued to be warm and cloudy. Moderate to heavy rain, ranging from 95 cents in Nimar to 8 inches in Seoni, was received all over the Provinces. More rain is needed in three districts for the transplantation of rice but a break would be beneficial in Berar and elsewhere. Sowings are still in progress in places and weeding continues. Germination of crops is satisfactory and prospects are favourable. Fodder and water are ample and cattle are in good condition. Fluctuations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States :—Good rain was received but two States require more. Transplantation, thinning and weeding continue. Standing crops are in good condition.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was general and beneficial to germinated crops except in parts of the Deccan where seedlings are suffering from continuous rain and where a break is needed. Sowing of autumn crops and transplantation continue. The fodder supply is deficient in parts of Sind, Cutch, Palanpur and Baroda. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition except in parts of Sind, Palanpur and Baroda. Drinking water is inadequate in parts of Larkana and Baroda. Water for irrigation is deficient in parts of Larkana, Gujarat and Kathiawar. Prices of food grains have fallen slightly in the Deccan and are generally steady elsewhere.

The weekly report on scarcity in Kathiawar is as follows :—Distress is decreasing in Gohilwad. The public health is good. There is no wandering or emaciation. New grass is coming up. Gratuitous relief was given to 383 persons.

Hyderabad.—The rainfall during the week was general. The highest fall was 13 inches 69 cents in Mahbubabad. The average fall was 3 inches 30 cents. Agricultural operations have been suspended in the Aurangabad, Bir and Warangal districts owing to excessive rain. Autumn crops are generally in fair to good condition and are being weeded. The early rice crop is being sown and is in fair condition. Lands are being prepared for the sowing of spring crops. Cattle disease prevails in sixteen talukas. Prices of grains are high and almost steady. Coarse rice is selling at 9 and white juar at 14 seers per rupee in Hyderabad City. The highest price of juar in districts is 9½ seers per rupee in Warangal and the lowest 24 seers per rupee in Bir.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was good in Hassan, Kadur and Shimoga and slight elsewhere. Prices of food grains are generally steady. Markets are well supplied. Ragi and paddy are being sown. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects of the season are good. Cattle are healthy in the greater part of the State. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 12 inches 73 cents. Transplantation of rice continues. Prices of food grains are stationary. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was light or nil in South Arcot, the central parts except Chittoor and in the southern parts, fair in Bellary, Anantapore, Chingleput, Madura and Chittoor, very heavy in Malabar, South Canara, Cochin and the Nilgiris, heavy in the Vizagapatam Agency, Godaveri and Kistna and good elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but have withered in parts of one district for want of water and have been damaged in parts of another by pests. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding in parts with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is sufficient in the Circars except in parts of Ganjam and in Kurnool, Cuddapah, Chingleput, Coimbatore, Trichinopoly, the West Coast and the Nilgiris and insufficient in parts of other districts. Pasture is insufficient in parts of five districts, fairly sufficient in Bellary and sufficient elsewhere. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

Memorandum on the rainfall of June and July and the probable amount during August and September 1916.

WEATHER IN INDIA DURING JUNE AND JULY.

The Arabian Sea monsoon arrived on the west coast at about the average date, while the Bay current appeared in north-east India upwards of a week earlier than usual. The establishment of monsoon conditions in the interior occurred in the normal manner. Both currents were more active than usual until the 26th June when a break set in over by far the greater part of the country; this lasted up to the 2nd July in the Peninsula and another five days in northern and central India. Strongly marked monsoon conditions prevailed generally from the 8th to the 20th, but during the rest of July the monsoon was somewhat inactive outside the Peninsula.

The aggregate rainfall of June and July in the plains of India exceeded the normal by nearly an inch or 5 per cent. Its geographical distribution was not however quite satisfactory. Thus the total for the two months in northern and central India exceeded the normal only in Bengal, Bihar, the United Provinces, the Punjab East and North, Rajputana West, Central India and Berar; while that in the Peninsula was greater than usual everywhere except in Malabar.

In Chota Nagpur, the Punjab South-west, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Gujarat the defect ranged between 30 and 55 per cent.

2. The following tables give for June and July and the total period the actual rainfall, the departure from normal and the percentage departure from normal for the fifteen chief political divisions and thirty-three sub-divisions.

Conditions affecting the rains of August and September 1916.

3. The recent data regarding the conditions most likely to have influence on the rains of August and September 1916 are:—

The Argentine Republic and Chili.

4. In the Argentine pressure was higher than usual by 1·6 mm. in June and by 2·0 mm. in July. In Santiago (Chili) the corresponding excesses were 1·3 mm. and 1·5 mm.

The Indian Ocean.

5. Mauritius.—Pressure was below normal throughout the period except for a short interval towards the end of June and beginning of July. On the whole there was a defect of ·06″ in June and ·03″ in July.

Zanzibar.—Pressure was below the average by ·05″ in June and by ·02″ in July. The air movement was unusually strong in July but its direction was nearly normal in both months.

Seychelles.—Pressure was low by ·05″ in June and by ·04″ in July. Winds were much above their normal strength from the middle of June onwards.

Logs of vessels.—The air movement in equatorial regions presented no marked abnormal features.

Snowfall in the mountain regions to the north and west of India.

6. (a) During the period 1st June to 13th July no snowfall occurred in the region around Kabul and the previous accumulations disappeared altogether except from the crests of the Paghman, Shakardara, Hazarajat and Hindu Kush ranges.

(b) According to the available information there was little or no snowfall in the mountain zone of the North-West Frontier Province, and the unmelted residue of the winter accumulations existing at the end of July was almost certainly of less than the average depth.

(c) In Kashmir there were a few light falls on the higher mountains near Kargil, Skardu, Leh and Gulmarg, but in general the weather was unusually hot and dry, and the melting of the winter accumulations occurred with great rapidity, so that at the present time there is distinctly less snow lying than usual.

(d) In the Punjab Himalayas several light falls occurred on the hills near Kilba down to about 11,000 feet and there were a few falls on the Dalhousie, Bharmaur and Pangi ranges in Chamba down to 12,000 feet. Hardly any snow fell on the ranges in Kulu. The information regarding the accumulations is scanty but suffices to show that even on the higher elevations the existing covering of snow is not so thick as usual.

(e) In the Garhwal and Almora hills snowstorms were as usual of occasional occurrence. The present accumulations are markedly below the average in Garhwal and in slight defect in Almora.

India.

7. Air pressure during July was in excess in north, and particularly in northeast, India.

Inferences from the data.

8. When seeking a forecast for the whole monsoon period June to September the most important relationships are of abundant Indian rain with high pressure in the Argentine and Chili and with low pressure in the Indian Ocean, while prejudicial influences are exerted by an excess of snow-covered surface in the northwest mountain regions, and by heavy rain in south Ceylon or the subequatorial regions. In the present year the pressure conditions were decidedly favourable, pressure at Mauritius being lower than ever before and snowfall was slightly favourable, but the rainfall factors were extremely adverse, the rain at Zanzibar being comparable with that of the worst famine years.

In June and July pressure at Mauritius continued moderately favourable while that in south America became extremely favourable and remained so. Snowfall conditions also remained slightly favourable, and the monsoon, though at first weak in northwest India, has been in excess for the whole country by ·9″ or 5 per cent. The rainfall of August and September is mostly determined by the pressure conditions and snowfall just mentioned, the influence of the April and May rainfall, though still exerted, being now of somewhat less importance. On the whole then the general indications are distinctly more hopeful than they were in June.

With regard to the geographical distribution the deficiency of pressure at Mauritius has been associated, as usual, with a southward displacement of the trough of low pressure, and the result is usually favourable for the United Provinces, Rajputana and Gujarat at the expense of Bihar, Chota Nagpur, Bengal and Assam.

Summary.

9. (a) The outlook has improved and the total rainfall of August and September is likely to be in excess.

(b) The indications regarding the geographical distribution are favourable for the United Provinces, Rajputana and Gujarat at the expense of northeast India.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 12th August 1916.

Burma.—Heavy rain was general over Lower Burma. In Upper Burma the fall in the dry zone was scanty and irregularly distributed. Agricultural operations for winter rice in Lower Burma and in irrigated tracts in Upper Burma are progressing. The cultivation of upland crops continues. Standing crops are generally favourable. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has risen to Rs. 118 per hundred baskets and is slightly above normal. The market for white rice is steady.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable and favourable for agricultural operations. Moderate to heavy rain has fallen in all districts but more rain is still wanted in Darrang for the transplantation of winter rice. Plucking and manufacture of tea, transplantation of winter rice and harvesting of autumn rice and jute are in progress. Damage by insect pests to autumn rice is still reported from Sylhet and Kamrup. Prospects of standing crops and of tea are generally favourable. The price of common rice is practically stationary. Cattle disease is reported from ten districts.

Bengal.—During the week heavy rain fell almost throughout Eastern and Northern Bengal, but the fall was light to moderate elsewhere. The recent rainfall has improved prospects of standing crops in the western districts, but more rain is still wanted for the transplantation of winter rice. Some damage has been done to standing crops in places especially in low lands in the Rajshahi and Dacca divisions by excessive rainfall and floods. Transplantations of winter rice and harvesting of autumn paddy and jute are in progress. Cattle disease is reported from six districts Scarcity of fodder is reported from parts of Dinajpore and Dacca. The average price of common rice for the Province has a slight tendency to fall as compared with that of the previous week. Scarcity continues to be reported from parts of the Chittagong Hill Tracts where relief measures are being taken.

The weekly report on the famine in the Bankura district is as follows —Distress in affected areas is generally unchanged. The rainfall was general. Transplantation of winter rice is progressing satisfactorily. Maize and kheri crops are thriving well. Relief measures are adequate. The condition of the people on relief works is generally good. Private charitable funds are giving relief Advances are being made to weavers. Prices have fallen slightly. The price of rice is 8½ seers per rupee. The number of persons on relief works was 13,562 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 20,007, total 33,569 The increase in the number on works is due to completion of agricultural operations in places. The number of persons relieved on private works was 1,688.

Bihar and Orissa.—The rainfall during the week was general over the Province, the fall being heavy in most districts of Bihar and light to moderate in Orissa and Chota Nagpur. Weeding of autumn crops continues. The recent rain has facilitated transplantation of paddy which is in progress. More rain is, however, wanted in parts of Orissa and Chota Nagpur. Jute and other autumn crops have been damaged to some extent by excessive rain in parts of the Bhagalpur division. Standing crops are otherwise doing well. The average price of common rice has remained almost stationary as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from fifteen districts. The attendance of persons on test works in Manbhum and Singhbhum was 2,846 and 11,087 respectively. Gratuitous relief was given to 2,503 persons in Manbhum and 1,236 persons in Singhbhum. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Heavy rain fell during the week throughout the Provinces and a break is now generally desired. Agricultural operations have been retarded in places owing to heavy rain. Harvesting of small millets Chrena, Sanwan and Kakun has commenced in places. Transplantation of rice and preparation of fields for spring sowings are in progress. Standing autumn crops are doing well but injury by grasshoppers is reported from Ballia and Jaunpur and some damage is reported in places owing to excessive rainfall and floods. The condition of agricultural stock is good, though cattle disease is increasing slightly. Fodder and water are ample and supplies are adequate. Markets are well stocked. Prices are almost stationary with a slight tendency to rise in a few districts.

Punjab.—Moderate or fairly heavy rain fell in all the reporting districts except in parts of the west where the fall was light. It has been generally beneficial and more rain is not required for the present. The condition of standing crops is good on irrigated and average on unirrigated areas but in parts of the southeast crops on low lands have been damaged slightly by excessive rains and floods. Sowings of autumn crops continue and are generally normal. Cattle are improving in the southeast but elsewhere they are healthy. Water for drinking and irrigation purposes is sufficient. Prices of wheat have risen slightly and range between normal and warning rates but in other cases they range between normal and scarcity rates. Price of wheat :—Lyallpur 10, Rawalpindi 10½, Ferozepore 10½, Lahore 10½ and Amballa 11 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell in Peshawar and Bannu and proved beneficial to autumn crops. The week in Dera Ismail Khan was rainless. The weather is still hot. The condition of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas is average. Harvesting of extra spring crops is in progress in Bannu with outturn average Sowing of autumn crops is in progress in Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are sufficient. The Paharpur canal is running. Government canals have been closed in Peshawar owing to rains. The public health is generally good Prices are high but stationary. The prices of wheat and barley are falling in Peshawar.

Jammu.—Good rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 12 and maize from 11 to 19 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. Cattle disease prevails in the Akhnur and Jasmergarh tahsils. Fodder is sufficient except in a few places.

Kashmir.—No rain fell during the week in Anantnag but good rain was received elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are falling.

Rajputana.—The weather is cloudy. During the week moderate to heavy rain has fallen throughout Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara. Standing crops are in good condition and are being weeded. Sowings are progressing. The condition of cattle is generally fair to good except in Kotah where cattle disease still prevails. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are stationary. The number of persons on test works in Kishengarh was 249.

The weekly report on scarcity in Merwara is as follows :—Distress has much decreased owing to good rainfall. The number of persons on relief is rapidly falling. The physical condition of workers is satisfactory. Relief measures are sufficient. Cash advances are being given where required. The public health is good but small-pox prevails in a few villages of the Todgarh tahsil. One more work in the Beawar tahsil has been ordered to be closed from 15th August. Prices are 10 seers per rupee. The number of persons on test works was 800 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 1,600, total 2,400.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general The principal falls were over 6 inches in Garot, Dhar and Alirajpur, over 5 inches in Bundelkhand and Jobat and over 2 inches in Mehidpur, Kannod, Barwani, Jhabua and Manpur and sufficient everywhere. Autumn crops are being sown and weeded. Lands for spring crops are being prepared in Bhopal and Malwa. Standing crops are in good condition and the probable outturn is generally expected to be good. Agricultural stock is in good condition except in some villages of the Mhow, Petlawad, Khargon and Sendhwa parganas in the Indore State and in the Unchehra tahsil in the Nagod State where there is cattle disease. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are normal in Bhopal and Baghelkhand and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been cloudy and rainy in Chanda, Akola and Buldana, where light showers not exceeding 60 cents were received. Elsewhere moderate to heavy rain fell, the highest fall being 8½ inches in Hoshangabad. More rain is, however, required for transplantation and thinning of rice in parts of Bhandara and Drug, while a break would be welcome in the Nimar, Betul, Chhindwara and Berar districts. Sowings still continue in the Jubbulpore division and Chanda. Transplantation of rice and weeding are in progress. Continuous rain and insects have slightly affected seedlings in parts of Betul, Chhindwara, Raipur and Amraoti. Otherwise the condition of crops is generally satisfactory. Fodder and water are adequate and agricultural stock is in good condition. Juar is cheaper by 2½ seers per rupee in Akola. Elsewhere prices were steady or fluctuated slightly.

Feudatory States.—Good rain fell in the States but more is required in places. Transplantation, thinning and weeding are proceeding and prospects are favourable.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was general and beneficial to germinated crops but a break is needed in Broach and Khandesh. Sowing of autumn crops and transplantation continue. The fodder supply is deficient in part of Sind, Cutch, Palanpur and Baroda. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition except in parts of Sind. Drinking and irrigation water is generally adequate. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

The weekly report on scarcity in Kathiawar is as follows :—Distress is decreasing in Gohilwad. The public health is good. There is no wandering or emaciation. New grass is coming up. The number of persons in receipt of gratuitous relief was 367.

Hyderabad.—Rain fell throughout the dominions during the week, the highest fall being 6 inches 72 cents in the Yenlandu taluka. The average fall was 1 inch 99 cents. Agricultural operations have been suspended somewhat in the Aurangabad, Bir and Usmanabad districts owing to continuous and excessive rain. Autumn crops are in good condition and are being weeded. They have been damaged somewhat by insects in parts of the Raichur district. The early rice crop is being sown and weeded and is in fair to good condition. Lands are being prepared for the sowing of spring crops. Cattle disease prevails in sixteen talukas. Prices of grains are almost constant. The highest price of juar in districts is 10 seers per rupee in Karimnagar and the lowest 26 seers per rupee in Bir.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was good in Bangalore, Kolar, Tumkur, Kadur and Shimoga and light elsewhere. The price of rice has risen slightly in Chitaldrug. Markets are well supplied. Weeding of ragi and transplantation of paddy are in progress. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects of the season are good. Cattle are generally healthy and water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 6 inches 1 cent. Transplantation of rice continues. Prices of food grains are stationary. The public health is fair. Water and fooder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was light in Coimbatore, Madura and Tinnevelly, fair in Madras, Salem, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, Pudukkottai, Ramnad and Travancore, heavy in the Vizagapatam Agency, Kurnool, Cuddapah and Malabar, very heavy in South Canara and good elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but have withered in parts of one district for want of water and have been damaged in parts of another by pests. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding in parts with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is insufficient in parts of Ganjam, Anantapur, Nellore, South Arcot, Chittoor, North Arcot, Salem and the southern parts and sufficient elsewhere. Pasture is insufficient in parts of four districts, fairly sufficient in Bellary and sufficient elsewhere. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

WHEAT.

RESOLUTION.

Simla, the 17th August 1916.

The Government of India have had under their consideration the Report by Mr. M. M. S. Gubbay, C.I.E., I C.S., on the operations conducted under his control as Wheat Commissioner for India during the period from April to October 1915. The Report is now published for general information, with the exception of certain passages dealing with details of the business management of the exporting agent firms, the relations of which with the Government were on an intimate and confidential basis: and as the purchase and export of wheat on a large scale under the scheme of agency came to an end some time before the close of the period with which the Report deals, and were not resumed again to any appreciable extent before the re-opening of private export on the 1st May 1916, the Government of India take this opportunity of reviewing the work accomplished by the Wheat Commissioner and his staff during the export season of 1915.

2. The main lines of the action taken by Government are already well known to the public, and the general wheat policy of the Government of India and its financial results have been explained in some considerable degree of detail by the Honourable the Finance Member in introducing the Financial Statement. Few further remarks are, therefore, required on that portion of the Wheat Commissioner's Report which deals with the Wheat Scheme as a whole. The Wheat Commissioner places the approximate net expenditure incurred in India in connection with the scheme at £4,634,156, leaving as the estimated profits of the scheme from receipts in England the substantial balance of £132,211. The figures for expenditure are not yet entirely based on actuals, but no large variation is to be expected. A brief Report on the operations subsequent to October 1915 will be published later, and this will contain the final figures of the net profits of the scheme. Much of the success of the scheme depended on the judgment shown in determining the Government purchase price from time to time and in fixing the maximum quantities up to which the firms were authorised to purchase. Unduly large allotments and undue hesitancy in reducing prices might have resulted in larger exports, but would have been injurious to the interests of the consumer. In advising the Government of India in respect of these very important points, the Wheat Commissioner depended for his data on the collation of reports from the provincial Directors of Agriculture and from officers of selected wheat districts and of States and Agencies in Central India and Rajputana and weekly statements of the movements of wheat on the railways. The Wheat Commissioner rightly expresses his indebtedness to the officers concerned for the information supplied, and the Government of India gratefully acknowledge the assistance thus given by the Local Governments, the Darbars and the Railway Administrations.

3. The greater portion of the actual work performed by the Wheat Commissioner and his staff was concerned with the operations of the ten selected firms in their capacity of Government agents. The general lines of the scheme were as follows. The firms were treated as agents; their remuneration consisted solely of a commission, all profits arising from their operations being credited to Government account and the actual cost of the wheat being paid by Government as well as the charges of railing, storing, handling and shipping at the port of shipment. In addition, Government undertook to re-imburse the firms their establishment and other fixed charges incurred in connection with the purchase of wheat on the basis of actual and approved expenditure. All allowances and discounts admitted by the custom of the trade, as well as any actual recoveries from sellers or from other sources in respect of wheat purchased for Government, were credited to Government. The actual cost of each parcel purchased could not be exactly ascertained immediately on its arrival at the port, and it was therefore necessary for the Wheat Commissioner to settle with each firm individually a pro formâ invoice or formula on which, given purchase price and railway freight, the cost of the wheat for shipment at the ports could be ascertained with a considerable approach to accuracy, thereby enabling all but a small proportion of the outgoings of the firms to be made over to them almost immediately in the form of advance payments. The initial formula was based on the firms' method and cost of working, as determined by their experience in previous years, but the details were eventually modified to a considerable extent in consequence of the close and continuous check applied by the Wheat Commissioner and his staff. An audit of the actual charges incurred by the firms had ultimately to be effected, and the advance payments made on the pro formâ invoices adjusted against the actual totals as ascertained by audit. The final figures, as adjusted, subject to a settlement of payments due for godown rents and establishment charges, amount to Rs. 6,90,37,103, and it is a tribute to the efficient initial organisation devised by the Wheat Commissioner for the working of the system, and to the services of Mr. A. C. McWatters, I.C.S., and the Assistant Wheat Commissioners, in Mr. Gubbay's acknowledgment of which the Government of India fully concur, that the whole of the accounts of the transactions of the agent firms were offered for audit within six weeks of the last shipment. The report of the Auditor showed that the firms' accounts had been prepared with a high degree of accuracy and carefulness. For these results much credit is due to the loyal co-operation and the whole-hearted assistance of the members of the selected agent firms; to these gentlemen the thanks of the Government of India have been separately conveyed.

4. In conclusion, the Government of India note with satisfaction that these large and complicated transactions were disposed of by the Wheat Commissioner with a comparatively small and inexpensive staff, and that the total expenditure which must be debited against the receipts of the scheme on account of the staff and office up to the end of December was Rs. 66,065-12-2.

5. The Report is a most valuable record of an entirely novel and very successful Government enterprise, and the Government of India desire to place on record their full appreciation of the eminent services rendered by Mr. Gubbay in connection with the scheme.

ORDERED that a copy of the Resolution be forwarded to the Governments of Bombay, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab and the United Provinces, to the Honourable the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Honourable the Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor General, North-West Frontier Province, the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, the Department of Revenue and Agriculture, the Finance and the Foreign and Political Departments, the Director General of Commercial Intelligence, the Director of Statistics and the Wheat Commissioner for India.

ORDERED also that the Resolution and the Report (with the omission of paragraphs 63 to 76 and Appendix B) be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information.

Secretary to the Government of India.

M. M. S. GUBBAY, Esq., C.I.E., I.C.S.,
LATELY WHEAT COMMISSIONER,

TO

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY DEPARTMENT.

Delhi, the 27th January 1916.

SIR,

I have the honour to forward a report on the operations conducted under my control as Wheat Commissioner for India. These operations cover the period from the 9th April 1915, the date on which I assumed charge of my duties in India, until the middle of October 1915. The last consignment of wheat bought on account of Government in that period was shipped from Karachi in the middle of August. The present is, therefore, a suitable opportunity for reviewing the operations undertaken in the first stage of the Wheat Scheme. Complete figures are, it is true, not yet available so as to show the final profit or loss. But all the wheat purchased and shipped in the period referred to has been sold in England. Again, the transactions in India for the period in question have so far been completed that final accounts have been made up and have been audited by officers appointed for the purpose by Government, the only outstanding points being the fixed charges for Establishment and Godown Rent, as to which a final settlement is only possible at the close of the year.

The various matters dealt with in this report cannot, however, be fully understood without a brief review of the circumstances leading up to Government's decision in February 1915 to prohibit all export of wheat from India except under the supervision of Government and save in certain exceptional cases, for Government account.

PART I.

THE GOVERNMENT WHEAT POLICY.

Wheat crop of 1913-14.

2. The wheat crop of 1913-14 was an indifferent crop. The seasonal conditions were favourable in the Punjab where, despite a contraction in the area sown, the outturn was estimated at nearly 25 per cent above that of the preceding year. In the United Provinces, however, and in the Bombay Presidency, as also in most of the Rajputana and Central India States, the crop suffered considerably through drought. The total area under wheat in India was returned at 27,697,000 acres; the yield at 8,427,000 tons. Both these figures were the lowest on record since 1908-09.

Other food grains.

3. Other food grains fared even worse. In the United Provinces the acreage under barley, jowar, bajra, maize and gram fell considerably short of the previous year's figures. In Bombay and the Central Provinces the jowar crop, which is grown over a considerable area in these Provinces, yielded less than in 1912-13. Complete statistical data are not available as regards the area and yield of these subsidiary food crops, but the following table based on the Estimates of Area and Yield of Principal Crops in 1913-14 published by the Department of Statistics will illustrate the character of the harvest of these crops :—

Wheat exports.

4. Consequently, on the opening of the wheat export season in April 1914, all indications pointed to a serious contraction in the amount of wheat available for export. So far were the United Provinces from being in a position to spare wheat for export, they were, in fact, attracting supplies from the Punjab to supplement the deficiency in the harvest of wheat and food grains. Similarly, the Central Provinces, Central India and Bombay could not be counted on to furnish supplies of wheat for export. Nevertheless a not inconsiderable quantity of wheat was shipped in the first four months of the export year. The export in this period, amounting to 372,000 tons, was almost exclusively confined to Karachi, and, as subsequent events proved, must have represented a substantial portion of the surplus available for export from the wheat harvest of 1913-14.

Price retail and wholesale.

5. The character of the season was reflected in prices both wholesale and retail. Even before the outbreak of the war prices of wheat in India had already reached a level considerably above the normal. At the end of July 1914, the retail price was 9 seers to the rupee at Jubbulpore, 9½ seers at Cawnpore, 9¾ seers at Delhi, and 10¾ seers at Meerut, compared with an average price during the latter half of July in the years 1910-13 of 11⅛ seers to the rupee. In August prices slightly hardened and a similar tendency was observed in September. But it is not clear how far these variations were entirely due to the war. That an important factor, at this stage, was the long break in the monsoon, with the consequent fear of a serious crop failure, is indicated by the fact that with the copious rainfall in the middle of September, the tendency to a rise received a slight check, notably in the Punjab. On the 30th September retail prices were as follows :—

At Lahore 10¼ seers to the rupee.

„ Delhi and Meerut 9 seers to the rupee.

„ Cawnpore and Jubbulpore 8¾ seers to the rupee.

In October, the upward movement became more marked and more rapid. The closing of the Dardanelles to the export of Russian wheat and the intervention of Turkey in the war, were doubtless the main factors in this rise. An additional factor in the situation was the demand for seed, the sowing for the coming season being unusually large. There had also in the meanwhile been no slackening in the external demand for Indian wheat. The combination of these factors resulted in a very rapid advance in prices which, by the end of November, had risen fully fifty per cent above normal. Prices at five selected centres on the 30th November compare with prices on the 1st and 15th October and 1st and 15th November as follows :—

	1st October.	15th October.	1st November.	15th November.	30th November.
Lahore (seers to the rupee) ...	10¼	10	9¼	8¼	8
Delhi	9	9	8¼	7½	7½
Cawnpore	8¾	8½	8½	7½	7½
Meerut	9	8¾	8½	8	7½
Jubbulpore	8¾	8½	8½	8	8

Wholesale prices had in the same period risen, but rather more unevenly. At Karachi wheat was selling on the 31st July at Rs. 3-15-2 per maund. By the 15th September it had risen to Rs. 4-8-9. The mid-September rains probably account for the slight fall to Rs. 4-7-9 on the 30th September and to Rs. 4-7-3 on the 15th October. On the 31st October the price jumped to Rs. 4-12-3 and again to Rs. 5-3-9 on the 15th November. On the 30th November the price had receded to Rs. 5-0-3. Calcutta recorded an even greater rise though the intermediate fluctuations—probably as a result of the presence of the "Emden" in the Bay of Bengal—were more violent : on the 31st July Club No. 2 was quoted at Calcutta at Rs. 4-5-10 per maund, on the 30th November the quotation rose to Rs. 5-9-6. In Bombay, on the other hand, the rise was not so marked, and Delhi No. 1 was quoted on the 30th November at Rs. 4-8-0 as against Rs. 4-1-9 on the 31st of July. In estimating the influences affecting the wholesale prices at ports, it must be remembered, as already observed, that exports from Calcutta and Bombay were insignificant, and that of the total exports up to 30th November from India amounting to 620,000 tons, Karachi shipped no less than 610,000 tons.

Government action. The Articles of Commerce Ordinance, 1914.

6. The situation created by the general rise of prices following the outbreak of war had as early as August formed the subject of anxious consideration both by the Government of India and the Local Governments. In September the Government of the Punjab drew attention to the economic disturbance and political danger likely to be caused by the rise which had even then taken place. The chief cause of this rise was ascribed to speculation and to purchases for export. The high prices were, it was stated, not justified by the then existing stocks or by future prospects which, consequent on the mid-September rains, had become extremely good. Again, the unforeseen rise had benefited not the producers who had already parted with their stocks, but the middlemen. Various remedies were suggested to meet the situation; but it was felt that any drastic or unusual action should be deferred until it could be clearly determined whether the rise in prices was merely temporary. In October, however, complaints were frequent in the Indian Press to the effect that prices of country produce had risen seriously owing to combinations of merchants whose object was to force up prices artificially; and Local Governments were invited to consider the situation de novo. By November the rise had, as indicated above, become so marked that in the Punjab and Delhi the prices of wheat were practically at famine rates. Both the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and the Chief Commissioner urgently recommended the intervention of Government to mitigate a situation which threatened to become dangerous. The prospects of the rabi crop were excellent, and the rise was believed to have been caused by speculative buying for export. Proposals were submitted to the Government of India that the export of wheat should be controlled, if not prohibited. A prohibition of export could, however, be only partial since it could not be extended to apply to shipments to the United Kingdom: while any measure affecting exports, whether prohibition or control, would require the previous consent of the Home Government. In the meantime urgent action was essential and Government on the 30th November accordingly took power by Ordinance to call for returns of food stocks and to take over stocks unreasonably withheld from markets. It was, however, recognised that this measure would probably need to be supplemented by some measure of control over exports; and it was decided to convene a Conference at which the export trade would be represented, as well as the Local Governments of the Punjab, United Provinces and Delhi.

Restriction of exports of wheat and wheat flour from 28th December 1914 until 31st March 1915.

7. This Conference, which was held on December 4th, recommended the restriction of exports between the 1st December 1914 and the 15th April 1915. The representatives of the export trade admitted that some control of exports was essential if the Ordinance were to be effective; and they realised that the situation in the Punjab called for remedial measures. It was also felt that the application to Indian middlemen of the Ordinance would be resented if no restrictions were placed on the operations of the European export firms. The proposal to restrict exports was accepted by the Secretary of State, and on the 28th December Government announced that the export of wheat and wheat flour till the 31st March 1915 would be limited to 100,000 tons, exports to places outside the British Dominions being prohibited except under special license. This amount, which was fixed after estimating the surplus of the 1913-14 crop available for export and the probable demand for local consumption, was distributed between Karachi, Bombay and Calcutta on the basis of the average trade of these ports for the last three years. The quantity allotted to each port was distributed among exporting firms in proportion to the average of the business done by them in the same period.

Course of prices subsequent to the Government order of the 28th December 1914.

8. The announcement made on December 28th, 1914, marks the first stage of State intervention. It was hoped, though it was perhaps not generally believed, that the effect of the measures taken would be to reduce, or at any rate to check the rise in prices. In this, however, they failed. Prices continued to rise. The following table compares prices on the 15th and last day of December with those recorded on the corresponding dates in January and February.

	15th December.	31st December.	15th January.	31st January.	15th February.	28th February.
Lahore (seers to the rupee).	8¼	8	8	7½	6½	7¼
Delhi ...	7	7¼	7	7	6¼	6¼
Cawnpore ...	7¼	7¼	7	6¾	6	6⅛
Meerut	8	7¾	7	6½	5¾	6⅛
Jubbulpore ...	7½	7⅛	7	6¼	6	6⅛

These prices have scarcely been exceeded in the worst famine years. At Lyallpur the retail price of wheat on February 6th was 7¼ seers to the rupee as compared with 12¾ seers on the same day in 1914, the highest figure ever recorded in Lyallpur being 7 seers in the famine year 1896-97.

9. As to the causes responsible for this rise in prices and the failure of the measures described above to check this rise, opinions will differ. In some quarters the belief was at one time held that the rise in prices from September was to some considerable extent due to activity by the exporting firms, who, it was stated, were buying, not entirely to meet an existing demand in markets outside India, but for speculative purposes with the object of selling subsequently at a profit when stocks had been depleted by the war. It is, of course, the fact that the high prices offered in the United Kingdom did stimulate exports. Choice White Karachi, for instance, which was selling in England at 37-6 per quarter on the 22nd June 1914 was quoted on the 30th November at 48 and on the 4th January at 54. But speculative transactions of this character are opposed both to the ordinary practice of the European exporting houses and to their own interest, nor do the statistics of exports confirm the view just quoted. Of the total exports from India in the twelve months April 1914 to March 1915, amounting to 706,000 tons, 372,000 tons were shipped before the end of July 1914, and an additional 248,000 tons before the 30th November. Certainly if such speculative transactions had really been responsible for the rise in prices before December 1914, the action taken by the Government in limiting exports for the rest of the season, whereby such transactions became almost impossible in respect of the old crop, must have reacted, to some extent at least, on prices. In my view, the most potent factor in the situation was the depletion of stocks. As has already been shown, the wheat crop of 1913-14 was the smallest on record since 1908-09 : while many of the other food crops were also indifferent. No definite statistics are available as regards the internal consumption of wheat, but the following figures will show the relation between production and export since 1908-09 :—

Year.	Production in 000 tons.	Export in 000 tons in following year.	Balance.
1908-09 ...	7,639	1,050	6,589
1909-10 ...	9,633	1,266	8,367
1910-11 ...	10,061	1,361	8,700
1911-12 ...	9,924	1,660	8,264
1912-13 ...	9,599	1,202	8,397
1913-14 ...	8,427	706	7,721

If the figures shown in column 4 can be regarded as indicating the amount required in India to provide for food, seed, and the usual stocks, whether domestic or trading, the average annual requirement according to the statistics for the five years 1908-09 to 1912-13 will be 8,063,000 tons. But it has also to be remembered, firstly, that there is evidence that the consumption of wheat in India has recently been increasing and, secondly, that in 1914 there was an additional demand for seed for the increased area of about five million acres which were sown with wheat. On the other hand, account must be taken of the influence of prices on consumption. To what extent this influence operates in India is obscure, since there is evidence that in the Punjab, at any rate, the substitution of other grain for wheat is attended with some difficulty. In particular, in 1914, the application of this general law must be regarded as qualified by the failure of other crops. While it is not possible to translate these considerations into exact arithmetical quantities, it will probably be admitted that the demands both from within as well from outside India, were of such a magnitude as to impose a considerable strain on the stocks in the country. My personal view is that the crop of 1913-14 was barely sufficient to meet the requirements of India for food, stocks and seed; and that therefore the export of 706,000 tons in 1914-15 must be regarded in the light of an overdraft which it was hoped to make good from the surplus of the following year's crop. This view is confirmed by the reports received from the Local Governments of wheat available on the 31st January 1915 as compared with the same date in the preceding year. The deficiencies in stock were estimated as follows:—

Punjab and Sind :	25 per cent
United Provinces :	7½ ,,
Central Provinces :	47 ,,
Bihar and Orissa :	50 ,,
Bombay :	7 ,,

In parts of the Central Provinces, it was stated that the agriculturist could only obtain seed for his crop of 1914-15 with the greatest difficulty. The Punjab Government reported that replies to censuses made under the Articles of Commerce Ordinance 1914 had made it clear that no large stocks were held. From Lyallpur, the principal wheat market of the province, it was reported that purchases for export of the old crop had ceased and that the stock of wheat in the district was estimated to be not more than was normally required for local consumption in four months.

The above considerations appear to justify the conclusion that the shortage stocks was the principal cause of the continued rise of prices during January and February 1915.

Necessity for further action.

10. The action taken by Government on the 28th of December 1914 was clearly only of a temporary character. It did not apply to the new crop which would become available for export from April 1915 onwards. It was reported in January and February 1915 that forward purchases were being made of the new crop at high prices, and the state of the world's markets pointed to a large further demand for export. The Punjab Government reported in February that both export firms and Indian dealers were buying forward at prices varying from Rs. 3-12-0 to Rs. 4-8-0 per maund and that it was probable, in view of the recent news of the phenomenal price of May wheat in Chicago, that higher prices were already being offered and a still further enhancement might be expected in the near future. In addition, the general uncertainty caused by the war was a potent factor in maintaining prices at a high level.

Announcement on the 26th February 1915 of prohibition of private export of wheat and wheat flour after 1st April 1915.

11. The position in the middle of February made it clear that unrestricted export could not be permitted after the 31st March. Famine prices were causing acute distress among the poorer classes of the population and had already led in the Punjab to a considerable increase in dacoities and other serious attacks on property and to an increasing spirit of lawlessness over a large part of the province. Agitators also were taking advantage of the distress caused by high prices to arouse dangerous political feeling. About this time serious incidents occurred at Lahore, grain riots were anticipated not only in the Punjab but at Peshawar, and the necessity for further remedial measures was being urged on the Government in the Press and at public meetings by representatives of all classes and interests. Immediate action was clearly called for and on the 26th February the Government of India issued the following communiqué announcing the prohibition of private export of wheat and wheat flour up to the 31st December 1915:—

> "The Government of India have decided to prohibit private export of wheat and wheat flour up to the 31st December next. The sole object of the Government in effecting this prohibition is to control local prices, which would otherwise rise in sympathy with prices all over the world, and produce distress in India in spite of an excellent harvest. It is not, however, the intention of the Government, especially during a year when so many of the crops produced in India have lost their market and when there is reason to believe that the wheat crop is largely in excess of the requirements of the country, to disappoint the legitimate expectations of the Indian cultivator by continuing to prevent all export beyond the point when it has been established clearly that there is a surplus available over and above the needs of the country, and so long as prices can be successfully controlled. The necessary arrangements are therefore under consideration to permit of the exportation of any available surplus through the ordinary channels of trade and at the usual season, but subject to the strictest supervision of and control by Government."

12. So far as the danger from high prices in India was concerned, the situation could perhaps have been met by the continuation of the prohibition on export until prices reached a reasonable figure, but the interests of the Indian cultivator had also to be considered. Moreover, since India is a regular exporter of wheat to the United Kingdom, especially in the months from April to July before the American crop comes on the Home markets, it was evident that the prohibition of export of wheat from India, unless accompanied by an announcement calculated to reassure the market that a supply from India would be forthcoming, would have seriously affected supplies and prices in the United Kingdom. The conditions caused by the war, particularly the closing of the Dardanelles to the export of Russian wheat, made this consideration particularly important. The Government of India readily accepted the view that Imperial considerations required that during the regular season of active exports there should be a continuous export from India of reasonable quantities of wheat. Every indication pointed to a large surplus being available for export. An exceptionally large area had been sown, the winter rains had been favourable and an outturn of approximately 10¼ million tons was anticipated, so that it was estimated that the surplus available for export might even reach 2 million tons.

13. The scheme framed by Government had, therefore, to satisfy three conditions and three separate interests. Firstly, from the point of view of the Indian consumer it had to ensure the reduction of prices in India as soon as possible from the dangerous height to which they had risen and their maintenance at a reasonable level. Secondly, from the point of view of the Indian cultivator, it had to secure a fair price for his crop so as not to disappoint his legitimate expectations of a good profit. Thirdly, from the point of view of the United Kingdom and of the Empire, it had to guarantee that the quantity available for export should be directed to the United Kingdom where it was urgently required and that this supply should be forthcoming in the early months of the season when it was most wanted

14. Various schemes were considered and rejected as not satisfying all the three necessary conditions, e.g., (a) a limitation of export to some specified quantity either for the entire year or for some portion of the year, (b) an export duty either with limited or unlimited exports and either on a fixed or sliding scale, (c) a fixed maximum retail price with an export duty corresponding to the difference between English and Indian prices. Opinions will doubtless differ as to how far the situation could have been met by the adoption of these or any other scheme which may have been suggested. It will be sufficient for the purpose of this report to state briefly the scheme approved by Government and to indicate how far it effected the three objects which Government had in view.

15. The essential feature of the scheme was, as has already been explained, the prohibition of the export of wheat from India save on behalf of the Crown, exceptions being made only in favour of contracts for export entered into prior to the 26th February 1915, the date on which the Government of India announced their intention to prohibit exports. This embargo, which it was eventually decided after consultation with the export trade to maintain till the 31st March 1916, instead of, as was at first intended, the 31st December 1915, was promulgated in a Notification No. 3195-W. of the 25th March 1915 under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, a similar restriction on the export of wheat flour being applied under Notification No. 3196-W. of the same date.

A complete control over exports was thus secured to Government, who simultaneously announced their intention to adopt the following measures in pursuance of their assurance to provide, under certain conditions as to price and destination, an outlet for the exportable surplus of the crop of 1914-15 :—(1) Government would purchase, up to a certain quantity, wheat for export through the leading exporting firms in India. (2) A price would be announced at which Government would begin to purchase for April shipment. This initial price would be relatively high and would be lowered for May and later shipments, with the intention of effecting a steady reduction in prices to a figure which would take due account of the necessities of the consumer and the reasonable expectations of the cultivators. (3) Any difference between Indian and world prices, less the remuneration of the Agent Firms and other necessary expenses, would accrue to the Government of India as a profit, and would probably be earmarked for special purposes. (4) The interests of Indian consumers in Eastern countries would be considered and care would be taken that the necessary supplies of wheat should be made available for them. (5) The export of wheat flour would be restricted for the same period to an amount approximately equal to the quantity exported during the year 1913-14, which would be allotted among the various milling interests concerned.

It is important to note that an assurance was received from His Majesty's Government that the net loss, should such arise in working the scheme for purchase of wheat for the United Kingdom, would be borne by the Treasury. The control of exports to places outside the United Kingdom and the Eastern countries specified above vested in a Committee, known as the Indian Wheat Committee, appointed at Home to represent His Majesty's Government.

How far the scheme effected its three main objects.

16. How far the objects aimed at by this scheme were effected will appear from what follows :—

(1) The reduction in Indian prices.—This was the first and most urgent consideration. On the publication of Government's decision on the 26th February prices began to fall. On the 28th February retail prices of wheat were $6\frac{1}{4}$ seers to the rupee at Delhi, $6\frac{1}{8}$ seers at Jubbulpore, Cawnpore and Meerut, and $7\frac{1}{4}$ seers at Lahore. On the 15th March they were $6\frac{1}{8}$ seers at Jubbulpore, $6\frac{3}{4}$ seers at Cawnpore, 7 seers at Delhi, $7\frac{1}{4}$ seers at Meerut and $7\frac{1}{2}$ seers at Lahore. By the 31st March prices at Delhi and Meerut had relapsed to 6 and $6\frac{1}{4}$ seers, respectively, but at Cawnpore and Lahore they had fallen to $7\frac{3}{4}$ seers and at Jubbulpore to $8\frac{1}{4}$ seers. By the 15th April prices at Delhi were $7\frac{3}{4}$ seers, Lahore 8 seers, Meerut $8\frac{1}{4}$, Jubbulpore and Cawnpore $8\frac{1}{2}$, and by the 15th May at Cawnpore 9 seers, at Jubbulpore and Delhi $9\frac{1}{2}$ at Meerut 10 and Lahore $11\frac{1}{4}$. The movements of prices and their relation to Government's purchases and the fixation of the maximum price will be examined in the narrative of operations. It is sufficient at the present stage to point out that the general effect of Government's policy undoubtedly was to relieve the extreme distress caused by high prices in the early months of the year.

(2) The profits of the Indian cultivator.—The maximum price fixed at first by Government, Rs. 5-12-0 per maund f.o.b. at Bombay and Karachi, was admittedly a very generous one. It corresponds approximately to a wholesale price of Rs. 4-10-0 at Lyallpur, and cultivators who hastened to sell at this price reaped a handsome profit. The lowest price fixed at any time by Government was Rs. 4-10-9 per maund f.o.b. corresponding to Rs. 3-8-9 at Lyallpur, and the price at which the majority of purchases were made was Rs. 4-14-9 (equivalent to a price at Lyallpur of Rs. 3-12-9). The price of Rs. 4-10-9 was freely offered throughout July without attracting sellers on any large scale and this offer was continued throughout August, September and October without any purchases resulting. It is clear, therefore, that the interests of cultivators were liberally considered. In normal years an upcountry wholesale price of Rs. 3 per maund has been estimated as providing a fair profit, and the following are the average annual wholesale prices of wheat per maund in each of the last ten years at Ferozepore and Delhi :—

—	1913.	1912	1911.	1910.	1909.	1908.	1907.	1906.	1905.	1904.

Delhi	3·66	3·36	3·14	3·46	4·30	4·77	3·67	3·18	3·06	2·46

(3) The provision of supplies for the United Kingdom.—The actual quantity shipped on account of Government to the United Kingdom was 528,533 tons, to which must be added 95,440 tons shipped on private account. This supply appears to have been sufficient to meet requirements and the fact of a steady supply of Indian wheat being assured during the inter-harvest months was undoubtedly one of the factors which resulted in the fall in Home prices of about 17*s.* per quarter which took place during the first half of June. In estimating the value of this supply to the United Kingdom it should be remembered that although the total quantity exported during the early months of the present season was less than had been anticipated, the export of wheat from British India to the United Kingdom during the four months April to July of the present year was larger than exports in the same period in any year since 1910-11.

Decision as to the policy to be adopted in the autumn of 1915.

(a) Conference of 23rd September 1915.

(b) Corrected estimate of the crop of 1914-15 and of exportable surplus.

17. To complete this review of the leading features of the Government wheat policy it is necessary to refer in some detail to the proceedings of and the decisions taken at the Conference held in Simla on September the 23rd. This Conference, which was attended by representatives of the Governments of the Punjab, the United Provinces, Bombay and the Central Provinces, was called to consider the policy which should be adopted during the autumn of 1915. Under the influence of the monsoon, prices had risen by the end of July to such a level as to make ineffective the offer to purchase at Rs. 4-10-9 f.o.b. per maund. Certain preliminary questions, however, had to be considered. Firstly, whether the experience of the harvest indicated that any change was necessary in the Forecast as to the outturn of the crop of 1914-15. Secondly, what stocks had accumulated in the wheat producing provinces, and whether these would be sufficient to provide for home consumption, seeding and the usual carry-over into the new year and to make good the depletion in the stocks of the previous year. Thirdly, what modification, if any, was necessary in the estimate of the exportable surplus. On the answer to these questions depended largely what policy should be adopted in the autumn of 1915. Accordingly in August Local Governments were invited to examine the situation in their provinces from the point of view suggested by these preliminary considerations. The Conference, however, at which the views of the Local Governments on these questions came up for discussion, was not held till the end of September when the character of the September rains, which are of special importance for seeding operations, had been ascertained.

In paragraph 12 above, it has been explained that the probable exportable surplus of the crop of 1914-15 was taken at two million tons. This estimate was made in February 1915, when it was estimated, subject to certain reservations, that the outturn would reach 10½ million tons; so that, assuming the internal consumption to be 8 to 8½ million tons, the amount available for export could be estimated at 2 million tons. It was, however, pointed out that this estimate was liable to correction.

The first general Memorandum on the wheat crop of 1914-15 issued on the 30th December 1914, on which the above estimates were based, was only a preliminary forecast of the cropped area which was placed at 28,694,000 acres. The second forecast, issued on the 6th March, carried matters generally down to the middle of February and placed the acreage at 32,028,000 acres. Of the condition of the crops this forecast stated that the Punjab crop was in exceptionally good condition everywhere except in a few districts in the west. As to the United Provinces crop, where the acreage was placed at 7,450,000 acres (that is to say, 44·2 per cent above the area at the corresponding date in the previous year) it was stated that :—

(1) in the Meerut, Agra and Rohilkhund divisions the crop was a good one and was then (24th February) estimated at 90 to 100 per cent of the normal;

(2) in the Allahabad and Oudh divisions it was estimated at 85 to 90 per cent;

(3) in the Benares and Gorakhpur divisions owing to damage caused by drought and white ants it was thin and estimated at 75 per cent of the normal.

The Special Forecast issued on April 14th raised the acreage to 32,148,000 acres, and estimated the yield at 10,293,000 tons. The estimate of yield in the Punjab was based on the condition of the crop at the end of March and was regarded as probably an underestimate; in the United Provinces the outturn per acre for the province as a whole was estimated at 90 per cent of the normal as also in the Central Provinces.

In the Final Memorandum issued on May 27th the total outturn for India was taken at 10,269,000 tons, a slight falling off on the estimate of the Special Forecast; but was subsequently raised by a revised estimate from the Punjab, placing the acreage of that province at 11,323,000 acres and outturn at 3,974,000 tons, the all-India outturn being thereby increased to 10,318,000 tons. The descriptive reports stated for the Punjab, that the crop did 'not thresh out so well as was expected'; and for the United Provinces that the crop was estimated at 85 per cent of the normal instead of 90 per cent. This Final Memorandum was written after the effects of the unseasonable weather at the end of March and beginning of April could have been ascertained; and it must be assumed that the necessary corrections were made in the estimate of outturn.

Early in May certain doubts began to be felt as to the probability of the outturn reaching the figure given in the Special Forecast. In the Central Provinces there were many indications that the crop had been overestimated; the overestimate being placed by some authorities as high as 200,000 tons. As regards the United Provinces crop, the quality of the wheat in certain districts of those Provinces where the Agent firms had been purchasing on behalf of Government, was so inferior that attention was called to it from London, and as early as the middle of May some of the Agent firms had ceased to purchase in parts of the United Provinces, because the first purchases had proved unsatisfactory in quality. As regards the Punjab crop, the reports received by the Agent firms from their agencies up-country indicated that the outturn would be very light in the eastern and northern districts of the Punjab, as well as in the west of the United Provinces. It was the opinion of one of the Agent firms that the Government estimate should be reduced by at least 5 per cent in the case of the Punjab, and 10 per cent in that of the United Provinces.

These doubts as to the outturn of the crop were confirmed by the representatives of the Local Governments who attended the Conference of September the 23rd. The Central Provinces Administration and the Governments of the United Provinces and of the Punjab officially reduced their estimates respectively by 100,000 tons, 73,000 tons, and 200,000 tons. The total outturn of this year's crop may therefore be taken at 9,918,000 tons. This revised figure takes no account of any change necessary in the Central India crop, as to which no definite data are available, but it is a relevant consideration that certain of the Native States imposed an export duty on wheat leaving their territories. This step could only have been dictated by the necessity of preserving sufficient stocks in their territories.

The next point considered by the Conference was the question of stocks in the three chief wheat producing Provinces, namely, the Central Provinces, United Provinces, and the Punjab. The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces was emphatically of the opinion that so far from having any surplus available for export, the Central Provinces would need to import until the coming harvest was secured. The United Provinces, where stocks had been damaged by the recent floods, would, it was estimated, be able to carry on with their present stocks, provided that no demand for export to other parts of India or to oversea markets was made. The Punjab alone had a surplus and in order to estimate the quantity available for export from that Province an endeavour was made to contrast the position on the 1st April 1915 with the position on the corresponding date in the previous four years. From this comparison, after allowing for the exports in the six months ended the 1st October 1915, it was concluded that the Punjab could spare 600,000 tons for export to all destinations. The total exportable surplus of the crop of 1914-15 may accordingly be estimated at a million and two hundred and fifty thousand tons, of which already by the 1st October 1915 637,000 tons had been exported, apart from the quantity exported in the form of wheat flour.

Following on these conclusions, the Conference unanimously recommended that the control over exports should be maintained and that private trading should not be resumed for the present. The necessity was also emphasized of an early announcement as to the intention of Government in regard to exports after the 31st March 1916, to prevent forward dealings of which there were already indications.

PART II.

The Wheat Scheme and Operations conducted from April to October 1915.

SECTION I.

ORGANISATION AND STAFF.

18. As already mentioned in the first paragraph of this report I arrived in India on the 9th April 1915 and took over on that date the duties of Wheat Commissioner for India. Prior to my departure from England on the 20th March, I had been a temporary member of the Indian Wheat Committee which was appointed in England about the beginning of that month under the Chairmanship of Lord Lucas. On arrival in India my first duties were the organisation of the necessary staff, the completion of the arrangements already in train for the receipt of information regarding wheat prices and movements, the fixation of procedure for Agent firms and the settlement of the firms' pro forma invoices. The two latter points, which were of considerable importance and complexity, will be dealt with separately in due course.

Staff.

19. The clerical staff appointed at my Headquarters consisted at its maximum of two shorthand typists, an accountant, an assistant accountant, three clerks and three typists. These appointments were made from time to time as required and reductions in the staff were made from July onwards when the pressure of work diminished. Clerical staff consisting in each case of one accountant, one clerk and one typist were appointed at Bombay and at Calcutta for the Assistant Wheat Commissioners at those ports. The headquarter staff was throughout under the immediate control of Mr. A. C. McWatters, I.C.S., Assistant Wheat Commissioner, who was appointed on the 22nd March. Mr. C. R. Watkins, Mr. C. W. Jacob, I.C.S., and Mr. E. Sheepshanks, I. C. S., were appointed Assistant Wheat Commissioners with effect from the 2nd April, the 12th May and the 24th May, respectively.

Mr. Watkins was in charge of operations at Bombay from the end of April when my headquarters were moved to Karachi until the 6th August, when on his appointment to the Collectorship of Customs at Basrah, he was succeeded at Bombay by Mr. Sheepshanks. Mr. Jacob was in charge of operations at Calcutta from the last week in May until the end of August. Mr. Sheepshanks toured in the Punjab from the 30th June until the first week of August and inspected the up-country accounts of the Agent firms. I was myself on tour during a great part of the summer, viz., from the 19th to 24th April (at Karachi); from the 20th May to the 13th June (at Bombay, Calcutta and Simla); and from the 25th June to the 5th September (at Bombay, Poona, Nagpur, Calcutta, Simla and Bombay). Later, I attended the Conference held at Simla on the 23rd September.

Information supplied by local officers and Railway Companies.

20. With the permission of Local Governments information regarding wheat prices and movements, the outturn of the crop, and the effect of Government purchases on the market, etc., was sent to me weekly by District Officers of selected districts in the Punjab, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, Bombay and Bihar, and also with the permission of the Foreign and Political Department of the Government of India and by the courtesy of the Durbars, similar information was supplied regularly by the principal States and Agencies in Central India and Rajputana. The Directors of Agriculture in the principal wheat-growing provinces were in regular correspondence with me on the subject of the outturn and extent of the wheat crop in their provinces, the course of prices, agricultural prospects and other matters of importance affecting the operations or influencing future policy. Daily telegrams of wheat prices were sent to me from Lahore, Delhi, Meerut, Cawnpore and Jubbulpore. The movements of wheat by rail from stations on the North-Western Railway in the Punjab were reported weekly by the Railway authorities to District Officers and this information was included in the weekly reports sent by the latter to me, while the movements of wheat from stations on the Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways were ascertained from weekly figures sent to me by the Railways and from the daily reports of arrivals in Bombay published by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. Figures showing the export of wheat and wheat flour from British India to Kathiawar, Goa and Pondicherry were also furnished to me weekly by the Bombay, Baroda and Central India, the Madras and Southern Mahratta, and the South Indian Railways.

A summary of the information collected from all these sources was included each week in my report to the Government of India on the progress of operations. I take this opportunity of expressing my indebtedness to the officers concerned for much valuable information.

SECTION II.

Relations with Agent Firms.

21. I now proceed to a description of the system which governed my relations with the selected Agent firms. This subject, which is of the first importance, will need somewhat detailed treatment; since, though the principles adopted were of general application to all firms at all three ports, on minor points of actual practice uniformity at all three ports, or as between the different firms at the same port, was not possible, owing to variations in local procedure or the procedure of particular firms.

General principles of Agency.

22. The general principles adopted were as follows:—

(1) The services were utilised, as buying Agents in India and as selling Agents in England, of all the principal firms which had in recent years been regularly engaged in the export of wheat to the United Kingdom.

(2) These firms were treated purely as Agents. Their remuneration consisted solely of a commission, no profit from their operations being admissible otherwise than through their commission. This commission was fixed at 3*d.* per quarter for buying and 3*d.* for selling, plus $\frac{1}{8}$ per cent for guaranteeing the Home buyer. The buying and selling commission was, however, subject to reconsideration, should the shipments on Government account from India exceed 1,000,000 tons.

(3) The actual cost of the wheat, as shown by their Books, Bills, Invoices, etc., was paid by Government as well as the charges for railing, storing, handling and shipping at the port of shipment. But this total cost was not allowed to exceed the price fixed by Government, while all allowances, discounts, etc., allowed by the custom of the trade, as well as any actual recoveries from sellers or other sources in respect of wheat purchased for Government, were credited to Government.

(4) In addition Government undertook to reimburse the firms their fixed charges, on the basis of actual and approved expenditure.

(5) Risk of fire, as well as marine, accident and war risks were borne by Government.

Selection of Firms.

23. The following firms were selected:—

Messrs. Ralli Brothers at Bombay, Calcutta and Karachi.
Louis Dreyfus and Company at Bombay, Calcutta and Karachi.
Sanday Patrick and Company at Karachi.
Sanday and Company at Bombay.
Clements Robson and Company at Karachi.
E. D. Sassoon and Company at Karachi and Calcutta.
Strauss and Company, Limited, at Karachi.
Becker Gray and Company ... ... } At Calcutta.
„ Petrocochino Brothers... ... ... } At Calcutta.
„ Shaw Wallace and Company ... ... } At Calcutta.

Allotments and forward contracts.

24. The programme finally adopted contemplated the purchase at the three ports:—

	Bombay.	Karachi.	Calcutta.
	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.
In April of	25,860	10,800	9,900
In May of	43,500	130,200	38,400
In June of	40,000	219,635	40,000
In July of	...	150,000	...
Total ...	109,360	510,635	88,300

The monthly quantities at each port were allotted to the firms mentioned above on the basis of the amount of business done by each firm in the preceding three years. The allotments actually made are shown in Appendix C, Table No. VIII. Though no formal guarantee to this effect was given, an assurance was held out to the firms that these allotments would ordinarily not be varied, and firms were further permitted, but only after obtaining my consent, to transfer their allotments from one port to another. The condition as to previous sanction was imposed to prevent confusion in the matter of freight engagements, and, as a matter of fact, only 25,150 tons were so transferred. It was found necessary owing to the difficulty of obtaining freight in June, to refuse permission for the transfer of allotments in that month to Karachi. Allotments moreover did not lapse, and firms were allowed to carry over to subsequent months allotments which they had not been able to complete in the preceding month. Forward contracts made by firms prior to the date of the Government of India's communiqué of the 26th February 1915—this date being subsequently extended to the 10th March—were recognized and shipment of the amount thus contracted for, approximately 100,000 tons, was allowed under license; but in the case of Agent firms these quantities were held to be included in the allotments made to them and their purchases for Government were reduced to this extent The shipments made in accordance with these forward contracts are included in Appendix C, Table No. VI, from which it will be seen that 12,000 tons were shipped to France and 3,000 to South Africa. The bulk of the balance then went to the United Kingdom. Of the wheat shipped to the United Kingdom on private account, 2,877 tons were taken over by Government from Messrs. Sanday and Co., by arrangement with the firm's London House.

Pro Forma Invoices. The Common Pro Forma.

25. In order to determine the price which Government should offer for its purchases of wheat, it was necessary to ascertain the charges which have to be added to the cost price as paid by the Agent firms to the seller. As the Agent firms were to deliver the wheat on board the exporting vessel, the Government price had to be calculated on the basis of f.o.b. To determine this f.o.b. price, the Agent firms were asked to prepare Pro Forma invoices, showing all charges up to f.o.b. These Pro Forma invoices necessarily varied with each port, and with each firm at the same port. This question formed the subject of much discussion at the different conferences held at Delhi, Bombay and Calcutta. In the first instance, however, a Pro Forma invoice was drawn up to which all the firms at each of the three ports signified their assent. This Pro Forma, common to all the firms at each of the ports, was adopted as the basis on which the initial Government price was fixed; and a copy of the common Pro Forma adopted for the Karachi firms is printed on pages 3 and 4 of Appendix B. to this report. It falls, as will be observed, into two parts. The first part refers to the charges incidental to placing the wheat f.o.r. Karachi, the second part refers to the charges from f.o.r. to f.o.b. The Government price was a f.o.b. price and throughout this report the term Government price must be understood as being a f.o.b. price. This price was for Choice White Karachi: and in relation to this standard the other classes of wheat were graded as follows :—

Calcutta wheats	...	Club No. 1	... One anna more than standard.
		Club No. 2	... Same as standard.
		Red Jamally	... One anna six pies less (subsequently reduced to 3 annas) less than standard.
Karachi wheat	...	Red	... One anna 6 pies less than standard.
Karachi and Bombay wheats		White Delhi	... One anna more than standard.
Soft White Pissi, Bombay		...	... 3 annas more than standard.
Soft red Gujerat, Bombay		...	... 1 anna more than standard.
Red Moondi or Nagpur Kathi, Bombay			... Same as standard.
Hard, yellow, Bombay ...		...	... 4 annas more than standard.
Hard, red, Bombay ...		...	... 2 annas more than standard.

Pro Forma invoices of Individual firms.

26. It was, however, apparent that this common Pro Forma could not be adopted as the working formula. In the first place, at all ports there are at least two, and at Karachi three, systems on which purchases of wheat are concluded. Secondly, the systems on which the firms conduct their operations differ considerably, and this difference in procedure entails a difference in the amount of the various items which are included in the Pro Forma. Thirdly, and this objection was the most serious, no firm could be expected to disclose to its competitors its methods of working and its computation of its working charges. While, therefore, the common Pro Forma served a useful purpose in enabling the Government to determine the average amount of the intermediate charges between the point of purchase and the point of shipment, it could not be adopted as a basis on which either the firms should fix its price to a seller, or the Government should pay for the charges detailed in the Pro Forma.

Accordingly immediately after the settlement and announcement of the initial Government price, I proceeded to settle with each firm individually a Pro Forma invoice based on the firm's method and cost of working as determined by experience of previous years. These individual Pro Formas have been printed in Appendix B for the information of Government; but they should be regarded as confidential and should not be published. These Pro Formas, I may add, constitute the basis on which the invoices presented to me for payment have been prepared. They have been varied from time to time, according as items have been varied or removed, under sanction from competent authority, and the relevant Pro Forma has, for each purchase, represented the basis for the audit of my accounts and the accounts of the firms.

27. It is not possible, without going into elaborate details, to explain each of the various items which appear in each of the different Pro Formas approved. But the following statement, which is primarily applicable to the procedure obtaining in Karachi, will give a sufficiently clear idea of the charges which were included in the Pro Formas.

Purchases of Wheat are either made upcountry or locally at the port.

In the case of up-country purchases, the following charges arise :—

I. The cost price of Wheat,

II. Upcountry handling charges,

III. Upcountry market allowances, e.g., Dami (which is paid), Karta (which is recovered),

IV. Brokerage,

V. Railway freight,

VI. Haulage (if incurred),

VII. Shroffage.

These charges make up the cost of wheat f.o.r. Karachi. At pages 3 and 36 of Appendix B. will be found the Pro. Forma for the calculation of the upcountry charges from Lyallpur to Karachi f.o.r. and from Cawnpore to Calcutta f.o.r. It will be observed that the railway freight is by far the most important item. The other charges mentioned above vary very widely according to market, and according to the system of purchase. Roughly speaking it may be said that it costs ten annas to place f.o.r. Karachi a maund of wheat purchased at Lyallpur, and that of these ten annas, nine annas three pies represent railway freight, upcountry charges amounting only to nine pies per maund.

28. The charges which have to be added to the cost f.o.r., are as follows :—

I. Handling Charges,

II. Value of Gunny Bags,

III. Telegrams and postages,

IV. Wharfage and Shipping Charges,

V. Godown Rent,

VI. Establishment Charges,

VII. Buying Commission at 3*d*. per quarter, and in addition, as explained in paragraph 32 below, the following charges were in respect of certain purchases, also included :—

VIII. Interest for 40 days,

IX. Bill Brokerage and Bill Stamps,

X. Samples and Bills of lading,

XI. Fire Insurance,

XII. Terminal Charges.

29. The total of the charges referred to in paragraphs 27 and 28 above represent the cost of placing wheat f. o. b. Karachi. But the f. o. b. price must also make provision for the following factors. Firstly, the Home price is a price for wheat of average quality, containing no dirt and not more than two per cent of barley and foodstuffs. Secondly, experience has shown that there is usually a difference, arising from the difference in climatic conditions and varying with the time and port of shipment between the weight of a cargo or a parcel of wheat as ascertained at the port shipment and the weight as ascertained at the port of discharge. It follows therefore that the price at which an exporter can offer to buy wheat in India (whether upcountry or elsewhere) must make sufficient allowance for these factors. In the Pro Formas printed in Appendix B will be found the allowances which were adopted to cover these factors in the case of the Government purchases of wheat, and in paragraph 76 a further discussion of this point will be found. It will be sufficient to state here that a f. o. b. price of Rs. 5 at Karachi roughly corresponds to Rs. 3-14-0 at Lyallpur, the difference Rs. 1-2-0 being made up as follows :—

Rs.	A.	P.
0	9	3	Railway Freight to Karachi.
0	0	9	For upcountry charges to f.o.r.
0	8	0	For charges from f.o.r. to f.o.b. and allowances for quality, etc.

30. In the case of local purchases, the charges up to f.o.r. referred to in paragraph 27 above, do not, of course, arise, while as regards the items from f.o.r. to f.o.b., item II is excluded. The cost price in the case of these purchases includes the cost of gunnies, sellers being required to supply bags suitable for export or to submit to an allowance. On the other hand, the following additional items are included :—

I. Brokerage,

II. Allowance for Charity and Panjrapore,

III. Cartage or Hire of Trucks,

IV. Weighment.

The allowance for Charity and Panjrapore is an allowance regularly required from buyers in accordance with the custom of the trade; and appears in the case of similar transactions at Bombay.

A f.o.b. Karachi price of Rs. 5 per maund is equivalent to Rs. 4-8-0 per maund local delivery. Local purchases represented only a small proportion of the total purchases at Karachi.

31. This description of the charges included in the Pro Formas is, it must be repeated, not intended to be exhaustive. Appendix B. includes the Pro Formas applicable at Bombay and Calcutta. The variations between the latter and the Pro Formas applicable at Karachi are to be explained by the difference in local conditions. A comparison of the average cost of the charges from f.o.r. to f.o.b. at each of the three ports works out as follows per maund :—

Karachi.	Bombay.	Calcutta.
Re.	Re.	Re.
0·529	0·557	0·563

Samples and Bills of Lading.

32. Reference has been made in paragraph 28 to certain charges numbered VIII to XII which have to be added to the cost of wheat f.o.r. in respect of certain purchases. This point requires further explanation. At the commencement of operations a small charge varying from Rs. 1-8-0 to Rs. 3 per 100 tons was allowed for the cost of preparing and posting samples and stamping Bills of Lading. Messrs. Clement Robson and Co., treated this charge as part of their Establishment expenses, while Messrs. Strauss and Co., and the Calcutta firms other than Ralli Brothers treated it as part of Handling charges. Early in May after enquiry it was ascertained that Bills of Lading for wheat shipped on account of Government were exempt from Stamp duty. Consequently the expenses under the head Samples and Bills of Lading were reduced to so small an amount that it was considered unnecessary to retain this as a separate item in the firms' Pro Formas. This charge was, therefore, treated after the 20th May as part of Handling charges and no separate allowance was given for Samples and Bills of Lading in the case of Shipments made after that date.

Fire Insurance.

At the commencement of operations the Agent firms undertook Fire risks and for this purpose a charge of $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent on the invoiced value of the wheat ($\frac{3}{4}$ per cent in the case of E. D. Sassoon and Co.), was included in the Pro Formas and treated as for the firms' account. After the 18th May, however, Government themselves undertook all Fire risks and no allowance was given to Agent firms on this account.

The charge of $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent was retained in the firms' Pro Formas, but was deducted from the value of the invoices presented for payment. The net result of this was that the cost of wheat to Government was reduced by $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. in order to discount any loss through fire. No such loss fortunately occurred.

Terminal Charges.

An allowance of $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies per maund was made in all Karachi Pro Formas on account of Terminal charges. It was understood that the Karachi Municipality was preparing to introduce a Terminal tax at this rate, but subsequent enquiry showed that there was no immediate likelihood of the tax being brought into force. Consequently this item was omitted from the Pro Formas with effect from the 20th May and all payments made under this head in the case of purchases prior to that date were recovered by Government through the Terminal charges Account.

Interest, Bill Brokerage and Bill Stamps.

The inclusion of charges on account of Interest, Bill Stamps and Bill Brokerage in the Pro Formas up to the 23rd May, was due to the fact that until that date Agent firms had made their own arrangements for financing their purchases whereas from the 24th May Government placed funds from their own resources at the disposal of Agent firms at the time of the order to purchase. Government therefore in the case of purchases made after the 23rd May, incurred no charges on account of Interest, Bill Stamps or Bill Brokerage. Up to the 23rd May the Pro Forma allowed for Bill Stamps at the rate of Rs. 9 per £ 1,000, Bill Brokerage at $\frac{1}{16}$ per cent. and Interest at 6 per cent. per annum for 40 days on the invoiced cost of the wheat. The latter was a standard charge accepted by Government and the firms irrespective of the actual time which elapsed between the order to purchase and payment, the understanding being that extra interest might be charged by the firms if the period of 40 days were exceeded through delay on the part of Government. In point of fact the period of 40 days was on the average not exceeded and there were no undue delays in shipment or in payment of invoices. A calculation of the average periods which elapsed between the dates of purchase and payment (in the case of purchases made prior to the 24th May) gives the following result for Karachi firms :—

Ralli Brothers	42
Louis Dreyfus and Co.	38

Memorandum of Procedure for firms.

33. A Memorandum of Procedure, which will be found printed as Appendix A, was drawn up by me for the guidance of firms. In this Memorandum further details will be found regarding the Pro Forma invoices and also instructions regarding advice of purchases, submission of invoices for payment and of adjustment memos. for settlement of the detailed charges making up the invoices. The form of accounts was also prescribed in the Memorandum of Procedure. The same Memorandum with unimportant local modifications applied to Bombay and Calcutta firms.

This Memorandum prescribes the procedure to be followed by firms; but in practice Bills of Lading were submitted by Agent firms in anticipation of the invoices, these being prepared subsequent to shipment so as to admit of the quick despatch home of the Bills of Lading. The latter were forwarded by me, immediately on receipt, to the City Office of the Indian Wheat Committee.

SECTION III.

FREIGHT ARRANGEMENTS.

Chartering and allocation of freight.

34. The responsibility for engaging freight was undertaken by the Indian Wheat Committee in London, who for this purpose engaged the services of Mr. Percy Glanville of Messrs. Nelson, Donkin and Company. Freight was chartered by Mr. Glanville after considering the reports of purchases of wheat sent to the Indian Wheat Committee daily by the Agent firms, and although it was not found possible to obtain as much freight for Karachi during May and June as could have been filled during those months if it had been available, the arrangements generally must be pronounced more satisfactory and more economical than any that could have been made in India. The prevailing rate of charters for Karachi was 50*s.* per shipping ton* and towards the close of operations 45*s.*, at Bombay 52*s.* 6*d.* and at Calcutta 75*s.* The high rate of Calcutta freight rendered operations from that port disproportionately expensive.

* i.e., shipping ton of 40 cubic feet at Bombay and Karachi and 50 cubic feet at Calcutta.

The allocation also of cargoes among the Agent firms was undertaken by the London Committee. So far as possible full cargoes were allocated to particular firms, 52 out of 70 steamers at Karachi being thus dealt with. When this was not possible the Committee allocated parcel cargo, the firm with the largest parcel looking after the ship and arranging for its loading and despatch.

35. I was thus relieved of the major part of the responsibility connected with the provision and allocation of freight. I was required to allocate freight only in those rare instances when timely intimation of the allocation was not received from the London Committee and there was insufficient time to make a reference to the Secretary of State. The allocation of the last three or four steamers at Karachi was, however, left to me by the London Committee as a matter of practical convenience. The duty of chartering freight only devolved upon me in connection with the final shipment from Karachi, when it was found necessary to charter 1,100 tons freight from Messrs. Louis Dreyfus and Company, at 45*s.* per shipping ton in order to ship the small remaining balance of Government wheat.

The disposal of surplus freight, which, as will be seen, was a matter of some difficulty at Bombay and Calcutta, was principally undertaken by the Home authorities, but a portion of this work also devolved upon me.

Local freight arrangements.

36. For settlement on the spot of any remaining details regarding the allocation, loading and despatch of steamers, it was arranged to establish local Committees of Agent firms at Karachi and Bombay, under the presidency of the Wheat Commissioner or one of his Assistants whose authority was to be final in cases of dispute among firms. In practice it was seldom found necessary to summon formal meetings of these Committees : all matters of detail were settled without difficulty in discussion with the firms concerned.

At Calcutta the arrangements for loading and despatch of steamers were entrusted to Messrs. Graham and Company, and no local Committee of Agent firms was established. Messrs. Graham and Company received a loading fee of Rs. 500 for whole cargoes and of Rs. 100 per 1,000 tons for shipment of parcels in liners from Calcutta.

Liner freight and prize steamers.

37. The allocation of liner freight and of prize steamers was arranged for in the same way as in the case of ordinary steamers. Messrs. Graham and Company also undertook the duty of loading and despatch of prize steamers and received for this work a special fee of Rs. 500 per steamer. Eight prize steamers were dealt with under this arrangement at Karachi.

Advances on account of freight, and payments to Captains.

38. Among minor matters connected with freight was the advance of cash at the port of loading, as provided in the Charter party, to Captains of steamers if required by them in order to meet necessary disbursements at the port of loading. Such advances were made at Karachi on six occasions and once at Bombay, the Bills of Lading being endorsed accordingly. The customary payment through the Agent firms of Rs. 75 or Rs. 80 as a gratuity or "hat money" to Captains of steamers was also arranged for.

Despatch of steamers.

39. Steamers were chartered on the understanding that no despatch money would be exacted, the only exception being in the case of the S. S. "Jerseymoor" at Bombay. No difficulty was found in securing their prompt loading and despatch as will be seen from Appendix C, Table No. XI, which shows that the average number of days required for loading at Karachi was less than 5½. In one instance only were nine days required and in five instances eight days. Three steamers on the other hand were despatched in three days and eleven in four days Night work was not usually called for except during the latter half of June and first week of July when there was a certain amount of pressure owing to the simultaneous arrival of a number of steamers. The arrival of steamers was well timed throughout May and they came at regular and convenient intervals. The earlier June steamers, however, were somewhat delayed and towards the end of June there was as much as 150,000 tons of wheat stored at Keamari, but the position was relieved by the large shipments aggregating 166,744 tons which took place between the 20th June and 10th July. Details of the weekly shipments from the three ports will be found in Appendix C, Tables II, III and IV.

Disposal of surplus freight, Karachi.

40. The disposal of surplus freight at Karachi presented little difficulty as it was found necessary to cancel only one steamer, the "Caspian," of 5,200 tons, which had been engaged for July. At various times the Secretary of State arranged to relet to Agent firms parcels on Government wheat vessels, the total amount so relet to Karachi firms being 10,000 tons. In the case of Bombay and Calcutta the disposal of surplus freight was a much more complicated business.

Disposal of surplus freight, Bombay.

41. The freight chartered for Bombay consisted of (a) three whole cargoes, the "Jerseymoor," "Ethelwolf" and "Deddington," carrying 16,472 D.-W. tons, (b) certain parcel freight chartered from Messrs. Sanday and Company and from Messrs. Ralli Brothers, and (c) Peninsular and Oriental freight 6,750 D.-W. tons. The total quantity chartered was 56,217 D.-W. tons, distributed as follows :—2,400 tons in April, 32,167 in May, 10,800 in June, 9,950 in July and 900 in August. The quantity of wheat actually shipped from Bombay was 40,870 tons, so that the surplus freight remaining on my hands at Bombay exceeded 15,000 tons. The following arrangements were made to relieve the position :—

(1) 3,000 tons of freight taken over from Messrs. Ralli Brothers and 4,000 tons taken over from Messrs. Sanday and Company were cancelled at a profit of 6*d*. per shipping ton ;

(2) 900 tons August freight taken over from Sanday and Company were cancelled at a loss of 10*s*. per shipping ton ;

(3) 1,350 tons of June freight were resold by the Secretary of State to Messrs. Sanday and Company ;

(4) 750 tons of Ellerman freight were sold to Ralli Brothers at a loss of 7*s*. 6*d*. per shipping ton ;

(5) 900 tons of Wilson line freight were transferred from Bombay to Karachi ;

(6) a more difficult and less satisfactory transaction was the disposal of 4,500 D.-W. tons of Peninsular and Oriental freight which it was not found possible to fill. This freight had been chartered by the Secretary of State at the high rate of 55*s*. per shipping ton : it was a large parcel and in a ship with a fixed date of sailing and fixed for London only. The principal exporters were out of the market, and were themselves sellers of freight. There was no possibility of collecting fresh cargo. The Peninsular and Oriental Company themselves endeavoured to relet on my behalf but were unable to do any business. Finally, I accepted an offer of 45*s*. per shipping ton on basis wheat and even this offer was only obtained owing to my being able to obtain an option of 500 tons for Marseilles. The net loss on this transaction, in addition to brokerage, was £3,135-2-10, which it was arranged should be claimed by the Peninsular and Oriental Company in London.

44. The receipts in India on account of the above freight cancelments at Bombay were Rs. 40,875-5-11. Payments in India were Rs. 3,438-4-0 on account of brokerage. As stated above payments have had to be made in England to the Peninsular and Oriental Company and also in respect of some of the other cancelments. A certain amount of loss was unavoidable in connection with these transactions. I considered the possibility (a) of shipping Karachi wheat to Bombay to fill the excess Bombay freight, and (b) of diverting by rail wheat bought for shipment from Karachi at Punjab and United Provinces agencies served by Bombay railways. Both alternatives were dismissed, the former owing to the cost of freight from Karachi to Bombay and the extra loss due to transhipment fees, double handling charges and damage by rain and searing of bags during handling and other incidental expenses, and the latter owing to the extra cost of railway freight. Additional objections to either course were (1) the fact that Karachi wheat commands a better price if shipped from Karachi than if shipped from Bombay, and (2) that Bombay freight was chartered at 52*s.* 6*d.* or 55*s.* whereas Karachi freight was at that time being chartered at from 48*s.* to 45*s.*

Disposal of surplus freight, Calcutta.

45. The freight chartered for Calcutta consisted of (a) five whole cargoes carrying from 31,500 to 32,000 D.-W. tons (b) Liner freight aggregating 26,000 D.-W. tons, and (c) 6,000 D.-W. tons parcel freight taken from Ralli Brothers. The total Calcutta freight was therefore from 63,500 to 64,000 tons. The shipments from Calcutta, excluding 5,000 tons sold to the Government of Western Australia, were 29,600 tons. Surplus freight therefore was about 34,000 tons. Arrangements for disposal of this surplus were made by the Secretary of State who transferred the S. S. "Lindenfels" (7,000 to 7,500 tons) to Karachi, cancelled 11,000 tons of Liner freight and the S. S. "Barenfels" (7,500 tons), and relet 5,840 tons of Liner freight as well as 2,500 tons on the S. S. "Auchenblae." 500 tons on the latter steamer which had been chartered at 72*s.* 6*d.* were relet to Messrs. Becker Gray and Company at 77*s.* 6*d.* The difference between these rates, Rs. 957-8-5, was paid to me in India.

Payments on account of freight.

46. Payments on account of freight were ordinarily made in England. Under the orders of the Secretary of State, however, Liner freight was made payable at Calcutta at 75*s.* a ton at the current rate of telegraphic transfers. These payments aggregated Rs. 5,20,242-0-4. In Bombay, the only payment was of a sum of Rs. 3,787 being the amount payable in India under an arrangement with the Peninsular and Oriental Company in respect of a parcel of 225 tons Peninsular and Oriental freight taken over from Messrs. Ralli Brothers.

In Karachi, Rs. 4,240-1-6 were paid by me to Messrs. Louis Dreyfus and Company on account of 1,099 tons in the S. S. "Belgia" representing the difference between their chartering rate (40*s.* 6*d.*) and the rate (45*s.*) at which I took over the parcel from them. This freight was engaged locally in order to complete the Karachi shipments.

In addition to the above, advances on account of freight were made to Captains of steamers as described in paragraph 38. These totalled Rs. 31,506 at Karachi and Rs. 6,500 at Bombay.

SECTION IV.

NARRATIVE OF OPERATIONS.

Fixation of maximum price and purchases in April.

47. I now proceed to give in narrative form a brief summary of the operations from the date of the first order to purchase.

At the time of my arrival in India on the 9th April no Government maximum price had as yet been fixed. There had been heavy rains late in the season in the north of India and in the Central Provinces with the result that crop development had been retarded. The Agent firms also had for some time been out of touch with the market and were unable to give definite advice as to the price which would be required to bring out a considerable quantity of wheat.

The original intention had been to aim at a maximum of 50,000 tons for export in April and 200,000 tons in May, and it was still possible that the total of 250,000 tons might be reached for the two months combined, although the delay in starting operations had made a large export during April out of the question. In the absence of accurate information regarding the market, the Agent firms at Bombay and Karachi were instructed, in anticipation of a formal announcement, to commence purchasing at prices not exceeding Rs. 5-12-0 per maund f. o.b. delivery being for April shipment, so as to test the market. The result of the first few days' purchases was that 9,000 tons of wheat were obtained at prices several annas below the Government maximum. The effect of the purchases, however, was slightly to raise the market price. At the same time, a price of Rs. 5-12-0 f. o. b., which would correspond approximately to 61*s.* 3*d.* a quarter in England, allowing for freight at the rates then obtaining, appeared likely to involve a loss. Consequently, on the 17th April when the first formal announcement of the Government maximum price was made of Rs. 5-12-0, it was announced simultaneously that the price would be reduced to Rs. 5-8-0 from the 25th April. At the same time, the original April allotments to Bombay and Karachi firms were largely increased and permission was given to buy for 15th May shipment.

48. The effect of this policy of fixing a high initial price and notifying a subsequent reduction from a fixed date was that large quantities of wheat were at once forthcoming, sellers being anxious to take advantage of the high rate before the reduction became operative. Twenty-nine thousand tons of wheat were bought between the 10th and 17th April and in the following week 85,200 tons were bought. Of this amount 65,709 tons were bought by Karachi firms, 16,221 at Bombay and 3,270 at Calcutta. Purchases at Calcutta commenced on the 24th April, the Government price for Calcutta being fixed at 3 annas per maund below the rate for Karachi and Bombay. Up to the 24th April prices up-country had shown no noticeable tendency to fall, being steadied by the large Government purchases at high prices. In fact, the price of wheat at Lyallpur rose as soon as the Government rate of Rs. 5-12-0 was announced. Accordingly, when announcing the reduction in Government price to Rs. 5-8-0 on the 25th April, the opportunity was taken to notify a further reduction to Rs. 5-2-9 with effect from the 1st May. Purchases during the last week of April were 44,443 tons at Karachi, 14,372 at Bombay and 14,862 at Calcutta. Wheat was coming forward very freely from the Punjab at prices even below the Government maximum, and transfers of 14,650 tons of the allotments from Calcutta and 8,500 frem Bombay to Karachi were sanctioned at this time. Any further large allotments for Karachi during May were, however, limited by the fact that the Secretary of State was finding difficulty in obtaining sufficient freight for that port.

Purchases from 1st May to 15th June.

49. On the 1st May the announced reduction of the Government price to Rs. 5-2-9 took effect. Wheat continued to come forward freely at Karachi at rates below the Government maximum and the purchases at this time at Karachi were limited solely by the amount of freight available. On the other hand, purchases at Bombay and Calcutta now almost ceased. It had become clear that the United Provinces and Central Provinces crop would not provide much wheat for export. Wholesale prices at Cawnpore had not been responding in the same way as the Punjab prices to the Government reductions. There was increasing evidence that the United Provinces crop had been a poor one and that landowners were beginning to withhold their wheat in the hope of higher prices later on. On the 8th May, in view of the facility of purchases at Karachi, a reduction of the Government price to Rs. 4-14-9 was announced. Allotments were given for June shipment and Karachi firms bought freely and easily during the succeeding five weeks up to the middle of June at or below the new rate. During those five weeks 262,686 tons were bought by Karachi firms, averaging over 52,000 tons a week.

Course of prices from 15th April to 15th June.

50. The following table shows the movement of upcountry retail prices during this period.

	15th April.	1st May.	15th May.	1st June.	15th June.
Lahore, seers per Rupee ...	8	9	11¼	10¼	10¼
Delhi	7¾	9	9½	9¼	9¼
Meerut	8¼	9¾	10	10¼	10¼
Cawnpore	8½	9	9	8¾	8¾
Jubbulpore	8½	8½	9¼	9¼	10

The fall had been rapid everywhere until the middle of May. At this point Cawnpore prices, as already indicated, began to relapse and prices at Lahore also slightly hardened no doubt on account of the extent of Government purchases in the Punjab. The general level, however, did not show much change between the 15th May and 15th June.

Renewal of purchases at Calcutta. Limitation of forward buying.

51. The Government price at Calcutta was raised by 3 annas on the 17th May from Rs. 4-11-9 to Rs. 4-14-9 so as to put Calcutta on the same footing as Bombay and Karachi. This alteration, together with the elimination of Interest and certain other charges from the Pro Formas on the 24th May owing to the alteration of the method of financing purchases, enabled buying to be renewed to a small extent at Calcutta. Comment at this time was aroused by the profit obtainable by middlemen who contracted for forward delivery, since the constant reduction in the Government price enabled them to fulfil their forward contracts with profit and without risk. A certain amount of forward buying was of course necessary to prevent congestion on the Railway, but an arrangement was come to with the Karachi firms that there should be no forward buying for delivery more than 10 days ahead of purchase at upcountry stations and 20 days at Karachi. This arrangement worked successfully. Later on, the periods were extended to 15 days upcountry and 25 days delivery at Karachi, in order to avoid congestion at the Keamari godowns.

Home Sale. Reduction of Government price.

52. The situation was now being seriously affected by the fall in Home selling prices which set in about the end of May. Purchases were greatly in excess of sales and it was evident that it would be necessary to reduce the Government price in India further if loss was to be avoided. Up to the 15th May 103,000 tons of wheat had been sold at prices ranging from 65 to 69*s.* a quarter, whereas between that date and the 14th June sales were only of 14,500 tons and the average price had fallen to about 55*s.* Prices continued to show a downward tendency, the lowest rates of sales recorded being in the third week of June when some 40,000 tons were sold at prices between 49*s.* 9*d.* and 52*s.* Consequently, from the 7th June Karachi firms were instructed not to offer beyond Rs. 4-12-9 and the Government price at Karachi was formally reduced to that rate on the 11th June, a further reduction to Rs. 4-10-9 being announced to take effect from the 17th June. The Government price at Bombay and Calcutta was retained at Rs. 4-14-9 until the 23rd June. Purchases were made freely at Karachi for July shipment at Rs 4-12-9, but in view of the rapid deterioration in Home prices, the Agent firms were instructed on the 12th June not to offer more than Rs. 4-10-9; and on the 17th when the Government price was formally reduced to Rs. 4-10-9, they were instructed to reduce their limits to Rs. 4-9-9. On the 21st June they were instructed not to offer beyond Rs. 4-8-9 so as to test the market at that price. This offer was, however, inoperative and the limit was raised on the 29th June to Rs. 4-9-9 so as to complete, if possible, the July allotments of 130,000 tons (inclusive of 25,000 tons private commitments) which had been made to Karachi firms.

Effect of the Monsoon. Cessation of purchases.

53. The delay in the establishment of the monsoon in the Punjab had now become a marked feature of the situation. Speculation on a possible failure of the rains and a rise in prices was being freely indulged in by upcountry merchants and prices in July soon rose well above the Government maximum. The following table shows the course of prices:—

	1st July.	15th July.	1st August.	15th August.
Lahore, seers per Rupee	10½	9¾	9¼	8¾
Delhi	9¼	8½	8½	8
Meerut	10¼	9¼	8¾	8¼
Cawnpore	8½	8½	8½	8
Jubbulpore	8½	8½	8½	8½

From diagram No. II in Appendix E, it is possible to trace the relation between wheat prices and the prices of other food grains in the Punjab from the beginning of April until the middle of August. The prices of the rabi crops, gram and barley, will be observed to follow a very similar curve to wheat prices, falling sharply until the middle of May and rising steadily from the beginning of July. The kharif grains, maize and bajra, did not show a corresponding fall in May, but remained steady with a slight upward tendency until the end of June. Thereafter, in sympathy with monsoon conditions and with the prospect of a comparative failure of the kharif in the Punjab, the price of maize and to a lesser degree that of bajra began to rise rapidly.

From the 14th July Agent firms were instructed to offer the full maximum price of Rs. 4-10-9 and to obtain as much wheat as they could get at that price—this offer being rendered possible by a fall in freight from 50*s.* to 45*s.* and a rise in Home selling prices where sales were taking place more freely at about 55*s.* per quarter—but the orders were ineffective. Purchases were on a very small scale throughout July, the total for the whole month being only 6,865 tons and they ceased entirely at the end of the month, though the Government offer to purchase at Rs. 4-10-9, was maintained in force throughout August, September and October. It was not considered advisable to offer a higher price than Rs. 4 10-9, as in view of the prevailing market rates there was little expectation of getting any considerable quantity of wheat except at greatly enhanced prices and the result would have been to force up the already high level of Indian prices. Throughout this last period of the operations the effect of the Government price and offer to purchase was almost negligible. The situation was governed entirely by the unfavourable character of the monsoon. The tendency of Indian dealers and speculators to store wheat in the hope of a later rise was no doubt also accentuated by the uncertainty caused by the slow progress of the war. This tendency made itself apparent earlier in the United Provinces and Central Provinces owing to the less favourable nature of the wheat crop in those Provinces, but by the middle of July Government may be said to have been practically out of the market in the Punjab also.

Total Purchases and shipments. Gain in Godown.

54. The purchases made at each port week by week will be found detailed in Appendix C, Table No. I. The total purchases on account of Government were 525,599 tons of which 450,278 tons were bought by Karachi firms, 40,788 tons by Bombay firms and 34,533 tons by Calcutta firms. The greater part of the purchases were made in the Punjab, as will be seen from Appendix C, Table No. XVI. The actual quantity shipped to the United Kingdom was 528,533 tons of which 458,057 tons were from Karachi 40,870 from Bombay and 29,606 from Calcutta. In addition, 5,016 tons were sold to the Government of Western Australia. Of the wheat despatched to the United Kingdom one cargo of 5,644 tons was sold to the Belgian Relief Committee and discharged at Rotterdam, and about 1,000 tons were sold to the Military authorities and discharged at Malta. The difference between the purchases advised and the quantity shipped is accounted for partly by cancelments and short or excess deliveries, but principally by the gain in weight in godown which accrued at Karachi. This gain in weight added to the Government purchases at Karachi 7,970 tons, divided among the Agent firms as follows:—

	Tons.
Ralli Brothers	2,341
Louis Dreyfus & Co	1,597
Sanday Patrick & Co.	2,031
Clements Robson & Co.	1,278
E. D. Sassoon & Co.	410
Strauss & Co., Ltd.	313

The total gain, which represents 1·77 per cent of the quantity purchased, must be regarded as extremely satisfactory and was due to the climatic conditions of the year being specially favourable. The differences in the percentages of gain shown by individual firms are due partly to differences in methods of storage but principally to the length of time during which the wheat remained in godown. Firms who had a larger proportion of the earlier shipments showed less gain than others. Gain in godown is not usually obtained at Calcutta or Bombay, but in the case of the purchases of the present year a small gain of 107 tons was found at Calcutta and 268 tons at Bombay. Wheat found as gain in godown was invoiced to Government free of cost, the Agent firms being allowed their expenses of handling and shipping together with establishment charges and commission of 3*d*. per quarter.

SECTION V.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR FINANCING PURCHASES.

Government Communiqué of 24th May regarding Finance.

55. Reference has been made in paragraph 32 above to the circumstances under which charges on account of Interest, Bill Stamps and Bill Brokerage were included in the Agent firms' Pro Formas until the 24th May. Prior to that date the firms had made their own arrangements for financing their purchases pending Government's final orders on this question which was under discussion with His Majesty's Government in England. The following statement, which issued as a Press Communiqué on the 24th May, contained the Government's decision:—"On April 22nd a statement was issued by His Majesty's Government to the Press explaining the scheme for the regulation by the Government of the export of Indian wheat and giving information as to the agency by which it is being carried on. A further statement was promised regarding the method by which funds for purchases in India would be supplied to Agent firms. On this matter discussion has been necessary between the Secretary of State for India, the Government of India and the Treasury who (as guarantors of the Indian revenues against net loss) are interested in financial arrangements. Various schemes were put forward with the object of securing that the drawing and negotiation of bills, which takes place in normal years when the wheat trade between India and the United Kingdom is conducted on private account, should not be interrupted or diminished. If the object of these schemes could have been attained without cost to the tax-payer there would have been no hesitation about adopting one or other of them and thereby avoiding interference with the usual course of financial business. But examination showed that any scheme would have involved expenditure (of which the ultimate incidence would have been on public revenues) for interest and other charges incidental to the making and negotiation of bills of exchange while it was not necessary to have recourse to outside funds, since it is estimated that the balances of the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India will suffice to provide for the outlay on the purchase of wheat. The Secretary of State has therefore decided, as a result of the discussion mentioned above, that the Government of India shall place funds from their own resources at the disposal of Agent firms. This arrangement has the advantage of simplicity since transactions between England and India in connection with purchases to be made and paid for in India will be avoided.

Special arrangements will be made in respect of any sums provided by Agent firms for the purchase of wheat on Government account before the publication of the above decision. The firms will have the option of taking repayment in India or (at the rate of one shilling and four pence the rupee) in England. In the latter case payment will be made at the date on which a demand bill would reach England".

Rupee Advances in India.

56. On receipt of these orders charges for Interest, Bill Stamps and Bill Brokerage were, as stated above, removed from all Pro Formas. In the case of purchases made prior to the 24th May payment was made as before on presentation of their invoice and Bills of Lading, but with respect to fresh purchases rupee advances were made by me to firms, the amount being regulated in each case by the purchases as advised from day to day and the outstanding allotments of the firms. The invoices relating to these purchases were credited to the firms' account on presentation, no further payment being made. In the case of Messrs. Sanday Patrick and Company, and Messrs. Clements Robson and Company, the situation was complicated by the fact that these firms had financed themselves prior to the 24th May principally by Bills drawn on their London Houses. These Bills, amounting to £170,000 and £125,000 respectively, were met by the Secretary of State at various times and their rupee value was treated as an advance on which no interest was due. Consequently interest charges were not paid on the invoices presented by these firms for purchases financed in this manner prior to the 24th May, and the invoices were credited to the firms' account on presentation in the same way as their later invoices. In the case of Messrs. Strauss and Company, advances were given somewhat earlier than the 24th May in anticipation of the eventual decision on the question. The total rupee advances made to Karachi firms under this procedure was Rs. 2,79,85,000 and the gross value of the invoices credited was Rs. 3,20,37,707-6-10.

Sterling Payments in England.

57. The following table which is summarised from Statement V, Appendix D, shows the amount of funds used by firms in financing their wheat purchases prior to the 24th May, which were held to be entitled to the sterling concession of remittance to England at par in accordance with Government's orders quoted above:—

	Name of firms.		Amount.
Karachi	Ralli Brothers	... ...	656,959	0	10
	E. D. Sassoon & Co.	... ...	40,000	0	0
Bombay	Ralli Brothers	... ...	245,566	16	8
	Louis Dreyfus & Co.	... ...	31,836	15	11
Calcutta	Ralli Brothers	... ...	182,078	0	0
	E. D. Sassoon & Co.	... ...	1,333	0	0
	Petrocochino Bros.	... ...	12,668	0	0
		(=Rs.	2,21,61,625	1	0

As their invoices became due for payment, the firms were given the option of payment in rupees in India or in sterling by demand draft at par on the Secretary of State, payable on the date of arrival of the next mail from India, until the sums stated in the above table were exhausted. The dates on which this option was exercised are shown in Statement V, Appendix D. To the figures given above should be added, in estimating the amount of payments made in England on account of purchase of wheat, £170,000 and £125,000 for the bills drawn by Sanday Patrick and Company, and Clements Robson and Company on their London houses which were met by the Secretary of State.

Claims for compensation for loss in exchange.

58. In certain cases it was recognized that remittance at 1*s.* 4*d.* by Demand Draft would involve a slight loss in Exchange compared with the rate at which the money had been originally sent out. I was authorized to enquire into and settle all such claims, the authorization being limited to compensation for loss in exchange on remittances sent outwards above par. A claim for Rs. 3,290-0-1 from Messrs. Louis Dreyfus & Co., Karachi, was admitted in conformity with these orders. Subsequently the Secretary of State agreed that Demand Drafts on London should be reckoned, for the purpose of the calculation of loss in exchange, as being of less value than telegraphic transfers, the difference in value being taken at $\frac{1}{32}d.$ per rupee. The claims admitted in accordance with these later orders were as follows:—Messrs. Ralli Brothers, Karachi, Rs. 9,176-14-0; Bombay, Rs. 10,812-11-0; Calcutta, Rs. 1,143-12-0; Messrs. Louis Dreyfus & Co., Karachi, Rs. 8,131-2-0. The total amount allowed as compensation for loss in exchange was therefore Rs. 32,554-7-1.

59. A special arrangement was introduced by arrangement with the Controller of Currency by which certain Karachi firms were enabled to remit to Bombay at par by telegraphic transfer, free of cost, amounts not exceeding a weekly maximum fixed by me and notified to the Treasury Officer at Karachi. This arrangement was introduced because of the difficulty experienced by firms in obtaining from Banks the usual facilities for telegraphic remittance at par and because certain payments by Karachi firms on account of up-country purchases had to be made at Bombay. The amounts remitted from Karachi to Bombay under this arrangement were :—

Remittances at par from Karachi to Bombay.

By Sanday Patrick & Co.	7,75,000
„ Louis Dreyfus & Co.	4,00,000
„ Clements Robson & Co.	4,00,000
„ Sassoon & Co.	1,40,000
Total ...	17,15,000

The charge foregone by Government by this arrangement calculated at the usual rate of 1 anna per 100 rupees, was Rs. 1,071-14-0.

SECTION VI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

60. All the wheat shipped from India on Government account in the period under review was, with the exceptions mentioned in paragraph 54 above, despatched to United Kingdom ports. A sale of 5,016 tons of wheat to the Government of Western Australia was made with the previous sanction of the Secretary of State for India, in view of the failure of the Australian harvest and the shortage of stocks in that country.

Wheat for Western Australia.

Negotiations on behalf of the Western Australian Government were conducted by Messrs. Gillanders Arbuthnot of Calcutta, and the wheat was bought from Messrs. Ralli Brothers out of the stock of Club No. 2 previously bought by the latter for the Government of India. The arrangement agreed upon was that the wheat should be sold to the agents of the Western Australian Government at the standard f. o. b. price prevailing on the day or days when the purchases were made with the addition of 2*s.* 6*d.* per quarter for commission and profit. Out of this 2*s.* 6*d.* per quarter 3*d.* per quarter was paid to Messrs. Ralli Brothers to compensate them for the loss of their selling commission on the English side. The balance of the 2*s.* 6*d.* per quarter was retained as profit by the Government of India, this amount having been fixed as reasonable after consideration of Indian prices, cost of freight and prices then prevailing in England. The object aimed at was to secure that the Government of India should receive some return for the use of its establishment and organisation and that the Agent firm should receive the same remuneration as if the shipment had been made to the United Kingdom. The profit accruing to Government on this transaction was Rs. 47,408-13-0.

61. In pursuance of the policy laid down in the Government of India's communiqué of the 25th March that the necessary supplies of wheat should be made available for Indian consumers in Eastern countries, export of wheat up to the amount shipped in normal years was permitted, under license from the Collectors of Customs at Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi, to British Possessions in the East where there is an Indian population. Export was also allowed in reasonable quantities and under the same conditions to the Persian Gulf ports and some foreign possessions in Asia and Africa. This concession was carefully watched, and as will be seen from Table No. VI, Appendix C, resulted in the export of little more than 1,000 tons of wheat, the requirements of Indian consumers in the East being more largely met by the export of wheat flour.

Wheat for the Indian population in Eastern countries.

62. The export of a certain quantity of wheat flour from India was permitted by Government in order not to deprive the Indian Flour Mills of this portion of their business as well as in order to meet the requirements of Indian settlers and troops in Eastern countries. At the same time an excessive export had to be guarded against. In the Government of India's communiqué of the 25th March it was announced that in order to prevent excessive exportation of wheat flour, exports would be restricted from the 1st April 1915 to the 31st March 1916, to an amount approximately equal to the quantity exported during the year 1913-14. This amount was to be allotted to the various milling interests concerned. The quantity of wheat flour exported from British India in 1913-14 was 79,422 tons. 80,000 tons were therefore fixed in the first instance as the maximum export for 1915-16 and this quantity was divided among the three principal ports as follows:—Karachi 40,240 tons, Bombay 34,880 tons, Calcutta 4,880 tons. Subsequently, in view of the fact that several new flour mills had recently started work in Calcutta, the allotment for the latter port was raised to 8,750 tons, making a total permissible export of 83,870 tons. The allotments at each port were made to different mills in proportions suggested by the Collectors of Customs and approved by the Government of India. No monthly allotments were fixed in view of the uncertainty of the market and millers' commitments, but in order to prevent excessive amounts being exported in the early months of the year, Collectors of Customs reported to me monthly the amount which they proposed to allot for export in the following month.

Export of wheat flour.

In normal years almost the whole of the export of wheat flour from India is to Eastern countries, the largest quantities being taken by Egypt, Asiatic Turkey, Aden, Ceylon, Mauritius, British East Africa and the Straits Settlements. In the circumstances of the present year it was considered possible that the existence of high prices in countries such as Australia and New Zealand, which normally do not import wheat flour from India, might lead to an undue proportion of the year's export being diverted to such countries. Careful control was therefore kept of exports to countries in which there is no resident Indian population and which have not normally taken supplies of wheat flour from India. Sanction, for instance, was refused in the case of a proposed export to Cyprus.

Subject to this general principle, export was freely allowed to British Possessions in the East and up to the previous normal quantity to other places in the East, such as Persian Gulf ports, where there were Indian settlers or troops. Export was also allowed to Jeddah to meet the requirements of Indian pilgrims.

Ceylon, which in ordinary years takes supplies from Australia, was in the circumstances of the present year allowed a supply somewhat larger than the normal. The actual quantity of wheat flour exported in the first five months of the year was 20,472 tons of which 3,751 tons went to Egypt, 3,387 to Mauritius, 3,233 to Aden and its dependencies, 2,597 to Ceylon and 2,489 to the Straits Settlements. Full details are given in Appendix C, Table No. VII.

SECTION VII.

COST OF THE OPERATIONS.

77. An attempt may be made to estimate the financial results of the wheat scheme to date with the aid of such figures as have been reported by the India Office of receipts and payments on the English side. In Appendix D, Tables I to IV, will be found complete statements of the expenditure and receipts for each firm at each port in India and a combined statement giving the results for all three ports combined. These statements give the audited figures for the period ending 31st October 1915 and apart from one or two small items which may be subject to correction on receipt of the Auditor's formal report, may be accepted as the actual receipts and expenditure in India from the commencement of the operations up to the end of October. The following statement gives these figures in a classified form :—

A.—Payments in India.

				Rs.	A.	P.
1. Outgoings of Agent Firms in respect of wheat bought by them :—

1. Freight	...	...	...	41,832	14	4
2. Miscellaneous	...	...	...	576	1	7
	Total		...	42,408	15	11

The net expenditure in India to the end of October is therefore Rs. 6,88,49,304-0-3. In the above statement, it may be noted that the cost of wheat as shown in Appendix D, Table IV, has been reduced by Rs. 7,38,520-4-0, being the sale proceeds of wheat sold to the Western Australian Government and by Rs. 63-5-6, sale of sweepings by Messrs. Petrocochino Brothers in Calcutta which has been treated as a receipt in Table IV.

The details of Income and Expenditure in England up to the 30th September and estimated after that date are as follows :—

—	Up to 30th September.	After 30th September. (Estimate.)
A.—Income.	£	£
Receipts from sales of wheat	4,514,999	404,373
Receipts from sale of bags	17,800	14,800

Total Income ...	4,533,797	419,173
B.—Expenditure.

General average payments	93	4,907
Payments on final account on account of short weight, refraction, admixture, etc.	52,567	107,433
Net loss on reletting freight payable in United Kingdom	...	6,154
Expenses of Board of Agriculture and Fisheries ...	295	600
Expenses of Agent Firms on telegrams ...	312	...
Expenses of Chartering Agent, Staff and Office ...	3,808	200
Expenses of India Office, including City Office of Indian Wheat Committee.	1,532	4,800
Total ...	60,571	123,584

Estimated net receipts in England are therefore £ 4,768,815, from which must be deducted £2,448, the amount by which the actual payment for Sterling Bills exceeded the rupee value debited to Agent Firms in India.

In order to arrive at an estimate of the final profits of the Scheme, it is necessary to add to the net expenditure in India to end of October as detailed above the following items :—

	Rs	A.	P.
(a) Additional sums admitted as compensation for loss in Exchange subsequent to 31st October.	11,495	13	0
(b) Estimated cost of Wheat Commissioner's Staff and Office Expenditure to end of December.	80,000	0	0
(c) Estimated further liabilities on account of Agent Firms' Establishment charges (in excess of 3*d*. per quarter).	5,00,000	0	0
(d) Estimated further liabilities on account of Agent Firms' Godown Rent to 31st March 1916.	71,534	0	0

Items (b), (c) and (d) are estimates only and actual figures cannot be ascertained at the present stage. With these additions, the total net expenditure in India would be raised to Rs. 6,95,12,333-13-3, equivalent to £ 4,634,156. There will be a refund to the credit of the scheme on account of Cables sent by Agent Firms to the United Kingdom, which by arrangement with the Eastern Telegraph Company are admissible at the deferred rate, but the amount of the refund has not yet been ascertained. Disregarding this small item, the profits of the Wheat Scheme may be estimated as follows :—

Net receipts in England	...	...	...	4,766,367
Net expenditure in India	...	...	...	4,634,156
		Estimated Profit	...	132,211

Check and Audit of Firms' Accounts.

78. It is not possible to give within the compass of this report a complete record of the detailed check of the firms' accounts which was carried out by my office. This work was necessarily entrusted to a large extent to the Assistant Wheat Commissioners at the several ports and a summary of the procedure adopted at Karachi will be sufficient to indicate what was done in this respect. At the time of the submission of the shipment invoices and adjustment memos., a check was made of the correctness of the rates charged for all items, and of the arithmetical accuracy of the calculations. Where the rates were standard rates, as in the case of Commission, Interest, Handling charges and Telegrams and Postages (for the majority of firms), it was sufficient to compare the rates charged with the standard rates and to ensure that the calculations corresponded to the rates shown in the Pro Formas but all charges which were based on actuals, such as Bill Brokerage, Bill Stamps, Godown Rent, Wharfage and Shipping, etc., had to be supported later on by the original vouchers which were examined in detail.

With regard to entries in the Purchase Price of Wheat account, all original bills for local purchases were examined, totalled and agreed with the entries in the firms' accounts. In the case of up-country purchases, all up-country invoices were similarly examined and agreed with the Wheat accounts. A percentage of from 5 to 10 per cent of the Bills and Invoices were checked arithmetically, and where up-country purchase Bills were available in original at Karachi a similar percentage of these was compared with the invoices. Special attention was directed to a comparison of the rates charged in the invoices with the firms' up-country Pro Formas and to a check of the allowances paid to and recovered from sellers, both in local and up-country purchases. Other actual charges included in the purchase of wheat, such as Railway freight, Produce brokerage, Hire of trucks, Charity, etc., were checked with the original vouchers. The greater part of August and September was devoted to this executive audit.

79. Before concluding I desire to take this opportunity of acknowledging my obligations to the Agent firms and to the officers who have been associated with me in the operations described above. The Agent firms have co-operated loyally with me throughout. Their advice and experience, both in the initial consideration, as well as in the subsequent practical application of the measures required to carry out the policy of the Government, have at all times been freely and unreservedly placed at my disposal. Their relations towards me have throughout been characterised by a desire to ensure the successful working of the scheme. I venture to hope that at a suitable opportunity Government will be pleased to authorise the conveyance to these firms of their appreciation of the services rendered by them in this connection.

To the District Officers, and other authorities, who have invariably kept me in touch with the local conditions prevailing in their charges, I am indebted for much valuable advice and information as to the effect of the measures undertaken in connection with the scheme.

To the Controller of Currency my acknowledgments are due for the facilities placed by him at my disposal for financing the purchases by the Government Agents. The requirements of the latter for funds were carefully anticipated and promptly and regularly met.

My acknowledgments are also due to the Assistant Wheat Commissioners. The duties with which they were entrusted were wholly different from the ordinary functions of a Government officer: and the adaptability and resource shown by them deserve recognition. In particular measure my acknowledgments are due to Mr. A. C. McWatters, I.C.S., who has, since October 7th, succeeded me as Wheat Commissioner. On him, as Assistant Commissioner in charge of the Headquarters office, fell practically all the detailed working of the operations, during my frequent absences on tour, in addition to the supervision of the transactions of the Karachi Agent firms. It is due to his characteristically systematic application of the procedure prescribed that it has been possible to submit a statement of and to offer for audit, within six weeks of the last shipment, the whole of the accounts of the transactions of the Agent firms, and I am also indebted to him for valuable assistance in the preparation of this report. To Mr. Watkins, Assistant Commissioner at Bombay, I am indebted for much resourceful assistance in meeting a peculiarly difficult situation in the matter of freights.

Finally, if I may presume to depart from the strict code of official etiquette, I would venture to tender my grateful thanks to the Government of India for their appreciation of the difficulties which necessarily faced both the Agent firms and myself in the initiation and the working of this scheme, and for the confidence which they extended in entrusting the solution of these difficulties to local settlement.

I have the honour to remain,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

(Sd.) M. M. S. GUBBAY.

M. M. S. GUBBAY,
Offg. Controller of Currency.

Review of the Reports on the Administration of the Mints at Calcutta and Bombay for the year 1915-16.

1.—Working of the Mints.

Receipts of Gold.

The private imports of sovereigns into India during the year were on a very small scale, and no tenders of gold were made at the Mints by the Presidency Banks or the public. The remittances by currency chests of sovereigns for examination and the receipts of light weight sovereigns were similarly insignificant.

2. Under an arrangement made in the previous year, the Government of India at present receive on behalf of the Bank of England the gold produced by the Indian Mining Companies. This is temporarily deposited at the Bombay Mint after melting and assay. The amount so deposited up to the end of March 1916 was valued at £3,655,000 of which about £2 millions had been shipped to England by the close of the year.

Coinage of Silver.

3. The details regarding the silver coinage executed in the two Mints for the Government of India during the year 1915-16, are shown in the statement below :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.
	Value in Rupees.	Value in Rupees.	Value in Rupees.
Rupees	90,00,000	58,00,058	1,48,00,058
Half-rupees	14,02,141	...	14,02,141
Total . . .	1,04,02,141	58,00,058	1,62,02,199
Total for 1914-15 .	1,46,04,865	71,90,471	2,17,95,336

4. There was no coinage of rupees from purchased silver during the year and the above coinage therefore consisted entirely of the re-coinage of uncurrent coin. No fractional silver was coined during the year. In the preceding year there was a considerable return from circulation of small silver coin, and, though there was some revival in the demand for it during the year under review, this was met from the existing stocks and no coinage of four-anna pieces and two-anna pieces was necessary.

5. No silver coinage was carried out for either the Ceylon or the Straits Government during the year, but 19,385 twenty-cent pieces coined in a previous year were shipped to Singapore.

Nickel and bronze coinage.

6. There was a revival in the demand for nickel and bronze coin, but, as in the case of the subsidiary silver coinage, this was largely met from existing stocks. The nickel coinage which was as usual confined to the Bombay mint consisted of 7,670,248 anna pieces of the nominal value of R4,79,390 against 42,352,000 pieces of the nominal value of R26,47,000 coined in the previous year.

The bronze coinage which is carried out entirely at the Calcutta Mint consisted of half pice and pie pieces of the aggregate value of ₹1,83,900 as compared with ₹4,60,700 in 1914-15.

Operative Losses.

7. Silver. The loss on the silver coined at the Calcutta Mint amounted to Rs. 76·74 and at the Bombay Mint to Rs. 121·19 per lakh of standard tolas coined against Rs. 124 at Calcutta and Rs. 104·29 at Bombay in the previous year. These figures are arrived at by calculating the value of the good coins on the Assay Masters' reports on the individual pyx. The fluctuations in these ratios from year to year appear to be partly due to the fact that recoveries effected after the close of a year cannot always be allocated with absolute accuracy to the year to which they really appertain.

8. Bronze. The operative loss on account of the bronze coinage at the Calcutta Mint, including melting, coining and departmental losses amounted to 16·26 maunds, giving a rate of 1·06 per hundred maunds of bronze pieces coined.

9. Nickel. The operative loss on nickel coinage amounted to 0·444 maund per hundred maunds of metal coined.

Revenue and Expenditure.

10. The statement below gives the usual figures of the revenue and expenditure, including interest on capital outlay and other pro formâ charges, of the two Mints for the two years 1914-15 and 1915-16 :—

Year.	Revenue.			Expenditure.
	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1914-15 . .	1,81,648	1,74,276	3,55,924	11,16,541	8,29,337	19,45,878
1915-16 . .	1,50,668	2,08,351	3,59,019	11,13,945	8,44,756	19,58,701

The increase in the revenue at the Bombay Mint is due to an increase in the assay fees in connection with the gold deposited by the Indian mining companies and also to a large increase in war work and work for the public. The increase on these accounts is to some extent set off by a decrease in the revenue on account of smaller nickel coinage while the smaller coinage of bronze in the Calcutta Mint accounts for the decline in the total revenue at that Mint.

11. The expenditure on salaries and establishments of the two Mints compares as follows with that incurred during 1914-15 :—

	Calcutta Mint.			Bombay Mint.			Both Mints.
	1914-15.	1915-16.	Increase + or Decrease — in 1915-16.	1914-15.	1915-16.	Increase + or Decrease — in 1915-16.	1914-15.	1915-16.	Increase + or Decrease — in 1915-16.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Fixed Establishment . .	1,83,470	2,03,975	+20,505	2,26,646	2,05,508	—21,138	4,10,116	4,09,483	—633
Temporary Establishment and overtime pay .	1,40,927	1,43,233	+2,306	92,845	1,14,544	+21,699	2,33,772	2,57,777	+24,005
Total .	3,24,397	3,47,208	+22,811	3,19,491	3,20,052	+561	6,43,888	6,67,260	+23,372

Though a comparatively small amount of coinage was carried out during the year, the establishments entertained at the two Mints were fully employed on munitions work and other miscellaneous duties.

Munitions Work.

12. Arrangements were made during the year for the manufacture of copper driving bands for shell-bodies and these were turned out by both the Mints in considerable quantities. Among the other war work on which the Mints were engaged may be mentioned the manufacture of ambulance bodies for motor cars, repair and upkeep of ambulance cars, gauges for shell making, miscellaneous electrical equipment for engineer services and miscellaneous work for the Supply and Transport Corps.

Miscellaneous Work.

13. The supplies of medals and dies for schools, colleges and other public institutions and of civil and military decorations and miniatures were larger than usual, while the demand for scales, weights and other articles for the Currency Department and Treasuries, also somewhat increased.

The receipts on account of miscellaneous work done in the two Mints and the cost were as follows:—

Year.	Calcutta Mint.			Bombay Mint.			Both Mints.
	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.

The Bombay figures include a sum of R10,357 on account of melting fees on the Indian Mines' gold deposited at the Mint.

Counterfeit Coins.

14. Treasuries.—The number of counterfeit silver coins of the several denominations cut at the Indian treasuries during 1915-16 compares as follows with the figures of the previous year:—

	Rs.	½ Rs.	¼ Rs.	⅛ Rs.	Total.
1914-15 . .	122,685	5,947	7,883	5,790	142,305
1915-16 . .	127,233	6,892	9,222	5,920	149,267

15. The following table gives the provincial distribution of the figures for the year 1915-16:—

16. Of the total of 127,233 counterfeit rupees, 61,822 were detected in Railway cash offices, the most important figures being 11,539 from the East Indian Railway, 7,174 from the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, 7,223 from the North-Western Railway, 5,907 from the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and 5,158 from the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway.

17. Mints.—Counterfeit silver coins numbering 10,954 pieces were received at the two Mints during the year against 9,266 pieces in the preceding year. The details for the two years are given in the statement below:—

The coins received were with a few exceptions palpable counterfeits of low touch silver or base metal.

Offences against coinage.

18. The following table compares the number of cases of offences against coinage brought to trial during the calendar year 1915 with the corresponding figures of the previous year. There was an appreciable increase in the number of cases tried and in the number of persons convicted, specially in Bengal, Burma, Assam and Central India Agency.

II.—Working of the Assay Offices.

Number of assays.

19. The following statement shows the number of gold and silver assays made in 1915-16 and the previous year :—

YEAR.	CALCUTTA ASSAY OFFICE.		BOMBAY ASSAY OFFICE.
	Gold.	Silver.	Gold.	Silver.
1914-15	471	10,035	3,286	4,122
1915-16	700	7,301	5,857	5,150

The increase in the number of gold assays at the Bombay Mint is mainly due to the deposit at that Mint of the gold from the Indian mines.

Meltings for standard silver coinage.

20. The average fineness per mille of silver meltings for coinage during the year was as follows :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.
Rupees	916·190	915·944
Half-rupees	916·137	...

Gold in silver coins.

21. The average of gold found by monthly parting assays in the silver pyx coins in the two Mints is shown below :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.
Rupees	0·586 per mille	0·408 per mille
Half-rupees	0·471 „	...

Pyx trials of silver coins.

22. The following table gives a summary of the results of the pyx trials in the two Mints :—

	TRIALS FOR WEIGHT.			TRIALS FOR FINENESS.
	Number of trials made.	Total number of coins weighed.	Average weight in grains.	Number of trials made.	Total number of coins assayed.		Average fineness per mille of coins assayed.

Bombay.
Rupees	61	780	180·049	61	580	1,250	916·436	916·500

23. None of the coins assayed was found beyond the legal remedy for fineness or weight. During the year under review, the system of assaying rupee pyxes originally introduced into the Calcutta Assay office by Lieutenant-Colonel J. Scully was adopted in the Bombay office in place of the old system hitherto in force there.

24. Under this system, 10 coins for each lakh are assayed singly (instead of 5 as was formerly the case in Bombay) and 20 coins are melted and granulated while a triplicate assay is made for average fineness. The new system doubles the probability of detecting any coins that may be outside remedy and also gives a better average value for each lakh of coins as represented by the coins actually assayed.

M. M. S. GUBBAY,
Offg. Controller of Currency.

The 4th August 1916.

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE CALCUTTA MINT.

No. 1468, dated Calcutta, the 1st June 1916.

From—Lieut.-Col. A. L. C. McCORMICK, R. E., Master of the Mint, Calcutta,

To—The Controller of Currency, Calcutta.

I have the honour to submit the annual report, relating to the administration of the Calcutta Mint for the financial year 1915-16, and append the usual statements.

I held charge of the Mint throughout the year under review.

GOLD.

2. Receipts.—There were no tenders of gold coin received during the year from the Presidency Banks or the public on currency account. Two small remittances of gold, representing the Currency chest accounts at Dumka and Purnea, were, however, examined by the Mint on behalf of the Currency Office, Calcutta, and the results are detailed below :—

Tale.	Classification.	Value in Rupees.
1,361	Sovereigns of current weight	20,415
1	Defective sovereigns unfit for re-issue, nominal value .	15
59	Sovereigns of short weight or not more than 3 grains less than standard weight, nominal value	885
	TOTAL .	21,315

The above current weight sovereigns were as usual remitted to the Currency Office.

3. The following receipts represent the value of gold coin and bullion received on Treasury account.

Tale.	Classification.	Value in Rupees.
1	Sovereigns of current weight unfit for re-issue, nominal value .	15
1	Sovereigns and half sovereigns of short weight or not more than 3 grains less than standard weight, nominal value . .	15
4	Sovereigns and half sovereigns of reduced weight or more than 3 grains less than standard weight, bullion value . . .	47
	Gold Bullion	1,056
	TOTAL .	1,133

4. Owing to heavy demands for gold medals, miniatures, and Indian title badges, the Mint was obliged to purchase under recent sanction Rs. 19,989 worth of fine gold to replenish stock and meet urgent requisitions which were constantly received throughout the year.

SILVER.

5. Receipts.—Uncurrent silver coins to the nominal value of Rs. 1,04,35,001 were received for recoinage during the year and the result of their examination is as follows :—

Classification.	In thousands of Rupees.
Government Rupees and half rupees of 1835	4,68
Do. do. 1840, 1st issue	10,32
Do. do. do., 2nd issue	32,88
Coins, shroff marked, dumb and defective	10,82
Do. worn	42,43
Do. reduced	21
Do. Soldered	1,90
George V. 1911 Rs.	90
Current weight coins unnecessarily cut by Treasuries	21
TOTAL .	1,04,35

These figures include the uncurrent coins eliminated from the special remittances received from the Currency Offices at Calcutta, Cawnpore and Rangoon.

6. As in the case of gold purchased for medals, silver purchases to the value of Rs. 5,986 were made to replenish stock.

7. Coinage.—The silver coinage during the year under report was confined to the recoinage of the receipts of uncurrent coins. The total number of pieces coined amounted to 11,804,282 and its equivalent nominal value to Rs. 1,04,02,141. As compared with the coinage of the previous year the number of pieces coined was less by 10,361,083. There was no coinage of subsidiary silver coins for the Ceylon Government.

8. Percentage of good coins.—The percentage of good coins obtained from weight of metal operated on was within the average. The details of these percentages are shown below :—

Rupees	133·4	68·92
½ Rupees	16·9	65·23

9. Pyx trials.—The Assay Master's reports on the pyx coins sent to him for test show that the weight and fineness of the silver coinage was maintained at the prescribed standards.

10. Silver Operative Losses.—I append below the usual balance statement for the verification year ending 29th February, 1916, showing the loss sustained in silver coinage operations.

	Rs.		Rs.
Balance in hand .	4,41,318	Issues	1,05,27,060
Receipts . . .	1,05,03,511	Closing balance	4,09,699
		Operative losses	8,070
TOTAL .	1,09,44,829	TOTAL .	1,09,44,829

There were 105·15 lakhs of standard tolas coined during this period; the rate of loss on this coinage, therefore, works out to Rs. 76·74 per lakh. The value of the good coins was calculated on the Assay Master's reports on the individual pyx.

The rate of loss for the previous year, mentioned in paragraph 14 of that report, amounted to 124 tolas per lakh of standard tolas coined and the reduction in the loss per lakh during the year under review is most satisfactory.

11. During the year an enquiry, which had been instituted but necessarily postponed by my predecessor in the previous year, to discover the cause of that year's excessive loss, was resumed. As a result of this enquiry it was considered that considerable carelessness had been exhibited by the Bullion staff in certain departments of the Mint during that year, and the Bullion Keeper under his agreement was called upon to replace deficiencies arising from neglect to the extent of Rs. 700.

BRONZE AND COPPER.

12. Coinage.— The Mint executed bronze coinage for the Government of India amounting to 30,393,600 pieces valued at Rs. 1,83,900. Details of this coinage will be found in Statement II attached to this report. On comparison with the coinage of the previous year the total number of pieces coined is less by 14,739,200 in the year under report.

13. Purchases of new copper to the extent of 500 tons, valued at Rs. 7,51,901, were made in the year under review, but these purchases were earmarked for munitions work.

14. The total weight of metal written off the accounts as operative loss, which includes melting and coining departmental losses, amounted to 16·26 maunds, giving a rate of 1·06 per hundred maunds of bronze pieces coined.

15. The weight of copper lost in the manufacture of munitions was maunds 460·26 on maunds 24730·51 of metal worked, or at the rate of 1·86 per hundred maunds passed through the rolls.

MISCELLANEOUS.

16. Though the coinage operations have been below normal the Mint has been kept very busy with much miscellaneous work.

17. Judging by the total value of purchases of gold and silver mentioned in paragraphs 4 and 6 of this report, which amounted to Rs. 25,975, it is obvious that the work in the direction of supplies of medals for schools, colleges and similar institutions, and the supply of civil and military decorations and miniatures has greatly increased.

18. The demand for scales, weights and other articles for the Currency Department and Treasuries has also increased, and all this extra work has kept the Die, Medal fitting, Weight adjusting and General Workshop Departments very busy throughout the year.

19. The preparation of two commemorative tablets which were placed on the Durbar Memorial column at Delhi was also undertaken by this Mint. These tablets were cast in bronze with inscriptions in English and Urdu commemorating the Durbar held by His Imperial Majesty The King Emperor at Delhi in 1911, and were inserted in the column. Illustrations of some of the medals designed and prepared by this Mint, as well as those of two seals Nos. 3 and 4, which were prepared in silver from designs received from the Bengal State Medical Faculty and the Bengal Council of Medical Registration Departments, are shown on the frontispiece of this report.

PLANT AND MACHINERY.

20. During the year new electrical recording instruments were received from England through a local Calcutta firm, and, on arrival, were erected as quickly as possible, and a statement of the cost of running the Mint generating station for the second half of the year under review can now be presented. The cost per unit is somewhat higher than that recorded in previous years, but this increased rate is due to the small number of units generated throughout the year against which no commensurate saving in establishment and pro formâ charges was possible.

The number of B. T. units generated was		196,250
Fuel, Establishment and Stores	Rs.	15,723
Depreciation at 5 per cent. on Plant and 3 per cent. on Buildings and Provision for Pension for the half-year	,,	13,150
TOTAL	Rs.	28,873
The cost per unit works out as follows:—
Fuel, Establishment and Stores	Annas	1·281
Depreciation, Interest and Pension	,,	1·070
TOTAL COST PER UNIT	,,	2·351

MUNITIONS WORK.

21. Early in the year a few dies for rifle backsights were supplied to the Rifle Factory, Ishapur; but these orders are received with such regularity that now they are regarded as annually recurring events.

22. Later on, the local Supply and Transport Officer enquired as to the possibility of the Mint supplying his department with large numbers of mule pakkals for carrying water. As an experiment some sixty of these pakkals were made up in the Mint, and these were ultimately taken over and paid for by the Supply and Transport Department. The order, however, was not confirmed, and it is believed that local contractors were ultimately found who could guarantee supplies.

23. In July, I addressed the Controller of Currency and the Director of Munitions, offering the services of the Mint, as far as the exigencies of coinage permitted, for the manufacture of munitions. The immediate reply was a request by the Superintendent of Munitions for the loan of 5 lathes, which were supplied, to enable him to completely furnish some of the workshops which he was equipping in Calcutta for the manufacture of driving bands for shell. A second request for large and continuous supplies of pure copper strap was also complied with.

24. This necessitated the melting of copper ingots into malleable bars, an operation which the Indian Mints had never previously been called upon to perform, and which, indeed, had been regarded until very recent years as impracticable, except with special plant and very highly trained workmen.

25. A visit to the Government Shell Factory at Ishapur, enabled me to commence melting operations here on correct lines, and although this work has been carried on continuously, since its commencement it has progressed practically without a hitch and results have been very satisfactory.

26. It was soon perceived that great economies could be effected, combined with a more efficient supply, if this Mint could undertake to deliver completely finished driving bands instead of copper strap to the various requisitioning centres, but this required a large hydraulic plant, and the Mint had never been equipped with hydraulic machinery.

27. Applications to various Calcutta firms were then made for the loan of any available and surplus hydraulic and other pressing machinery, and the result was most gratifying. These machines were offered and lent by many of the firms to whom applications had been addressed and by the end of the year I was able to report to the Deputy Director of Munitions, that, provided large coinage operations did not intervene, and there was no breakdown in the rather old and worn machinery which had been erected, the Mint was in a position to meet all his estimated requirements for driving bands for shells.

28. In the meantime, some of the most unpromising Mint machines had been fitted to take their part in the production of the required munitions, and if these can never be said to have worked very economically they have proved themselves most essential towards maintaining the outturn which now and always must be a matter of primary importance.

29. The following Calcutta firms, and others, have lent machinery to the Mint free of charge and for the period of the war unless otherwise stated.

The Manager, Burma Oil Co., Ltd.

Messrs. Barry & Co., Agents of the Gouripore Oil Mills.

Messrs. Andrew Yule & Co., Agents, Howrah Oil Mills.

Messrs. John King & Co., Ltd.

Messrs. Graham & Co., Agents for the Ganges Valley Bone Mills Co., Ltd.,—machinery lent for a specified period.

National Council of Education, Bengal, machinery lent for a small monthly payment.

30. Towards the end of the year it was found that there was a certain lack of lathes for the work in hand, but in spite of this fact, owing to light coinage operations and to the constant employment of the staff and workmen on overtime, in addition to the works enumerated above, it has been found possible to supply the Munitions Department throughout the year with a constant supply of gauges for use in such factories as manufacture shells.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

31. Charges Levied.—The Revenue realised under this head was Rs. 2,847 of which Rs. 2,531 represented assay fees.

32. Gain on Recoinage.—The total gain credited amounted to Rs. 3,960 of which Rs. 3,922 represented the gain by overstandard value of uncurrent silver coins withdrawn from circulation.

33. Cash and Transfer Receipts.—The receipts amounted to Rs. 83,115 as compared with Rs. 75,779 in the previous year. The increase is chiefly due to cash receipts realised for miscellaneous work.

34. Operative Losses.—This item of expenditure is dealt with in paragraph 10 of this report.

35. Loss on Recoinage.—The loss under this head of account amounts to Rs. 2,29,380 against Rs. 2,79,206 in the previous year. The decrease is due to the receipts of withdrawn uncurrent silver coin being about Rs. 32,26,000 less than that of the previous year.

36. Copper used as Alloy.—The value of copper used for alloying silver to the standard of fineness necessary for coinage amounted to Rs. 15 as compared with Rs. 1,166 in the previous year. The decrease is due to the reduced silver coinage as well as the substitution of some low touch silver in lieu of copper in the meltings.

37. Copper and other metals used for Contingent purposes.—The expenditure amounted to Rs. 1,551 as compared with Rs. 504 in the previous year. The increase is due to additional miscellaneous work undertaken during the year under report.

38. Salaries and Establishment.—The expenditure under this head of account was Rs. 3,47,208 as compared with Rs. 3,24,397 in the previous year. The increase in the fixed establishment charges is due to the Mint Master and Deputy Assay Master drawing the full pay of their appointments as well as the return from furlough of the 1st Assistant to the Mint Master. The increase in the temporary establishment charges is due to certain departments being on overtime to meet the demand for munitions.

39. English and Local Stores.—The total expenditure amounted to Rs. 1,39,775 against Rs. 1,08,469 in the previous year. The increase which is chiefly due to the expenditure on English stores, which amounted to Rs. 19,655, is in a measure due to expenditure on munitions work. The consumption of crucibles, especially during the latter half of the year for munition meltings, together with the cost of steel for tools, etc., accounts for a fair proportion of the increased expenditure ; the value of these stores, however, will be recovered from the Munitions Department as work progresses.

40. The usual verification of Europe store balances, which was in progress at the end of the last financial year, was completed in the month of June. The surpluses and deficiencies were investigated and adjusted in the accounts.

41. Contingent Charges.—The expenditure amounted to Rs. 31,812. There is a slight increase of Rs. 1,288.

42. Pro formâ Receipts and Charges.—The receipts amounted to Rs. 60,697 and represent a credit at rates laid down in Finance Department letter No. 1966-F., dated 17th December 1914, to cover approximately the working expenses on bronze coinage executed during the year. The charges amounted to Rs. 3,19,249 and include Rs. 2,84,995 interest at 3½ per cent. on the bullion and store balances and capital account.

43. Balances sunk in the Mint.—The daily average silver balance amounted to Rs. 9,59,986, the balance reached a maximum value of Rs. 17,88,760 on 7th October 1915, and declined to a minimum value of Rs. 4,10,199 on 25th February 1916.

COUNTERFEIT COINS.

44. The Mint during the course of examination of uncurrent silver coins from Treasuries, eliminated counterfeit rupees 2,138, half rupees 75, quarter rupees 364 and one-eighth rupees 520.

45. Counterfeit coins, the majority of which were very palpable, were received as usual from Treasuries and other offices for disposal.

46. There was an increase in the number of counterfeit coins sent in by Magistrates, Police and Treasury officers for examination and report. These are detailed in Statement IV attached to this report.

OFFENCES AGAINST COINAGE.

47. The usual statement of offences against coinage is appended to this report. The total number of cases brought to trial and the number of persons tried and convicted during the calendar year 1915 was greater than in the calendar year 1914.

48. The ratio of the number of persons brought to trial to those convicted was 54·8 against 63·1 of last year.

GENERAL.

49. I greatly regret to record that during the year there has been considerable sickness in the Mint, and the loss by death of two Engineer officers in charge of departments. This and the formation of a new department for munitions work have thrown considerable extra work on the remaining members of the Mint staff. I am glad to report however that this extra work has always been cheerfully undertaken and faithfully executed.

APPENDIX.

THE PREVENTION OF FALSIFICATION IN THE CASE OF GOLD BARS.

It is customary for bullion merchants to present bullion at the Assay Offices of the Indian Mints for the purpose of obtaining certificates of fineness and many transactions in bullion are based on these certificates.

In the case of gold bullion it is melted, and a dip sample is taken from the molten mass, which is then cast into bars averaging 500 tolas or 12·86 lbs. in weight. When gold of a high degree of purity is employed a bar of 500 tolas would, at present rates, be worth more than 12,000 rupees.

It has been customary to weigh carefully each bar after casting, and to stamp it with a reference number. Pending the completion of the assay of the dip muster of the bar, the owner assumes charge of his bullion, and in many cases, to avoid loss of interest on locked up capital, sells it, so that the bars never return to the Assay Department to receive the stamp of fineness. In such cases an agreement is arrived at, between the parties to the transaction, to accept the certificate of assay of the small dip sample as a basis for the settlement of accounts. The certificate furnished in such cases expressly states that the assay only applies to the melted sample, and so exonerates the assayer from responsibility for a bar which he has had no opportunity of again seeing and verifying.

When a bar was returned it was verified by weighing, and received, in addition to its original reference markings, the seal of the Assay Office, and figures to indicate its fineness. The certificate furnished with it stated its reference marks, its weight, and its fineness.

It is obvious that such a system allowed of the perpetration of fraud. A bar withdrawn from the Assay Office might be substituted by a bar of inferior bullion. The inferior bar with forged markings, and brought accurately to agreement in weight with the original, on presentation to the Assay Department, would probably pass verification, and would then receive the seal of the office and a certificate of fineness. In case of reclamation with reference to such a bar the Assayer would find it difficult to evade responsibility. A certificate might also be obtained in the ordinary course of business from the Assay Department, and another bar substituted externally for the original one: this other bar having all its markings including the seal of the office of issue, forged. That so much skill exists, and has possibly been exercised, is evidenced by the fact that a very well executed copy in brass of the seal of the Assay Office has been seized by the Police.

A very slight change in the stated fineness of a bar of 500 tolas makes an appreciable difference in its valuation. The change might be one that would easily evade such rough and ready tests as the touchstone, which is the one usually applied by bullion dealers. For instance a bar of 980 fineness, of 500 tolas, with gold at 24 rupees per tola, if accepted at 990, in consequence of forged markings to suit an accompanying certificate, would yield 120 rupees in excess of its real value.

To enable merchants to obtain immediate possession of their bullion ; to ensure that the assayer can identify a bar when presented for stamping, or on any subsequent occasion ; and to render the process of falsification so difficult as to be practically impossible, the following method has been adopted :—

Two criteria are relied on in identifying a bar.—

A. Its weight.

B. The measurement of a fixed dimension.

A. Each bar is carefully weighed to a grain, or to one part in 90,000. Its weight is recorded, and the same weight furnished on the certificate serves the bullion dealers as a basis in their calculation of value.

B. To secure a fixed dimension in a bar it was decided to stamp it between two dies, which would impress two small circular areas, one on the upper, and one on the lower surface of the bar. These small circular areas are recessed in the bar by the act of punching and hence are sheltered from usage. The two planes are of such a size as to accommodate easily the jaws of a micrometer calipers, and, by the aid of such an instrument the distance between them is ascertained to $\frac{1}{100}$ mm. or $\frac{1}{2500}$ inch. These circular areas are shown in figures 1 and 5, reproductions of the stamping surfaces of the lower and upper die respectively. Mr. F. K. Wezel, Head Engraver, Calcutta Mint, designed and executed these dies. The elaborate and minutely executed detail would require a skilled artist for its successful imitation, but, in addition, to him is owing the important and highly ingenious idea of making the lower die a compound one. The lower die, as the figures show, contains within it three smaller dies; these auxiliary dies are changed daily, and the combination for a particular date is known only to the Assay Department. In this way from inspection of the lower stamp on a gold bar it can be said on what date it issued from the Assay Office. The mechanical difficulties thus placed in the way of a forger may be realised from the reproduction of the box of 48 auxiliaries employed with the lower die. Each of these subsidiary pieces has to be carefully engraved, tempered, and made an exact mechanical fit to its recess in the lower die.

It is conceivable that a false bar might be cast and adjusted to resemble in weight one issued from the Assay Department and the markings of the original bar might be counterfeited by an artist of ability; but to arrange so that, simultaneously, the distance apart of two small circular areas would agree with the distance of those in the original bar to $\frac{1}{2500}$ of an inch, would imply the possession of tools of such mechanical perfection that it is highly probable they do not exist anywhere at present, much less in the possession of a forger.

It is felt that this system will permit the Assayer to allow merchants immediate custody of their bars, and will enable him to identify them on any subsequent occasion. To assist the public in detecting attempts at fraud the following notice is issued on each certificate accompanying a gold bar:—

> "In any case of doubt of the applicability of this certificate to the bar to which it purports to apply, on simultaneous presentation of both at the Assay Office of origin, they will be verified free of charge."

GOLD.

2. Receipts:—

(a) The value of sovereigns and half-sovereigns in respect of which certificates were issued during the year amounted to Rs. 6,234 as compared with Rs. 2,58,46,337 in 1914-15 and consisted of the following :—

(f) The Indian Mines continued to remit their outturn of gold fortnightly to the Mint for custody, after melting and assay, on behalf of the Bank of England.

SILVER.

3. Receipts.—The silver receipts comprised :—

(a) Withdrawn and uncurrent silver coins received for re-coinage of the nominal value of Rs. 59,75,161, classified as follows :—

(b) A consignment of old subsidiary silver coins of the Straits Government of the outturn value of Rs. 1,39,430 received from the Colonial Secretary, Singapore, and brought to account for recoinage into 20 Cent pieces.

The description and weight of this consignment is given below :—

Description of silver received.	Amount in lakhs of tolas.
Old 20 Cent pieces	·55
„ 10 „ „	·82
„ 5 „ „	·23
TOTAL	1·60

4. Silver Coinage :—

(a) The Government coinage carried out during the year consisted of rupees only valued at Rs. 58,00,058. Rs. 58,00,000 were paid into the Reserve Treasury, Bombay.

(b) 19,385 twenty cent pieces left over from the 1913-14 coinage were shipped to Singapore in part payment of the recoinage referred to in paragraph 3 (b) above.

(c) The whole of the coinage examined by the Assay Master during the year was found to be within legal remedy for weight and fineness.

5. Percentage of Good Coin :—

A percentage of 67·5 good coin was obtained on 89,22,015 tolas of ingots rolled.

6. Silver operative losses:—

The silver operative losses are detailed below :—

Table A.

	Rs.	A.	P.		Rs.	A.	P.
Opening Balance .	9,34,120	5	6	Issues .	58,04,552	9	10
Receipts . .	59,79,353	8	0	Closing Balance .	11,02,811	11	8

Loss on melting balance in hand on 1st April 1915 worked up in 1915-16 . .	325	0	0	. Operative loss .	7,297	8	0
	69,15,390	13	6		69,15,390	13	6

This gives a rate of loss of Rs. 121·19 per lakh on a coinage of 60·2 lakhs of good coins coined during the twelve months, valued on the individual pyx as was done last year. It is probable that the rates arrived at for the year 1914-15 were on the low side as in the previous year a comparatively large amount of work had been done, and it is therefore more than likely that some small portion of the recoveries credited to 1914-15 were really due to 1913-14. Since in 1914-15 there was but little work very small credits would reduce the rate largely. The year now under review followed on a year of but little work when very complete recoveries were possible. It is therefore improbable that any false credits have crept into this year's accounts.

It may be noted that the year has been one of practical inactivity and the silver outturn with three exceptions is the lowest for sixty-five years. These facts considered, the year's working may be regarded as satisfactory.

For reasons given in my report on last year's losses I give Table B according to which the rate would stand at Rs. 87·29 per lakh.

NICKEL.

7. The number of nickel one-anna pieces coined during the year was 7,670,248 of the value of Rs. 4,79,890 being Rs 21,67,610 less than that of the previous year. Rs. 13,61,000 worth were taken over by the Reserve Treasury, Bombay.

The total operative loss written off the books during the year amounted to $3\frac{9}{16}$ maunds, giving a percentage of ·444 maund per 100 maunds of metal coined.

It will be observed that the percentage of loss in this instance has been taken on the year's output as against the amount rolled in past years. It is obvious that Government is concerned only with the rate of loss on outturn of good coin and not on rates worked out on the various stages of manufacture.

8. War work.—The Mint has been largely engaged during the year under review on the manufacture of copper driving bands for shells, ambulance bodies for motor cars, repair and upkeep of ambulance cars, gauges for shell making, miscellaneous electrical equipment for Engineer Services, and miscellaneous work for the Supply and Transport Corps.

MISCELLANEOUS.

9. Miscellaneous Work.—This consisted of the melting of Indian Mines' gold, the recurring supply of dies, medals, etc., to various public institutions, the manufacture and adjustment of scales and weights, miscellaneous supplies and repairs undertaken for Government Departments and the public, the profit made being Rs. 11,726.

10. Treasure Trove Coins.—During the year 445 silver coins were received from the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. Excepting 2 coins of Shah Alum II, these coins were of no numismatic value. The amount realised by the sales of treasure trove coins during the year was Rs. 111, the metal value at which the coins were credited in the accounts being Rs. 90. The profit amounted to Rs. 21.

11. Mint Working Standards.—The weights in all the Departments were periodically compared with the standards and any difference found carefully adjusted.

12. Visitors.—Visitors, including several parties of school children were shown round the Mint during the year.

13. Analysis of Revenue and Expenditure.—The only points in the accounts on the receipt side which require notice are :—

(a) The large increase of assay fees due to a complete year of receipts from Indian Mines and also to a large increase in the work for the public;

(b) The large increase in cash and transfer receipts to over Rs. $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs against about Rs. $\frac{1}{4}$ lakh for the preceding year due to war work; and

(c) The large decrease in the pro formâ receipts from nickel coinage which for the year under review are slightly over Rupees 1 lakh less than for 1914-15 owing to the cessation of nickel coinage.

On the expenditure side the main differences are an increase in local and English stores of some Rs. 30,000 and in transfer receipts of over Rs. 4,000, both these being due to war work. The establishment charges remain at practically the same figure as for the preceding year as though less coinage was carried out the establishment was kept fully employed on miscellaneous war work.

14. Resumé of Revenue and Expenditure.—The result of the transactions of the year as summarised in Statement No. 1 shows a loss of Rs. 6,36,405 from Mint operations during the year, due to there being no new silver coinage.

15. Balances Sunk in the Mint.—The balances of silver bullion belonging to Government valued at one Rupee per tola of standard fineness, stood at the beginning of the year at Rs. 9,34,120 and at its close Rs. 9,69,290. The average daily balance was Rs. 10,11,218. The minimum daily balance was Rs. 4,96,263 on the 30th June 1915 and the maximum was Rs. 15,20,294 on the 22nd November 1915.

16. Capital Account.—Rs. 13,065 on account of buildings and Rs. 4,251 on account of machinery were added to their respective heads during the year. The balance at debit of this account at the end of the year after allowing for depreciation on buildings and plant stood at Rs. 35,97,109.

17. Extensions.—No important extensions were carried out by the Public Works Department during the year under review.

OFFENCES AGAINST COINAGE.

18. Return of Counterfeit Coins.—The usual return of counterfeit coins is appended to this Report.

(a) 1,855 counterfeit coins (1,570 rupees, 31 half-rupees, 64 quarters and 190 one-eighths) were received for examination during the year as against 1,386 in 1914-15, and were classified as follows :—

(i) Only one coin—a struck quarter rupee—received from the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway was retained as an exceptionally well executed specimen. A cast rupee was the only exceptionally well executed coin received for examination from other sources.

(ii) 9 coins—all castings—were sufficiently good to deceive the public as regards colour and finish.

(iii) The remaining 1,844 coins (10 struck and 1,834 castings) were in the majority of cases inferior specimens of low touch silver or base metal and noticeably false.

(The second and third classes above include coins which were returned to the Railways.)

(b) 2,233 counterfeit coins (1,869 rupees, 36 half-rupees, 106 quarters and 222 one-eighths) were discovered in remittances of uncurrent coins to the Mint as against 1,613 in the previous year.

(c) During the year under report 54,661 counterfeit coins were cut at treasuries and Railways as against 51,054 in 1914-15.

(d) 346 one-anna pieces received during the year were found to be palpable cast counterfeits of lead and tin or other similar alloys.

(e) 3 fairly well executed and 6 palpable counterfeit sovereigns—all castings—were received during the year for examination.

2. Number and description of assays.—The number of assays during the year amounted to 11,114 as against 7,715 in the previous financial year.

Description	Number.	Total.

3. Gold and Silver Assays.—The total number of gold assays from all sources during the year was 5,857 as against 3,286 in the previous year. Of these 2,829 assays were done for the Mint. These assays represent work for the Mysore mines. The number of assays done for these mines during the previous year was 1,506, giving a total of 4,335 assays for the two years.

The work was very heavy and of considerable responsibility.

The total number of silver assays from all sources was 5,150 as against 4,122 in the previous year. Of these 2,204 were done for the Mint.

4. Meltings for silver standard coinage.—Silver meltings for rupees only during the year were assayed from May 1915 to March 1916.

The average fineness of the silver meltings was :—

as shown in the following table :—

Months.	Rupees.

Average for the year	915·944

5. Gold in silver coinage.—The average proportion of gold found by monthly parting assays in the silver pyx coins was :—

For rupees . . . . . ·498 per mille.

The coinage of the year was computed to contain 1,154 Troy ounces of gold of the value of £4,892 19*s.* 2*d.*

6. Pyx trials—Rupees.—The trials of these coins for weight amounted to 61 the total number weighed being 780 i.e., in the months of April, May and June 1915 there were 17 deliveries of rupees, and 20 coins were weighed in each delivery, and from the month of July 1915 there were 44 deliveries, and 10 coins weighed in each delivery. The average weight of all was 180·049 grains, the lightest and heaviest coins weighed were respectively 179·20 and 180·90 grains.

The trials for fineness were 61 ; 580 coins were assayed singly (i.e., in April 1915 there were 6 deliveries and 5 coins were assayed singly in each delivery and from May 1915 there were 55 deliveries and 10 coins were assayed singly in each delivery); and 1,250 in groups of 25 and 20 coins after melting (i.e., in April 1915, 6 deliveries and 25 coins were melted together in each delivery, and from May 1915, 55 deliveries and 20 coins were melted together in each delivery). Of the coins assayed singly the average fineness of 580 coins was 916·438 per mille. No coin was found beyond remedy. The 1,250 coins assayed in groups of 25 and 20 coins after melting gave an average fineness of 916·500, the lowest and highest figures obtained for any melting of coins being respectively 915·8 and 917·0 per mille.

7. Cupro-nickel assays.—The cupro-nickel assays done during the year are given in the following table :—

			Copper.	Nickel.	Iron.
April 1915	Nickel one-anna pieces.	45	74·78	25·28	A trace but undetermined.

8. Summary of pyx trials.—The results detailed in paragraphs 5 and 6 are summarised in the following table :—

Denominations.	Number of coins weighed singly.	Number of coins assayed singly.	Number of coins assayed after melting.	Average weight (grains).	Average fineness of coins assayed singly (per mille).	Average fineness of coins assayed after melting per mille.	Proportion of gold in pyx coins per mille.
Rupees	780	580	1,250	180·049	916·438	916 5	·498

9. Miscellaneous assays.—Of the 78 assays under the "Assays on various metals and ores" in paragraph 2 of this report, 8 were assays on counterfeit coins, and samples of nickel and copper received from the Mint Master.

10. The system of assaying rupee pyxes in force in Bombay for very many years was done away with, and the Calcutta Assay Office system originally introduced by Lieutenant-Colonel J. Scully, I.M.S., was adopted.

By the latter system 10 coins are assayed singly (instead of 5 as formerly) and 20 coins are melted and granulated while a triplicate assay made for average fineness.

Although when coinage is heavy, the assay work will be increased, on the other hand, there will be compensation in that the new system will double the chance of detecting coins outside remedy besides securing a better average value for each lakh, and one which will agree more closely with the melted muster.

11. The new reference Standard Tola set of weights which was received in August 1914 and verified in the winter of 1914-15 was again verified in the cold weather of 1915-16.

The weights were found to have become most unreliable, and had varied so considerably in weight that it was decided not to make further use of them as Reference Standards. They were therefore sent home to be further seen to by the Standards Department.

12. The post of Assay Master was held by Lieutenant-Colonel J. Lloyd Jones, I.M.S., from 1st April to 18th April 1915, and from 8th July 1915 to the end of the financial year. From 19th April to 7th July 1915, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Lloyd Jones, I.M.S., was on privilege leave in India for 2 months and 19 days during which time Captain H. J. Wallis, I. A., was acting for him.

The post of Deputy Assay Master was held by Captain H. J. Wallis, I.A., from 1st April to 11th July 1915, and from 13th September 1915 to the end of the financial year. From 12th July to 11th September 1915 Captain H. J. Wallis, I.A., was on privilege leave out of India for 2 months during which time Lieutenant-Colonel J. REPORT UPON THE OPERATIONS OF THE CURRENCY DEPARTMENT DURING THE YEAR 1915-16.

From—H. F. HOWARD, Esq., C.I.E., I.C.S., Controller of Currency,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance Department.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit my report on the operations of the Currency Department, the movement of funds, and the resource operations of the Government of India during the year 1915-16.

I.—Introductory.

Introductory.

I referred last year to the satisfactory manner in which the Indian currency system was able to meet the various grave and sudden problems which arose on the outbreak of war. After a further twelve months under war conditions it is, I think, legitimate to reiterate the feeling of satisfaction then expressed. I explained in my last report that, after the first shock of the crisis had passed, confidence and credit in India generally tended to show a steady improvement. This improvement continued during the year under review, and though trade was necessarily hampered by various restrictions it showed great elasticity in adapting itself to the abnormal conditions prevailing. Thus, in spite of the various disturbing factors which have directly affected India, it may be claimed that the activity of many branches of her trade, the revival in the demand for money to finance her products, the stability of sterling exchange, and the increasing popularity of currency notes afford gratifying indications not only of the general prosperity of the country but also of confidence in the strength of the currency system and in the adequacy of its resources.

I have on the present occasion followed the same general arrangement for the report as was adopted last year. Thus, the next section is concerned mainly with the external trade of India, the trade balance, the sale of Council bills, exchange, etc. In the subsequent sections the Government treasury balances, the Paper Currency and the Gold Standard Reserves, the demand for and the movement of the various forms of currency in India and certain miscellaneous matters are dealt with.

II.—The balance of foreign trade and its adjustment.

General relations between trade and currency.

2. As has been explained in previous reports the movements of currency within India are mainly dependent on trade operations, and the total demand for currency is largely determined by the volume and value of India's trade, and particularly of her export trade. Moreover, in the case of India, the position of her trade balance is of special importance in any consideration of her financial and currency arrangements, as with it are ultimately bound up the arrangements for meeting the Home charges of the Indian Government, and also the stability of exchange.

Statistics of the foreign trade.

3. The statement below contains a summary of the statistics of India's foreign trade in recent years, and also includes some other items which are usually taken into account in arriving at her trade balance :—

(In lakhs of rupees.)

(c) This represents payments in India (Calcutta 11,79, Bombay 12,18 and Madras 7,08) whereas the figure given in the statement in paragraph 9 represents drawings in London.

Though the year 1915-16 included twelve months under war conditions as compared with eight months in 1914-15, the total volume of exports shows an increase, while there was a further decline on the import side. The most striking feature of the statement, however, is the large net balance in favour of India which is considerably higher even than the unprecedented figure reached last year. I refer briefly in the following paragraphs to the general causes which have conduced to this result. The position is, however, so abnormal that I have thought it advisable to attempt to explain it in greater detail, and a fuller analysis of it is accordingly given in an appendix to this report.

4. The following table shows the more noteworthy fluctuations in the case of the exports during the last three years :—

Articles.	Value in lakhs of rupees			Increase + Decrease— in Value in 1915-16

Raw wool	2,50	2,37	3,79	+1,42	+1,29

While an increase occurred under the majority of the heads, there was a further falling off in the value of the exports of rice, oil-seeds and raw cotton, following on similar declines under these heads in the preceding year. The curtailment in the demand was no doubt largely due to the war in all the three cases, as large quantities of these commodities are usually shipped to the Continent. In the case of rice, however, other causes also operated as Bengal, owing to the unsatisfactory character of her own crop, was not only unable to ship rice to the extent possible in normal years but was also compelled to indent heavily for rice on Burma. The Collector of Customs, Rangoon, draws attention to the fact that the share of the exports of Burma rice taken by India amounted to over 1¼ million tons, being 56 per cent. of the total exports and the highest figure on record. Shipments to India in 1914-15 were only slightly less than this figure as compared with only about ¼ million tons in 1911-12 and 1912-13. The demand from India has therefore temporarily largely compensated Burma for the loss of some of her important foreign markets.

In the case of wheat, arrangements were made by Government for the purchase and export of the available surplus on account of Government and under Government control. An account of the working of the arrangements adopted will be found in paragraphs 113 to 115 of the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement for the year 1916-17. Prices ruled high throughout the year with the result that, though the exports were somewhat smaller in volume than in the preceding year, their actual value was rather higher. Since the close of the year prices have fallen and it has been possible to terminate the special arrangements in force during 1915-16 and, subject to certain restrictions, to permit the resumption of the private trade in wheat.

In the present connection one point with regard to the finance of the wheat scheme requires mention, viz., that funds for the purchase of the Rs. 690 lakhs worth of wheat shipped on Government account were provided in two different ways :—

(1) by money supplied by the Agent firms in India, they being subsequently re-imbursed by drafts on London or by payments made by the Secretary of State. The purchases financed in this way amounted to about Rs. 265 lakhs;

(2) by funds supplied by the Wheat Commissioner in India for the balance of the payments.

If the statement of the balance of trade is to be complete in so far as these transactions are concerned, it is clear that the relevant transactions, viz., (a) export of goods, and (b) remittance of funds to India to pay for them, should appear in full on both sides of the account. From what I have just said, however, it will be seen that the statement given in paragraph 3 above does not take into account Rs. 425 lakhs, this being the extent to which funds were supplied by Government for the purchase of wheat in India. To put the matter in another way, the net demand for trade remittances to India by means of Councils was pro tanto reduced.

Some of the larger increases in the export of commodities are to a great extent due to the special demand for them set up by the war, e.g., in the case of jute manufactures, tea, hides and skins, raw wool, and indigo. It may be mentioned that the exports of raw jute, though higher than in the preceding year, are still considerably below the level reached in 1913-14. The exports of jute manufactures, however, and particularly of gunny bags, have been enormous. One incidental result has been that the Indian jute mills have made very large profits, a substantial portion of which has not been distributed in the way of dividends, but has been placed to reserve or employed in writing down block and utilised in financing the mills' holdings of jute, etc. A further result has been that the mills, which formerly relied largely on the banks to finance them, are at the present time in a large measure able to dispense with this assistance.

Import of merchandise.

5. The following statement shows the more important fluctuations on the import side of the account:—

Articles.	Value in lakhs of rupees			Increase + Decrease − in value in 1915-16.
	1913-14.	1914-15.	1915-16.	As compared with 1914-15.	As compared with 1913-14
Sugar	14,96	10,53	16,62	+6,09	+1,66
Cotton yarn and piece-goods	66,30	49,00	43,28	−5,72	−23,02
Machinery and millwork	7,76	6,04	4,78	−1,26	−2,98
Iron and steel and manufactures thereof (excluding galvanised sheets and plates)	10,63	6,79	7,87	+1,08	−2,76
Galvanised sheets and plates	5,38	2,99	1,32	−1,67	−4,06
Copper	4,12	2,77	74	−2,03	−3,38
Railway plant and rolling stock	10,03	10,08	4,22	−5,86	−5,81
Silk manufactures	3,10	1,94	2,76	+82	−34
Wool and woollen goods	4,05	2,05	1,19	−86	−2,86
Salt	88	74	1,25	+51	+37

The declines under railway plant and rolling stock, copper, machinery and millwork, and galvanised sheets and plates are obviously due to the war. A few words are, however, necessary in order to explain the position with regard to cotton manufactures. As was stated last year, imports of these for some time past had been greatly in excess of immediate requirements, with the result that a serious congestion of stocks ensued on both sides of India. This congestion was accentuated by various unfavourable circumstances from 1913-14 onwards; a very large sum on account of piece-goods previously imported remained to be liquidated at the close of 1913-14, and owing to the restricted offtake this liquidation was extended over an unusually long period. In fact, it appeared at one time that the holders of these stocks in India were faced with the probability of very heavy losses. Subsequently, however, dealers were helped by the contraction in imports and the rise in prices at home. So far as I can ascertain, the stocks commenced to fall in the latter half of 1914-15, and a substantial further reduction in them has occurred during the year 1915-16. The result has doubtless been that a certain amount of bank money formerly locked up in piece-goods stocks has been set free for employment for other purposes or for remittance to England.

The increase in the sugar imports as compared with 1914-15 is partially due to an increase in the amount of sugar imported but mainly to the very high level of prices ruling. Similarly, though the value of the imports was higher than in 1913-14, the actual quantity imported was only about two-thirds of that brought into the country in the former year. Java was as usual the chief supplier, but sugar has also been sent to an increasing extent by China and Japan.

Explanation of the trade balance in 1915-16.

6. I have already incidentally referred in the preceding paragraphs to certain transactions which must be taken into account when utilising the figures in paragraph 3 in order to arrive at the real trade balance. A detailed analysis of the position is appended to the report, but it may be convenient to summarise here the general causes to which the large net balance in favour of India during the last two years appears to be attributable.

Generally speaking, it may be said that the large excess of credits over debits appearing in the trade figures is due to two causes. In the first place, owing to the fact that the so-called 'private' transactions and the Government transactions have been more closely inter-connected than in normal years, the statistics given, though they purport to represent the balance of India's private trade, on the one hand do not contain a complete account of the private transactions, while on the other they embody some transactions which do not affect the balance of private trade one way or the other. Thus, as has been seen in the case of the wheat exports, if the position is to be correctly exhibited in the statistics, an addition of Rs. 4½ crores should be made to the import of funds into India, inasmuch as funds to this extent were supplied by Government in payment for the wheat exported over and above those shown in the table in paragraph 3. Further, there is (vide paragraph 6 (f) of appendix) always some invisible import in respect of claims for freight, though these are in the main adequately accounted for in the Indian trade statistics. In 1915-16, however, as was also the case in 1914-15, large payments, amounting in 1915-16 to about £4 millions or Rs. 6 crores were made in India by Government on account of the hire of vessels taken up for transport purposes. A substantial portion of the sums so paid was doubtless remitted to London by the shipping firms, either through Government by means of sterling transfers or through banks, or otherwise. Again, two million sovereigns shipped to Japan appear in the trade returns as a private export. These sovereigns, which were held by the Government of India in India, were earmarked on behalf of the Bank of England in India against an opposite payment to the Secretary of State at home. So far as the balance of India's private credits or debits is concerned the effect was the same as if the sovereigns had been shipped direct from London to Japan. If their export is to be taken account of, the payment to India for them should similarly be included in the account, and this of course does not appear at all in the table in paragraph 3.

In the second place, whereas in normal years a substantial import of capital into India has usually occurred, during the last two years there has been a very considerable movement in the opposite direction. For example, as I observed in a previous report, it is understood to be the practice of the Exchange Banks not to retain in India balances largely in excess of the amounts necessary to meet their probable requirements, but to remit to England any funds for which they do not expect to find early employment in this country. A considerable amount of money has been set free by the reduction in the holdings of piece-goods and by the additional capacity of the Indian jute mills to arrange their own finance, and there is, I think, little doubt that during the earlier portion of the year, owing to the reduction in the demand for money in India due to these and other causes, a substantial amount was remitted in this way by the banks to London. The banks have apparently utilised some portion of their funds so transferred for investments in the War Loan and other British securities. Apart from the transfer of banks' funds to London substantial sums have also been remitted from India by private persons and others for the specific purpose of subscribing to the War Loan. It is necessarily impossible to give any accurate statistics for such remittances, but including subscriptions on account of Exchequer bonds, etc., it is probable that they have not been much less than £2 millions and they may have exceeded this figure. Again, jute mill shares have, as is known, appreciated in a remarkable manner since the earlier months of the war, the appreciation amounting to several crores of rupees. It is believed that many retired Anglo-Indians holding shares have taken the opportunity to realise their holdings, and that the sums remitted home in this way have been very considerable.

It will be understood from the way in which this export of capital has occurred that the movement has not been due to any apprehension or panic but to certain special causes, among which must be mentioned the fact that India has been in a position to buy back Indian securities held abroad and also to lend money to England.

Imports and exports of sovereigns and gold bullion

7. The private imports of gold bullion and sovereigns were on a very small , and the net export of gold which the figures show is an unusual if not an unprecedented feature in the trade returns. The exports include the shipment already mentioned of 2 millions of sovereigns to Japan and a shipment to England of about £2,000,000 worth of gold from the Indian Mines. Of the total imports of gold about £2,000,000 came from the United Kingdom and £1,000,000 from Australia. Apart from the transactions mentioned above, the exports of sovereigns were insignificant, about £120,000 having been sent to Japan on private account and smaller amounts to Ceylon and the Straits.

Price of silver imports and exports

8. The price of silver has fluctuated widely during the year. The year 1914-15 closed with the price at 23½*d.* The price stood at 23 13/16*d.* at the end of April, but subsequently showed a slight decline to $28\frac{5}{16}d.$ at the end of May, $22\frac{7}{8}d.$ at the end of June, and $22\frac{7}{16}d.$ at the end of July, the lowest quotation for the year being $22\frac{5}{16}d.$ on July 29th. The decline was apparently in part attributable to prolonged abstention from buying on the part of the Indian bazars, due to restriction of credit, difficulty of marketing cotton and other commodities, high rates of transport and insurance, etc. A recovery in price set in during August, which may have been partly due to the great weakness at that time of the American exchange, and silver was quoted at $23\frac{3}{16}d.$ at the end of the month. There was a further rise to $23\frac{3}{4}d.$ at the end of September and to $24\frac{1}{16}d.$ at the end of October mainly as the result of continued heavy demands for silver for coinage in the United Kingdom and elsewhere. Thus in the United Kingdom the value of the silver coinage was about £6¼ millions in 1914, and over £7½ millions in 1915, whereas the previous highest figure was £2,610,000 in 1912 and the annual outturn is usually much smaller than this figure. In the latter part of November there was a further marked rise, prices standing at 25*d.* on the 19th, $26\frac{1}{4}d.$ on the 24th and $27\frac{1}{4}d.$ on the 27th of the month. Messrs. Montagu & Co., attribute this spurt to "the announcement of the unexpectedly small size of the London stocks, which, invigorated by the Indian bazar demand, caught Chinese speculators napping, and made America reluctant to sell. The continued activity of continental enquiry was also a factor in the rise while purchases for home coinage maintain each advance, despite the abnormal figure reached." During December to February the price ranged from about 26*d.* to about 27*d.* In the latter half of March the price, as a result of scarcity of supplies and competing coinage demands, again rose rapidly, standing at $28\frac{15}{16}d.$ at the close of the month. This rise continued during April 1916, $32\frac{1}{16}d.$ being quoted on the 26th, 33*d.* on the 27th, $34\frac{1}{8}d.$ on the 28th and $35\frac{1}{8}d.$ on the 29th of that month, while on the 2nd and 3rd May prices of 36*d.* and $37\frac{1}{8}d.$ were quoted. Some reaction has since occurred.

The table in the margin shows the monthly imports and exports of silver on private account during the year. Imports during the first three months when low prices were ruling, were on a high level, in spite of the relative weakness in the local demand. Though there were some fluctuations from month to month the imports during the first six months amounted to 425 lakhs against 236 lakhs only during the second half of the year.

[In lakhs of rupees.]

Apart from private transactions about 69 lakhs of rupees besides about Rs. 7 lakhs worth of small silver coin were shipped out of India by Government including about 39 lakhs to Basra, 15 lakhs to East Africa and a similar sum to Egypt, where the rupee has, as a temporary measure, been made legal tender on account of the deficiency of the regular local currency.

Council bills, sterling transfers and exchange.

9. The budget estimates for 1915-16 provided a sum of £7,100,000 for the Secretary of State's drawings, but though exchange was weak during the earlier months of the year, it revived in September 1915, and a very strong demand for trade remittances set in during the cold weather. It therefore proved necessary in framing the revised estimates to increase the provision to £20,061,000, against which the actuals amounted to £20,354,500 (Rs. 30,37 lakhs). Of this amount, £7,574,000 and £8,190,000, respectively, were appropriated to the Gold Standard Reserve and the Paper Currency Reserve for the reasons explained in paragraphs 102 and 103 of the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1916-17, leaving a balance of £4,590,500 as a remittance in aid of the Home Treasury. It may, however, be incidentally mentioned that the Secretary of State was also enabled to place himself in funds to the extent of about £15·6 millions by recovery from the War Office and other public departments in England of sums expended in India on behalf of His Majesty's Government, in addition to about £3 millions in connection with the purchase and sale of wheat and £2 millions received from the Bank of England for gold earmarked on its behalf in India. On the other hand, of the sterling transfers sold in India in the months of June to September £225,000 only were taken against the Gold Standard Reserve, the balance of about £4·7 millions being paid from the Home Treasury balances.

The statement in the margin shows the amount of sterling transfers on London sold in each month from June to September and also the amount of Council bills and telegraphic transfers sold by the Secretary of State during the year. The year opened with exchange weak, and of Rs. 40 lakhs of Council bills and transfers offered in the first week of April tenders for about Rs. 37 lakhs only were accepted at 1*s.* $3\frac{15}{16}$ d. for bills and a point higher for telegraphic transfers. The offer was reduced to Rs. 30 lakhs at the second sale and this amount was allotted in the subsequent weeks of the month in addition to about Rs. 19 lakhs of extras. The sales were maintained at the same figure during the first three weeks of May supplemented by occasional special sales, the rate fluctuating between 1*s.* $3\frac{15}{16}$d. and 1*s.* $4\frac{1}{32}$d., but there was a heavy drop in the last week's sale of that month when about Rs. 8 lakhs only were allotted. The weekly offers were accordingly reduced to Rs. 10 lakhs at the beginning of June. The weakness of exchange which normally develops at this period was accentuated by various special causes, the most important of which was the undertaking by Government of the finance of the wheat scheme. This, as has been explained in paragraph 4, operated largely to reduce the net demand for private remittances to India. The sales of Councils during June were nominal and there was also a revival of demand for sterling transfers on London, these being sold to the value of about Rs. 98 lakhs in that month. Exchange further weakened in July partly on account of the large remittances made to London for investment in the War Loan and sterling transfers to the value of over Rs. 5 crores were sold.

The demand for reverse remittances slackened in August and exchange, which had stood at 1*s.* $3\frac{7}{8}$d. since the beginning of June, rose to 1*s.* $3\frac{29}{32}$d. on the 21st August, to 1*s.* $3\frac{15}{16}$d. on the 25th and to 1*s.* $3\frac{31}{32}$d. on the 26th of that month. Early in September the rate reached par and the Secretary of State was able to sell Councils steadily from that month onwards, at first mainly in connection with jute and later on the Bombay side in connection with cotton. The amount offered was raised to Rs. 20 lakhs at the second sale in September, to Rs. 40 lakhs at the third, and further to Rs. 50 lakhs at the fourth. Except for a short period at the end of October this amount of Rs. 50 lakhs remained on offer as the regular weekly allotment until the end of the year. During November exchange showed some signs of easing off, but in the following month the demand for funds increased mainly in connection with cotton, and the rate rose to 1*s.* $4\frac{1}{8}$d. for special sales on the 28th and 29th December when immediate transfers to the extent of Rs. $70\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs were taken. The demand for funds was very brisk from this period onwards, and, though the offers were restricted to Rs. 50 lakhs a week in view of the large indirect remittances to the Secretary of State already referred to, there were further heavy special sales in the last three months of the year, the amounts so sold being Rs. 286 lakhs, Rs. 374 lakhs and Rs. 446 lakhs respectively in January, February and March, the rate being forced up to 1*s.* $4\frac{5}{32}$d. in the case of immediate transfers. As a result of the high rates ruling at the close of the year the average rate for the year amounted to 16·088*d.* or a little below 1*s.* $4\frac{5}{8}$d. per rupee, the lowest rate touched being 1*s.* $3\frac{15}{16}$d.

It may be mentioned that during the year an arrangement was introduced under which, instead of sterling bills on London, deferred sterling transfers were granted payable 16 days after date of credit of their value to Government in India. These are issued at a uniform rate of 1*s.* $3\frac{13}{32}$d. per rupee, this being equivalent to the rate at which sterling bills were formerly issued, against a rate of 1*s.* $3\frac{7}{32}$d. fixed for immediate sterling transfers. The above sterling remittances were all taken in the form of 'deferred' telegraphic transfers.

10. The usual details regarding the treasury balances, the Gold Standard and the Paper Currency Reserves will be found in the statements appended to the report. The following table summarises the information as to their amounts and their distribution between India and England at the commencement and close of the year, and at the end of September:—

11. The above figures indicate roughly the manner in which the resources of Government have been affected during the year. It will be seen that there was a reduction of about £3·6 millions in the total of the treasury balances held in India and England together which is mainly accounted for by the repayment of £3 millions of the loan of £7 millions taken from the Gold Standard Reserve during the previous year. It is not necessary to discuss the other causes which have affected the ways and means position as a whole inasmuch as these have been fully dealt with in the Financial Statement.

With regard to the actual distribution of the treasury balances as between England and India, the heavy indirect remittances to the Secretary of State, together with the large Council drawings referred to in paragraph 9 above, made it necessary to work with a very low balance in India during most of the later months of the year. During the year, however, the Indian balances were assisted (1) by the fact that £7,533,000 and £8,190,000 of the Council bill payments were met from the funds of the Gold Standard Reserve and the Paper Currency Reserve respectively, the proceeds of Councils to a corresponding extent being paid into these Reserves on London, and (2) by the payment into treasury of the proceeds of sterling transfers on London (see paragraph 9) to the extent of £4,668,000. Taking the year as a whole, the brisk demand for trade remittances to India and the period of strong exchange afforded a welcome opportunity to retransfer to England the free portion of the balance of the Gold Standard Reserve which had been accumulated in India as a result of the heavy demands for remittances to England experienced in the later months of 1914-15.

The Paper Currency Reserve.

12. As has been explained on previous occasions, it has been found to be convenient, as a normal practice, to hold a substantial portion of the treasury balances, especially when these are high, in the form of notes rather than in coin, an equivalent amount of rupees being held in the Paper Currency Reserve. The heavy disbursements from the treasuries, therefore, together with the trade demands for rupees referred to in later paragraphs, necessarily directly affected the holdings of coin in the Paper Currency Reserve. Though there was a large return of rupees from circulation in the earlier months, a steady absorption set in in September and the rupee holding of the Reserve fell from Rs. 32 crores at the commencement of the year to Rs. 23 crores at its close. This would ordinarily have been a relatively high figure for the balance at a time when the busy season is approaching its close. In view, however, of the possibility of unexpected developments under war conditions, it was considered that it would be prudent to provide for future coinage requirements by purchases of silver. Of the amount bought during the year the greater part was paid for from the Home Treasury balances in the first instance, but silver of the value of £340,000 was purchased direct from the Paper Currency Reserve the purchase price being met from the proceeds of Council bills appropriated to it.

The appropriation of Council bill sales to the Paper Currency Reserve would in normal times have been effected by the earmarking of gold at the Bank of England, but, owing to the financial situation created by the war, the Secretary of State felt obliged to make a very sparing use of this procedure, and it was adopted to the extent of £2½ millions only. It was, however, possible to supplement it by transferring to the Paper Currency Reserve a sum of £1,350,000 held in gold coin in London on behalf of the Gold Standard Reserve in exchange for short-term investments placed in the latter. Thus, of the sum of £8,190,000 mentioned in paragraph 9 above as appropriated to the Paper Currency Reserve from the Council bill sales of the year, £3,850,000 was held in the form of earmarked gold and £340,000 in silver bullion; the balance of £4 million was applied to the increase of sterling investments for the Reserve in exercise of the powers in this behalf obtained by legislation as explained below.

The permanent future policy in regard to the investment of the Paper Currency Reserve has been left over for consideration in connection with the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Indian Finance and Currency. Meanwhile, without prejudice to the final decision, it has been found desirable to take power, as a temporary measure, to increase the maximum permissible investment. The first step in this direction was taken as a result of certain difficulties arising in 1914-15 in connection with the financing of the cotton crop (vide paragraph 15 of the Financial Statement for 1915-16). In order to provide Government with the necessary resources (a) to enable them to place the Banks in funds for helping this trade, and also any other branch of trade which might require similar assistance, and, further, (b) if necessary, to meet other liabilities in the event of unexpected emergency, power was taken at the beginning of 1915 to increase the permissible investments in India on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve by £4 millions. This was the limit up to which the Royal Commission on Indian Finance and Currency had recommended in 1913 that the investment should be raised immediately. During the latter part of the year under review a somewhat different problem arose: there was a brisk demand for Council bills, but it was only possible to meet a relatively small proportion of these from treasury balances owing to the large disbursements made in India on behalf of the Home Government, and moreover, as just explained, gold could only be earmarked for the Paper Currency Reserve in London to a limited extent. It thus became desirable that the Government of India should have the option of making in London the additional investment of £4 millions allowed by Act V of 1915, and they accordingly, in January 1916, took the necessary power by means of an Ordinance. Towards the close of the year this Ordinance was replaced by a temporary Act (IX of 1916) which also authorised Government to make yet a further increase of £4 millions in the investment. It was provided that this additional investing power should be exercised only for the purchase of Treasury Bills, these being a very liquid and easily realisable form of security. Against the total additional investing power of £8 millions thus obtained investments of £4 millions were actually made in the year under report, these being all in the form of Treasury bills. The total investment admissible at the close of the year was £17⅓ millions, or Rs. 26 crores, against which the actual investments stood at Rs. 20 crores, of which one-half was held in India and the other half in England.

It may be added that, as has been explained in the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1916-17 (paragraph 103), opportunity was taken in dealing with the question of the Paper Currency Reserve investment to make it clear that such investment, when made in India, may be effected by creating fresh Government securities ad hoc and placing these in the Reserve. Further, the whole of the legislation referred to above is of a temporary character and has effect only for the period of the war and six months thereafter.

The Gold Standard Reserve.

13. Sterling transfers to the value of £225,000 were credited to the Gold Standard Reserve in India and this amount, together with the large balance with which the year opened, as also the sum of £3 millions repaid by the Treasury out of the temporary loan of £7 millions taken from the Reserve during the preceding year, was transferred to London either by means of Councils or by adjustment through the Paper Currency Reserve. Details of the composition of the Gold Standard Reserve at the close of the year are given in Statement XXIII appended to the report. Though the actual gold held is at the present time inconsiderable, this fact does not imply any weakening of the strength of the Reserve. Thus, opportunity was taken of the option of conversion offered by the British 4½ per cent. War Loan to convert to that more readily realisable loan the Consols previously held in the Reserve, vide paragraph 107 of the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement.

Again, the balance of the securities added during the year consists of British Treasury Bills, while a large sum, amounting nearly to £6 millions, was at the close of the year held by the Secretary of State either at call or at short notice. Such difficulties as have arisen during recent months in connection with exchange have been due to its strength rather than to its weakness, but it will be seen that, should any weakness occur, Government are in a very strong position for meeting any calls on them. It need only be added that the securities held are in every case written down to market price, or, where a minimum price has been hitherto fixed for transactions of the London Stock Exchange, to such minimum.

With regard to the Government of India gold holding in India, the re-transfer of the free portion of the balance of the Gold Standard Reserve to London, which has been referred to above, incidentally resulted in a transfer to the Paper Currency Reserve of the portion of the gold resources of the Government of India previously held in the Gold Standard Reserve in India. The reduction of the total amount of the gold held in India was due to the earmarking of 2 millions of sovereigns on behalf of the Bank of England against an opposite payment to the Secretary of State in London, vide paragraph 6 above.

IV.—The Presidency Banks, and the trade demand for money in India.

The Presidency Banks.

14. The following statement shows in lakhs of rupees the Government deposits at the headquarters and branches of the Presidency Banks at the close of each month during the last three years. Government continued during the year the policy of helping the money market as far as possible by retaining at the disposal of trade through these Banks such portion of their balances as was not immediately required for their own use. Thus, the proceeds of the 4 per cent Terminable Loan of Rs. 4½ crores, which was floated in August, were only gradually withdrawn from the Banks during that and the following months, and this fact accounts for the high figures shown for the Government deposits with the Banks at the end of August and September.

The main features of the demand for money during the year have already been referred to in paragraph 9 above in connection with the sales of Council bills. These features were reflected in the fluctuations in the total balances of the Presidency Banks, and I give below a statement showing how these stood in the last week in each month of the year :—

15. There was a slight revival in the demand for money during the first three months of the calendar year 1915, but in May and June the unemployed balances of the Banks showed a large increase owing to the absence of demand for funds. The three Banks reduced their rate from 6 per cent., at which it had stood for about seven or eight months, to 5 per cent. at the beginning of June. In August the balances of the Banks were supplemented to some extent by the proceeds of the rupee loan, but they fell during the two months following as this money was gradually drawn off to meet Government requirements. A better demand for money again set in about this time, and the balances of the Bank of Bengal were drawn upon in connection with the finance of the jute crop. The price of this commodity recovered from the low figure touched last year, and at the time of the jute forecast was in the neighbourhood of Rs. 58 per bale. There has subsequently been a decline in price, but the funds required for the finance of the crop, though less than in normal years, were substantially larger in amount than in 1914, in spite of the fact that many of the mills, owing to the large profits made, have been enabled to finance themselves to a much greater extent than has normally been their practice.

The Bank of Bengal raised its rate to 6 per cent. on the 23rd September and was followed by the Banks of Madras and Bombay on the 5th October and 4th November respectively. The demand for money in connection with jute eased off during October, but later on some pressure commenced on the Bombay side in connection with cotton. This continued on an increasing scale during January, when a considerable stringency of money was experienced both in Bombay, where apart from cotton large holdings of silver had to be financed, and on the Calcutta side, more especially in connection with the finance of the Burma rice crop. As a result of this demand for funds the bank rates were raised to 7 per cent., by the Bank of Madras on the 20th December, the Bank of Bengal on the 1st January and the Bank of Bombay on the 6th January 1916. In spite of the large amount of funds imported by means of immediate telegraphic transfers at this period money continued to be very tight, and the Bank of Bombay made a further increase in its rate to 8 per cent. on the 13th January followed by the Bank of Madras on the 19th and the Bank of Bengal on the 20th January. These rates were still in force at the close of the year. The demand for funds at different periods since the commencement of the war is illustrated by the table below showing the total extent of the loans and accounts of credit, and bills discounted and purchased by the three Presidency Banks. It will be seen that at the close of the year the money supplied by the Banks to trade, etc., was practically on the same level as two years previously, before the war broke out.

[In lakhs of rupees.]

TOTAL .	29,60	23,37	23,87	29,59

It may be mentioned in this connection that as a result of the high rates of money ruling during the later months of the year, the Exchange Banks raised the rate of interest payable by them on fixed deposits for a year.

The statementbelow which gives clearing house figures for the last six years is of interest as illustrating the contraction in business which occurred in 1914 :—

(In lakhs of rupees.)

Year.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Madras.	Karachi.	Rangoon.	Total.
1910	2,22,38	1,66,52	21,15	7,53	47,65	4,65,23
1911	2,57,63	1,76,05	20,99	7,50	53,99	5,16,16
1912	2,88,31	2,05,56	21,37	11,46	60,43	5,87,13
1913	3,33,02	2,19,30	23,56	12,49	61,98	6,50,35
1914	2,80,31	1,73,03	21,36	13,14	49,89	5,37,73
1915	3,22,67	1,66,88	19,22	13,66	40,69	5,63,12

There was some recovery in 1915, but this improvement is mainly due to the Calcutta figures, as those for Bombay, Rangoon and Madras show a further drop. It must be noted, however, that 1915 included twelve months under war conditions against only five months in 1914, and that the statistics do not include the last three months of the financial year 1915-16, which, as is indicated by the demand for funds, were months of very active business.

V.—The demand for the various forms of currency during the year.

16. The demand for money just described was naturally reflected in a large demand for currency during the latter portion of the year. The following table shows the nature of the additions made to the circulation during the year :— Absorption or return from circulation of the various forms of currency.

The position of sovereigns in the circulation.

17. It may be explained in the first place that there was actually a small absorption of gold during the year, viz., about 29 lakhs, sovereigns to the value of about Rs. 69 lakhs having been imported and passed direct into consumption without presentation at a Government Currency office or treasury. These sovereigns do not, however, represent any real addition to the circulating medium of the country, for the reason that since the commencement of the war the sovereign has gone entirely out of effective circulation in India and has passed into hoards. It rose to a small premium as soon as issues by Government were discontinued, this amounting in the early months of the war to 5 or 6 annas per sovereign. The premium subsequently dropped, fluctuating for several months between 1 anna and 3 annas per sovereign. Later on it rose again, doubtless owing to difficulties in obtaining sovereigns for import into India, standing at the end of March 1916 at about 10 annas per sovereign. After the close of the year it sprang up suddenly to more than Rs. 2 per sovereign, but this rate was not maintained for more than a few days as it immediately attracted sovereigns out from hoards with the result that at the time of writing the premium is not much above the figure at which it stood at the end of March.

There are grounds for believing that before the war, though large quantities of sovereigns were hoarded or melted down for ornaments, etc., a considerable volume also remained in current circulation, especially in Bombay and the Punjab, and to a smaller extent in other parts of India. In the earlier months of the war the disappearance of the sovereign from circulation and the contraction of the currency as a whole due to this cause resulted in no special inconvenience, but it is a justifiable assumption that the void so created has accentuated the demand for other forms of currency, viz., rupees and notes, which has accompanied the revival of trade activity during the later months of the year under review. Another cause which has operated to enhance the demand for currency is the large expenditure incurred in India on behalf of the Home Government for military purposes. Rupees have also been sent abroad, (vide paragraph 8 above), while substantial quantities of notes of the lower denominations amounting in all to about Rs. 58 lakhs have been sent to Basra. Though, however, these notes may have a temporary and limited circulation in Mesopotamia the probability is that they are for the most part returned after a short interval to India. Thus, of the notes sent to Basra in the latter part of March 1915 about half had already found their way back to the Currency Office in India for cancellation by the commencement of June 1915, and the notes sent in later remittances are similarly returning. While therefore the above statements of the absorption of currency exclude the rupees sent abroad, they include the currency notes sent out of India, as it cannot be assumed that these at present continue to circulate outside India to any great extent.

Distribution of the demand for currency over the year.

18. The absorption of rupees and notes month by month during the year is shown in the marginal table. The figures for rupees include the treasury figures and do not therefore exactly correspond with the absorption of rupees as deduced from the currency returns which relate only to the currency holdings (vide paragraph 12 above). The note statistics in the table are for the active circulation, and exclude the value of the notes held in the Reserve treasuries and in other Government treasuries and also at the headquarters offices of the Presidency Banks. These figures thus differ to some extent from those shown in the statements in paragraph 16. The figures there given do not reflect the full extent of the increase in the active circulation among the people, owing to the fact that the value of the notes held by the Presidency Banks at the commencement of the year was unusually large, their total cash balances then amounting to Rs. 16,68 lakhs against Rs. 12,71 lakhs at the end of the year. The growth of the note circulation and its fluctuation in the various circles is referrred to further in the following section of the report. I have, however, also drawn attention to the figures in the present connection in order to illustrate the fact that an expansion in the active note circulation took place, during the months when trade was most active, concurrently with the absorption of rupees.

Absorption of rupees.

19. The total number of rupees absorbed during the year, viz., about Rs. 10½ crores, has been exceeded on several previous occasions. As, however, the above figures show, there was a large return from circulation in the months of slack trade, viz., May to July 1915, and the absorption in the last seven months of the year, viz., September to March, was unusually heavy. The silver coin held in the Currency Reserve, which amounted to about Rs. 40 crores at the close of July, fell to Rs. 37·75 crores at the end of September, to Rs. 19·14 crores at the end of December and to Rs. 23·06 crores at the end of March. The actual issues of rupees from the Calcutta Currency office for the finance of jute amounted to about Rs. 3,81 lakhs against Rs. 64 lakhs only last year. The demand in connection with jute lasted till towards the middle of October. In October a demand for rupees commenced in Northern India, while from November onwards a substantial absorption set in in Bombay in connection with the cotton crop, nearly 10½ crores being taken in that Presidency in the months of November to March, exclusive of 42 lakhs shipped abroad. The figures in the table for the period from January to March do not indicate the full extent of the demands of trade, as they are to a large extent obscured by the very heavy land revenue collections made during these months

One further feature in the rupee absorption may be referred to, though the causes underlying it are not yet clear. The rupees issued in payment for the crops appear to be returning to the larger centres much more slowly than in previous years of heavy issues. This is possibly attributable to some extent to the high prices of certain commodities, such as cotton piece-goods, which result in the cultivating classes, etc., holding back from purchases of commodities which they would ordinarily make. It is, however, believed that hoarding of rupees is taking place on a larger scale than usual and it is inherently probable that this is the case. Similarly, attention has recently been drawn to the fact that a considerable hoarding of currency is taking place in France and also in other countries.

Net absorption of currency by seasons in each circle.

20. The statement below shows the part played by each form of currency in the monetary transactions of the country during the successive busy and slack seasons in each circle and the extent to which each form of currency was absorbed by the public or returned from circulation, a minus sign being employed to indicate such a return :—

NOTE.—The above figures exclude Rs. 69 lakhs of rupees exported to Basra, Egypt, and East Africa but include Rs. 58 lakhs remitted to Basra in currency notes.

* The difference between this figure and 18,40 in paragraph 16 is due to the fact, that the above figure represents only currency transactions while the statement in paragraph 16 takes into account the treasury transactions also.

The following summary shows how these results compare with those of the three previous years :—

	Busy Seasons.			Slack Seasons.			Whole year.
	Rupees.	Sovereigns.	Notes.	Rupees.	Sovereigns.	Notes.	Rupees.	Sovereigns.	Notes.
1912-13	32,42	11,08	—2,31	—21,20	4,45	2,44	11,22	15,53	13
1913-14	32,20	11,91	55	—26,15	4,61	1,87	6,05	16,52	2,42

1915-16	29,66	6	52	—21,05	—14	7,96	8,61	—8	8,48

With reference to the small transactions in the case of sovereigns shown in the above tables for the year 1915-16, it may be explained that these represent for the most part special transactions in connection with military and other purposes.

21. In paragraphs 31 et seq. of the report for 1913-14 an explanation was given of the processes by which the distribution of funds within India is effected, and it is only necessary to refer briefly to the transactions of the year under review. Statement IV shews the details of the transfers (i.e., remittances by the public through the agency of Government) between different centres, the total value of the transfers in 1915-16 being Rs. 27½ crores against Rs. 26½ crores in 1914-15, and Rs. 41½ crores in 1913-14. In view of the revival in trade activity during the later months of the year it might have been anticipated that the volume of remittances would have approached the level reached in 1913-14. As compared with that year, however, there has been a considerable decline in the remittances between the Presidency towns. These usually mainly represent redistributions between these centres of the balances of the Exchange Banks. More than one cause has contributed to a falling off in these transactions. Thus, in the first place, in the earlier year funds were to a large extent imported into India in the form of gold most of which came in viâ Bombay and was deposited with Government, the banks subsequently distributing a portion of the funds so imported by means of telegraphic transfers on Calcutta and Madras. Again, during a considerable portion of the earlier year the balances of the Exchange Banks held in India were on a high level as was explained in paragraph 11 (iii) of my report of that year, and it would naturally occasionally be the case that funds imported in anticipation of requirements might in the first instance be held at a centre other than that at which they would eventually be utilised. On the other hand, at the commencement of the busy season of the year under review the Indian balances of the Banks were depleted and payment of the Councils, by which funds were imported during this period, would naturally be taken at the centres at which funds were immediately required. The movement of funds.

Statement V shews the internal movements of funds within provinces through Government agency. The transactions were as usual largest in Bengal, Madras, Bombay and Burma, and, as in the case of the inter-provincial remittances, their total volume was very nearly the same as in the previous year.

The remittances of specie made by Government during the year between currency circles amounted to about Rs. 15 crores wholly in silver against a total of Rs. 17 crores for gold and silver taken together in the preceding year. Large remittances of rupees were made to the Lahore Circle (Rs. 3¼ crores) in the earlier months of the year in connection with the purchase of wheat by Government, and to the Bombay Circle (nearly Rs. 7 crores) in the later portion of the year for the finance of the cotton crop. The decrease in the total movements of coin as compared with the preceding year is due partly to the high balances held in the Currency Reserve at the beginning of the year and partly to currency notes having to some extent taken the place of the gold formerly in circulation.

Apart from remittances made directly through the agency of Government, currency notes are extensively used by the public for the transfer of funds. Some idea of the scale on which notes are so employed may be formed from the following figures for the encashment at Currency offices of foreign circle notes, i.e., of notes cashed at a Currency office other than the office of issue :—

Year.	Lakhs of Rupees.
1911-12	14,47
1912-13	17,93
1913-14	21,63
1914-15	24,84
1915-16	23,58

As will be seen from the details given in Statement XVIII, the decline in 1915-16 was due to a very large decrease, amounting to over Rs. 3 crores, in the value of the notes cashed at Bombay. The large encashments in Bombay in the previous year were attributable to the great demand for money during the disturbed conditions which prevailed in the Bombay money market shortly after the outbreak of the war. There were some fluctuations in other circles, but these do not call for any special comment. It may be mentioned, however, that it is probable that the improvements effected in the arrangements for the local encashment of notes (vide paragraph 24 below) will tend to some increase in the use of notes for remittances otherwise than as between the headquarters of currency circles, and the local reports indicate that in some cases such an increase is taking place. It must, at the same time, be remembered that the mere fact that a note is taken out for the purpose of remittance does not necessarily imply that it will be tendered immediately to a Currency Office or Treasury for encashment at the other end; similarly a note tendered at a Currency Office other than the office of issue may have been in the meantime employed in numerous transactions and not merely for remittance purposes.

VI.—The note circulation.

Statistics of the note circulation.

22. Statements XI to XX contain the usual statistics regarding the currency note circulation. The table below compares the gross, net and active circulation on the 31st March, and also the average for the year in each case, with the corresponding figures for certain previous years :—

(In lakhs of rupees.)

Year.	Circulation on 31st March.			Average Circulation.			Increase in average active circulation.
	Gross.	Net.	Active.	Gross.	Net.	Active.
1899-1900	28,74	27,04	22,10	27,96	25,48	21,27	...
1904-05	39,18	36,30	28,16	39,20	35,33	28,11	+ 6,84*
1909-10	51,41	49,10	39,98	49,66	47,02	37,21	+ 9,10*
1910-11	54,99	48,41	40,17	54,35	48,55	38,75	+ 1,54
1911-12	61,36	56,17	44,61	57,37	51,81	41,89	+ 3,14
1912-13	68,98	56,30	47,32	65,62	54,92	45,39	+ 3,50
1913-14	66,12	58,72	49,97	65,55	55,62	46,63	+ 1,24
1914-15	61,63	55,65	43,96	64,04	59,28	45,43	— 1,20
1915-16	67,73	64,13	53,19	64,10	60,39	48,08	+ 2,65

* These figures represent 5 years' increase.

The figures for the net circulation exclude the value of the notes held in the reserve treasuries, and those for the active circulation further exclude the value of notes in all other Government treasuries and also of those held in the headquarters offices of the Presidency Banks. For the reasons explained in paragraphs 51—53 of the report for the year 1913-14 the figures for the average active circulation probably form the best criterion of the extent to which currency notes actually circulate among the public.

Fluctuations in the note circulation during the year.

23. During 1914-15 the average active circulation which had been increasing steadily for the last few years experienced a set-back. In the report for that year I expressed the opinion that, apart from some want of confidence prevailing at the commencement of the war, the contraction which occurred in the circulation was in a large part attributable to the relative slackness of trade and the consequent falling-off in the demand for currency generally rather than to the continuance of any mistrust in the note issue. This view is confirmed by the experience of the following twelve months. Some improvement in the active circulation had already commenced before the end of 1914-15, this standing at about Rs. 44 crores at the close of the year. Particulars of the circulation month by month will be found in Statement XV. There was some further increase in the circulation even during the earlier months of 1915-16, and with the revival of trade in the later months it sprang up rapidly and reached a record figure of over Rs. 53 crores at the close of the year, almost all the circles sharing in the improvement.

Local issue and encashment of notes.

24. It would be premature to attempt at this stage to give a complete explanation of the causes of this improvement, but it may be partially attributable to the fact that gold is no longer available for the finance of certain crops, for which it has been employed to a large extent in recent years, especially in Western and Northern India. It is, however, reasonable to assume that this satisfactory increase in the active circulation has been assisted by the increased facilities provided for the local encashment of notes. Greater facilities have in practice been given for such encashment since the commencement of the war, though the formal orders of Government explaining the principles and procedure to be adopted permanently in the future were only issued in October last. A detailed explanation of the various improvements effected will be found in paragraphs 108 to 111 of the Finance Member's speech introducing the Financial Statement for the year 1916-17. As is there explained, in addition to substantial facilities for the encashment of notes at district treasuries, the Presidency Banks have now made arrangements for the free issue and encashment of universal notes, i.e., those of Rs. 100 and under, at many of their important branches at which Government Treasury business is conducted. At several of these centres the revised arrangements only came into force towards the close of 1915-16, and it may reasonably be hoped that a further substantial advance in the popularity of the note issue may be looked for in the future.

As an instance of the manner in which these increased facilities may operate, I enclose a copy of a note which the Bank of Madras has been good enough to give me with regard to the encashment of notes by their Guntur Branch :—

There is a strong demand at Guntur for rupees in exchange for notes. During the few days I was at the Branch I was impressed by the number of people who came to the office to exchange notes. On the 15th, 16th and 17th of this month, the total amount of whole rupees issued in exchange for notes was Rs. 1,91,000. Since the 1st January and up to 17th March notes to the extent of Rs. 23 lacs have been encashed.

Marwaris are now buying cotton in the bazar which is something new as formerly they restricted their operations to money-lending and to buying and selling hundies. In former years they imported rupees during the season from Hyderabad, Secunderabad and elsewhere but now they place themselves in funds by importing notes from Bombay which they exchange for rupees at the note exchange department of the Branch. Early in the year they endeavoured to work up a business in encashing notes in the bazar at a discount before and after Bank hours but the Branch Agent through the courtesy of one of our constituents secured the temporary use of a godown situated in the centre of the bazar and during the early mornings and late evenings he took for several days whole rupees to this godown and issued them freely in exchange for notes. The Agent's action in thus opening a temporary note exchange in the bazar outside Bank hours stopped the Marwaris' little game and notes now circulate freely in the bazar at par. Business transactions between the merchants of Guntur are now settled in notes instead of in rupees as formerly. Rupees however are still in demand for making payments to village merchants and others but the confidence in notes which has been established in the bazar should in time extend throughout the district. There is already some indication of its doing so. The proportion of notes received in kist collections is increasing while that of whole rupees is decreasing as shown by the following figures: —

	Received in kist collections.
	Notes.	Whole Rupees.	Total.
January and February 1915	13,56,000	26,58,000	40,14,000
Ditto 1916	21,08,000	22,09,000	43,17,000
Increase (+) Decrease (−)	+7,52,000	−4,49,000	+3,03,000

Statement XX gives the usual information regarding the civil treasuries in the provinces at which notes are cashed. It may, however, be claimed that with the introduction of the improved arrangements referred to above the statement now represents the real position with regard to note encashment far more correctly than has been the case with similar statements issued in previous reports. The following statistics show that there has been a marked increase in the transactions in question at treasuries both under receipts and issues :—

(In lakhs of rupees.)

Year.	Receipts from public.				Issues to public.
	In payment of dues to Government.	For silver.	In exchange of notes of other values.	Total.	In payment of dues by Government.	For silver.	In exchange of notes of other values.	Total.
1910-11 . . .	20,31	3,92	1,19	25,42	14,93	5,58	1,19	21,70
1911-12 . . .	22,68	4,00	1,22	27,90	16,24	6,00	1,22	23,46
1912-13 . . .	25,99	4,34	1,68	32,01	17,41	5,96	1,68	25,05
1913-14 . . .	27,16	4,02	1,55	32,73	19,08	6,61	1,55	27,24

1915-16 . . .	33,16	8,89	2,44	44,49	25,06	8,60	2,44	36,10

It may be added that this statement does not include transactions at the Branches of the Presidency Banks; as maybe judged from the Guntur report quoted above, these have in some cases been very considerable.

Character of the note circulation.

25. The following statement shows by circles the number of notes of each denomination (excluding the Rs. 10,000 note) in circulation on the 31st December in each of the last three years for each 10,000 of the population :—

	1914	87	416	8·8	42	1·4	3
	1915	122·5	519	11·5	56	1·3	2·8

The most striking feature of the statement is the large increase in the circulation of all the universal notes in the Lahore, Bombay and Karachi circles. It is probably more than a coincidence that these were the circles in which the sovereign in recent years was most extensively used. The increase was also large in Madras, where the sovereign was also growing in popularity, but the growth in all these cases is also probably partly attributable to the improved facilities for the local encashment of notes. While, however, the popularity of the 5-rupee and 50-rupee notes is relatively higher in Western and North-Western India than elsewhere, the circulation of the 10-rupee notes in the Lahore, Bombay and Madras circles is still very low as compared with Calcutta, Rangoon and Karachi. The circulation in Burma more than recovered from the temporary set-back of the preceding year; notes are widely used in connection with the finance of the rice crop, and the per capita circulation of the 10-rupee and 100-rupee notes is greater than in any other circle.

26. The following statement compares the mean circulation for the year with the total number of cancellations for the notes of the various denominations. The figures are in thousands of pieces in each case:— Life of currency notes.

	Rs. 5.	Rs. 10.	Rs. 50.	Rs. 100.	Rs. 500.	Rs. 1,000.	Rs. 10,000.
Total Cancellations . . .	7,765	30,285	963	5,973	185	768	93
Gross Circulation . . .	3,816	16,895	399	1,822	47	91	14

Corresponding ratio in 1914-15 .	·58	·64	·40	·30	·27	·17	·25
Ditto in 1913-14 .	·58	·76	·44	·32	·25	·13	·20
Average of five years ending with 1912-13.	·65	·81	·44	·36	·28	·16	·20

The ratio of circulation to cancellation (taken to two places of decimals) indicates roughly the life of each denomination of notes, and it will be observed that there has been a tendency in the case of the notes of the lower denominations towards a reduction in their life. This is no doubt attributable, in the earlier years, to increasing strictness in interpreting the orders prohibiting the issue of worn and soiled notes and, in the last year, to the decision to issue only new notes from the currency offices. It is not improbable that this last-mentioned improvement has helped towards the increase in the popularity of the note issue.

VII.—Miscellaneous matters connected with currency notes and the coinage.

27. It is satisfactory to record a further reduction this year in the number of forged notes presented for encashment or received in the Currency offices for examination as to their genuineness or for safe custody, a total of 97 only being reached as against 170 and 359 in the two previous years. Of these, 3 were of the Rs. 100, 11 of the Rs. 5 and 82 of the Rs. 10 denominations, the other case being an old forgery of the Rs. 20 denomination. The notes received contained a larger proportion than usual of new forgeries, of which the majority appeared in the Calcutta Circle. These were almost all of the 10-rupee denomination, and, as in the previous year, were spread over a large number of series. The new forgeries were, however, with few exceptions, very inferior specimens, often mere pen and ink sketches on common paper, the details frequently being so crudely executed that it is surprising that they could have deceived any one who has seen a genuine note. Note forgeries.

Two prosecutions were instituted in Burma in connection with forged notes of the IC/73 series, but no conviction was secured. As regards the appeals to a higher Court preferred by four of the accused in the Batavia case referred to in previous reports one of the accused was discharged and the remaining three were sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour ranging from 7 to 15 years, coupled with fines.

28. The figures below show the number of wholly destroyed, half and mutilated notes, claims in respect of which were admitted during the year 1915-16 and the two preceding years:— Claims on lost notes etc.

The value of notes written off to Government during the year under section 19 of Act II of 1910 amounted to Rs. 66,710 as compared with Rs. 49,830, Rs. 51,300 and Rs. 67,670 in the three years 1912-13 to 1914-15. Writing off old notes

Cawnpore and Bombay, and to a lesser extent Karachi and Lahore, show a relatively high percentage of light-weight rupees not detected at the Currency Offices, and the attention of the officers concerned has been drawn to the matter. It may, however, be mentioned that Currency offices and Treasuries are not required to withdraw rupees from circulation unless the loss on their standard weight exceeds 2 per cent. In the case of the light-weight coins detected at the mints the average loss per rupee only very slightly exceeded 2 per cent., while the largest excess over 2 per cent., was only 0·4 per cent., this being reached in two offices.

False coinage.

30. Information regarding the counterfeit silver coins which came to light during the year will be found in the review of the reports of the working of the Mints in Bombay and Calcutta.

Absorption of small silver, nickel and bronze.

31. Statement XXI contains details of the absorption of small coin in each province during each of the last three years. These are summarised in the table below together with the corresponding figures for the years from 1910-11 onwards (a minus sign indicating a return from circulation) :—

(In thousands of Rupees.)

Year.	Four-anna pieces.	Two-anna pieces.	One-anna pieces.	Single pice.	TOTAL.
1910-11	14,18	14,10	20,36	9,37	58,01
1911-12	15,23	14,05	24,76	11,11	65,15
1912-13	25,72	19,53	23,76	16,51	85,52
1913-14	15,38	12,89	19,91	7,95	56,13
1914-15	—10,23	—4,63	6,87	—12,57	—20,56
1915-16	8,33	7,44	18,60	2,06	36,43

The total for the year 1915-16 excludes about Rs. 8 lakhs of small coin (mostly four-anna and two-anna pieces) exported to Basra. The absorption for the year amounted to Rs. 36 lakhs against a return from circulation of

Rs. 20½ lakhs in the preceding year. The revival of trade activity which, as has been seen, was reflected in a renewed demand for currency of higher values had a similar effect on the demand for small coin.

As evidence of the growing popularity of the nickel one-anna pieces, the figures in the above table are of some interest. There has been a steady absorption of this coin from year to year and in the year 1914-15 an absorption of about Rs. 7 lakhs occurred concurrently with a return from circulation of the other coins. In the year 1915-16, the absorption was more than one-half of the total absorption of small coin.

ipts and ex-iture of the Cur-y Department.

32. Statement XXII gives the usual details of the receipts and expenditure of the Currency Department for the year 1915-16. As regards receipts it may be mentioned that the yield on the additional investments of the Currency Reserve made during the year is not taken into account, as it was not realised until after the close of the year on repayment at maturity of the Treasury Bills held in the reserve towards the end of the year. The total expenditure exceeds that of the preceding year by about Rs. 5 lakhs. There was an increase of about Rs. 2 lakhs in the cost of note forms, the expenditure in 1914-15 on this account having been specially low as explained in paragraph 26 of the report for that year. The balance of the increase is for the most part accounted for by the cost of acquisition of a site for a new currency office in Madras and by the general revision of currency establishments.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

H. F. HOWARD,
Controller of Currency.

APPENDIX.

India's trade balance in the last few years with special reference to certain features of the balance in 1915-16.

Introductory.

In a note appended to my report for the year 1913-14 the main statistics relating to the trade balance of India in recent years were examined; an explanation was given of the general nature of India's international credits and debits, and of the intimate relations which exist between the 'private' and the Government transactions; and a rough balance sheet was prepared for the purpose of illustrating the general position. This was continued last year in a note in which the statistics for 1914-15 were briefly examined. The year just concluded again presents some special features, and I have thought that it may be of interest to bring the figures up to date. It is necessary, however, to repeat the caution given on previous occasions, that absolute accuracy is, from the circumstances of the case, unattainable with regard to some relatively important items, and the figures adopted in such cases are at best intelligent estimates which have been included in the statements for the purpose of illustrating the position. It would be superfluous to recapitulate the general examination given in the report for 1913-14, but for facility of reference I have in some instances repeated the explanations given last year with regard to individual items of the trade balance.

The Government transactions.

* NOTE.—The figures for opening and closing balances cover not only the Treasury balances, but the portions of the Paper Currency and Gold Standard Reserves held in England, including the investments on account of these Reserves. The details are shown in Statement II appended to the report.

† The debits under purchase and sale of wheat include payments on account of freight and commission, in addition to the amounts paid to firms on account of disbursements made by them in India.

The above statistics represent the cash transactions of the India Office. At the same time, as I explained last year—

(1) They also cover, for the most part, the import and export of stores and treasure by Government into and from India.

(2) They take into account most of the expenditure incurred on capital account in respect of the imported railway materials which are included in the imports of private merchandise in the trade returns; any imports of this character must, therefore, be left out of consideration in balancing the private account. It would of course be possible, in a statement of India's trade balance, to include the value of these imports and to enter on the opposite side of the account the capital raised in England to pay for them. This, however, involves somewhat complex adjustments and I have adopted the former course as being the simpler alternative.

(3) They include certain remittances made by the public through Government. The most important of these, of course, are the Council bills sold by the Secretary of State, which represent a remittance to England by the Government of India, and a corresponding remittance to India by the purchasers of the bills. The sterling bills and telegraphic transfers on London represent similar remittances in the opposite direction. In addition to these, some other transactions are adjusted through the Government of India, the largest of which are ordinarily remittances by money orders, which are honoured by the Post Office in India, Government being subsequently reimbursed by opposite payments in London. While the above list is not absolutely exhaustive, as the head "Other miscellaneous receipts net" includes various quasi-private transactions such as adjustments with the Home and Colonial Governments for the supply of stores, it is, in normal years, sufficiently complete for all practical purposes. It will be noticed however that in the last two years the entries against the last-mentioned head have been unusually large, amounting to over £8½ millions in 1914-15 and over £14½ millions in 1915-16. These increases are mainly due to the large payments made by the War Office on account of additional war expenditure incurred by the Indian Government, and represent, in fact, payment for "export of services" by that Government. These figures are not included in the statistics of private trade given below, both the export and the payment for it being left out of account in that connection. It is, however, incidentally necessary to take into consideration, from the point of view of the "private" trade balance, the "claims" for freight taken up by Government for transport purposes, as the payments made in India to shipping firms on this account were largely remitted by them to England, and these latter remittance transactions are included in the private trade balance figures. The "services" exported also included some amount of stores purchased from private firms in India. Strictly speaking, these might be included in the private account, but the amounts are difficult to ascertain with any real accuracy, and, if they were included, the remittances to India by which they were paid for would also have to be shown in the same account. I have thought it simplest to omit the figures from both sides of the account.

3. In 1915-16 further important transactions adjusted through the Government accounts otherwise than by payment of Council bills consisted of payments made in respect of a large portion of the purchases of wheat made under the Wheat Scheme referred to in paragraph 4 of the report. As there mentioned, of the wheat purchased on Government account of a value of Rs. 690 lakhs, about Rs. 265 lakhs only were financed by the Agent firms. The balance of the funds required amounting to about Rs. 425 lakhs, or over £2¾ millions, was supplied by the Wheat Commissioner in India. Inasmuch as the private trade statistics include the wheat exported under the Government scheme, the further funds supplied in India in this way should be shown as an import of funds on the side of the account on which Council bills paid in India appear.

In order to estimate the private trade balance then, it is necessary (1) to leave out of account the imports of railway plant and rolling stock, and (2) to take account of the net private remittances through Government. The items to be carried forward in this way are the following :—

rtain special nsactions.

6. The details of which items A, B and C are made up will be readily understood from a reference to the previous statements.

Item (a) 'Credits on account of Port Trust, etc., borrowings,' item (b) 'Other capital loaned to India' and item (l) 'Interest payable on sterling capital of companies, etc.,' were explained in last year's report, and it was there shown how the figures in question were arrived at.

Item (c), 'private gold deposited in India on account of the Bank of England,' is special to the last two years. The gold represents the produce of the Indian mines, and approximately £1·4 millions were dealt with in the above manner in 1914-15 after the outbreak of the war. Though not actually exported this amount must properly be regarded for all practical purposes as a credit or claim, inasmuch as the gold was paid for in London and remittances on account of part of the value were made to India as usual on account of royalties, working expenses, etc. During the year under review about £2 millions of this gold, including a portion of the deposits made during the year, were shipped home. The balance held in India at the end of the year showed an increase of about £300,000 over the figure at the commencement of the year, and this net amount has been shown in the statement.

With regard to item (d), a considerable export of rupees is shown in the trade accounts for 1914-15 under the Government transactions, though this was actually made on behalf of a bank and paid for by Council bills in London. This item, therefore, represents for practical purposes a private transaction and should be taken into account as such. It has not been allowed for in the statement relating to the Government transactions which I have given in paragraph 2. Conversely, with regard to item (m), £2 millions of gold held in India by the Government of India was earmarked during the year 1915-16 on behalf of the Bank of England against an opposite payment by that Bank to the Secretary of State. This gold was subsequently shipped to Japan, appearing in the trade returns as a private export. This transaction did not, however, affect the balance of India's private trade for the year one way or the other (vide paragraph 6 of the report), and it should therefore be left out of consideration in making up the account. It is included as a 'credit' in the net figure appearing against item C, and it is accordingly necessary to write it back as a 'debit.'

Item (e), other remittances through Government. During the year there have been some other transactions very much of the nature of Council remittances. Remittance transfer receipts or supply bills have been issued to a very considerable extent both in Persia and in Mesopotamia to traders for the payment of goods purchased by them in India, Government of course utilising funds so obtained for the purpose of their local requirements. To the extent to which the trade obtained remittances to India in this way these stand on a very similar footing to remittances effected between London and India by means of Council bills. Complete figures are not yet available but in the case of Persia these remittances amounted in 1915-16 to about Rs. 40 lakhs.

Similarly, in order to provide funds for military expenditure in East Africa the Government of India have made various payments to Banks in India against opposite payments by the Banks in East Africa. So far as the Bank in India in this way placed itself in funds against opposite disbursements out of India, this transaction again stands on the same footing as remittances to India by means of Councils. The amount of these transactions during 1915-16 was about £150,000.

Item (f).—As was explained in the appendix to last year's report the figures for freight do not represent the total charges for freight on India's foreign trade, which are in the main adequately accounted for in the Indian trade statistics, but merely certain net out-of-pocket expenditure in connection with the coasting trade and the passenger traffic. These figures are at the best only rough estimates. It will be noticed that in the last two years the debits under this head show a large jump upwards. This is due to the fact already mentioned that the hire of a considerable number of vessels taken up by Government for transport purposes was paid in India by Government. There was thus an invisible import or a claim in respect of freight, the payment for which was doubtless for the most part remitted to London by the shipping firms, either through Government sterling bills or through the Banks or otherwise. This large item must therefore be clearly taken into account.

In connection with the subject of freight charges I may mention a change which has been made in the practice of the shipping companies since the commencement of the war. It was formerly the practice not to realise the freight charges on goods shipped from India until the goods had reached their destination. The charges are, however, now realised at the time of the shipment of the goods. At first sight it might be thought that this modification of procedure would affect the trade balance. The real position is, however, that though shipping companies are now placed in funds in India to a larger extent than was formerly the case, and though they have consequently to make larger remittances out of India in respect of their shipping profits, the shipping charges paid by the shippers are recovered by them from their consignees, and corresponding additional remittances to India are thus entailed. These two sets of transactions counterbalance one another and do not thus affect the net balance of trade. It is presumably however the case that the value of the cargo insured by the shippers now includes the freight charges, and this would tend to increase the amount of the insurance premia paid in India (vide paragraph 7 below).

Another matter to which reference may perhaps be made is the loss, due to enemy submarines, etc., of cargoes in transit to and from India. It is not necessary to make any allowance for these as the Indian trade figures take into account all goods that have left India and all goods that actually arrive in India. No payment will of course be due by India on account of goods consigned to India which do not arrive. On the other hand, if a cargo shipped from India is lost it will, as a matter of practice, have been insured and payment will therefore still have to be made to India. It is not therefore necessary to look beyond the trade returns of exports and imports in this connection.

Item (g).—I have given a rough estimate of the amount of money remitted from India for subscription to the British war loan, Exchequer bonds, etc. This estimate, however, is intended to represent merely remittances specially made for the purpose of investment in these securities. It is not meant to include similar investments made by the Exchange Banks on their own account. These investments, which are believed to have been substantial, were no doubt facilitated by the fact that the Banks appear to have remitted to England during the last two years a certain amount of unemployed floating capital, for a part of which they found employment in this manner.

Item (h).—Other net private remittances.—This item covers the net private transactions, i.e., remittances other than those made in connection with real commercial transactions. Remittances on account of such transactions would be effected through the banks, and one of the Exchange Banks estimates that their net amount is roughly £125,000 to £150,000 a month. I have assumed approximately these figures, but have allowed for a gradual increase during the years taken, and also, in the last year, for the fact that many holders of jute mill shares who had retired from India took advantage of the opportunity afforded by the high level of prices obtaining for these shares, to realise their holdings and to remit the money home (vide paragraph 6 of the report).

Item (j).—Interest payable on rupee paper enfaced for payment of interest in London.—This interest is not passed through the Government of India's Home accounts, but is paid by the Bank of England in the form of a draft on India, and the holder makes his own arrangements for the realisation of the draft.

Item (k).—Railway remittances.—The Exchange Banks estimate these at about a crore of rupees a year. They probably include the earnings of the Bengal and North-Western Railway, which are of course not passed through the Government accounts. The net earnings of this railway were £291,000 in 1909, £626,000 in 1910, £384,000 in 1911, £188,000 in 1912 and £550,000 in 1913. The head also includes some remittances by railways keeping their accounts with Government, on account of the Companies' share of surplus profits, leave allowances, provident fund, etc. The surplus profits amounted approximately to £322,000, £464,000, £482,000, £710,000, £441,000, £691,000 and £595,100 in the last seven years. I have for the purpose of the statement roughly rounded off the total for the two large items for which the figures are given above.

General conclusions.

7. It will be seen that in the year 1914-15 the unexplained balance in favour of India is still very high in spite of the adjustments made. In the case of 1915-16 the adjustments reduce the unexplained difference to rather less than £8 millions or about Rs. 12 crores as compared with £25 millions or Rs. 37 crores in the table in paragraph 3 of the report. Some portion of the unusually large excess of credits over debits in the earlier year was almost certainly attributable to the remittance to England of a substantial amount of unemployed floating capital from India (vide paragraph 6 of the report for 1914-15). Attention was also drawn last year to various factors which would naturally tend to swell the net private remittances to England and to the probability of an increase in certain commercial remittances on account of transactions which do not actually find a place in the trade figures, such as those arising out of policies of insurance. Though the value of the goods insured was less than usual, the rates were greatly enhanced and special charges were also made on account of war risks. The necessity for remitting these additional premia to England would operate to reduce the demand for remittance of funds to India by means of Council bills. These various factors have probably continued to operate during the year just closed. In particular, the earlier months of the year, when trade was slack, probably saw a further transfer to England of the unemployed floating capital of the Exchange

Banks which was set free by a reduction in the stocks of piece goods and by the additional capacity of the Indian jute mills to finance themselves.

As is explained in the report, the general conclusion to which these remarks point is that, whereas in normal years there has usually been a substantial import of capital into India, during the last two years there has been a very considerable movement in the opposite direction. In the first place, specially in the earlier period, owing partly to slackness of trade which involved the employment of a smaller amount of funds and partly to the large profits made by the jute mills, the Exchange Banks have found themselves with unemployed funds in India, which they have transferred to London for investment there. Again in many cases persons holding jute mill shares have realised them and have remitted the money home. Apart from these transactions there have also been substantial remittances of funds for the special purpose of investment in the war loan and other securities of the Home Government.

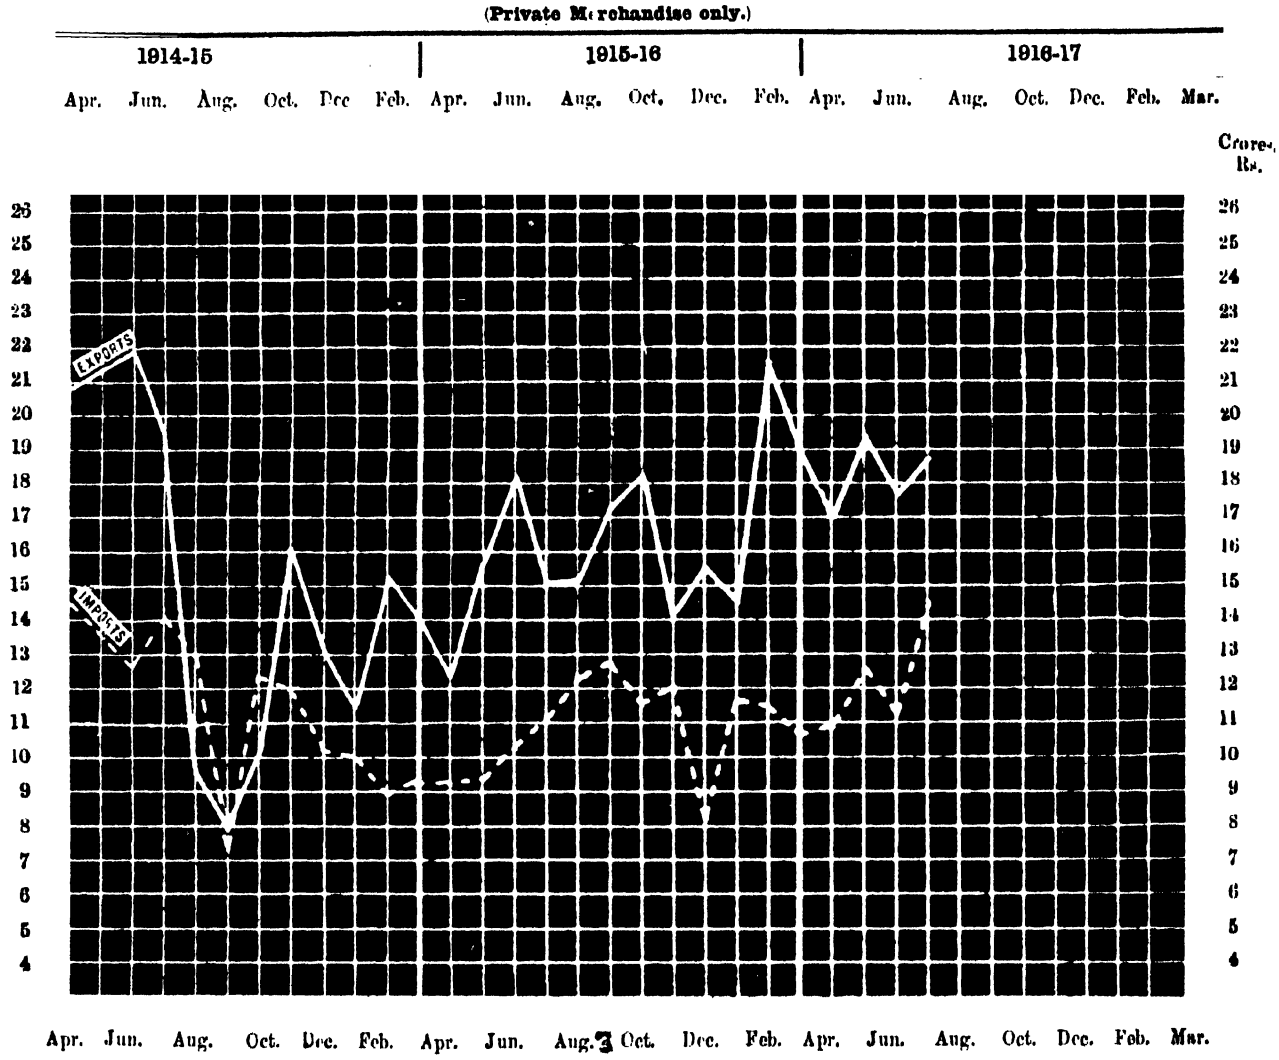
FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JULY 1916.

REVIEW of the SEA-BORNE TRADE and NAVIGATION of BRITISH INDIA for the month of JULY 1916, and for the four months ended JULY 1916.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.



FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JULY, 1916.

The outstanding feature of the trade returns of British India for July, 1916, as compared with those of its immediate predecessor, is that there was an increase in total imports and exports but a slight decrease in re-exports. The total imports of merchandise were valued at R14½ crores, the exports at R18⅓ crores, and the re-exports at R57 lakhs. As compared with the preceding month (June, 1916), the imports increased by 28 per cent and the exports by nearly 7 per cent, while the re-exports decreased by 5 per cent. As compared with July, 1915, the imports showed an increase of 29 per cent, the exports of 25 per cent, and the re-exports of 27 per cent.

The chart showing the course of monthly imports and exports, including re-exports, from April, 1914, to July, 1916 is appended below:—

(Private Merchandise only.)

The actual net excess of exports, including re-exports, over imports was R6,50 lakhs in June, 1916, and R4,48 lakhs in July, 1916. The statement below shows the figures of imports and exports including re-exports, during June and July of the years 1914, 1915, and 1916, and the actual net excess of exports over imports during the same periods:—

In the month of July 1916, there were 204 arrivals * and 341 sailings † in and from India. As regards tonnage, if a comparison be made with July 1914, the month before the outbreak of war, it will be seen that there is a decrease in the tonnage of vessels cleared of 139,375 tons or 22 per cent. The clearances from Bengal in July 1916 showed an increase of 22 per cent as compared with July 1914; while Bombay recorded a decrease of 26 per cent, Sind of 52 per cent, Madras of 42 per cent, and Burma of 1 per cent. The decrease in entries amounted to 138,031 tons or 27 per cent.

The shipping clearances with cargoes in foreign trade from the ports of British India in the four months, April to July 1916, as compared with the corresponding period of 1914, i.e., before the war broke out, show the present position of the freight market as follows:—

	TONNAGE CLEARANCES IN THE FOUR MONTHS, APRIL TO JULY.
	1914 Peace conditions.	1916 War conditions.

The earnings for the last week of July showed an increase of no less than R23 lakhs, indicating a renewal of trade activity.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN JUNE 1916.

The object of the tables below is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces, etc., and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, Karachi, and the Madras ports during the month of June 1916, and for the three months April to June 1916, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1915. The statistics include foreign sea-borne and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and river-borne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, etc.

The most noticeable feature of the Returns for June 1916 and for the three months ended June 1916 is the decrease in the imports into the ports of wheat, jute, cotton, rice, tea, gram and pulse and on the other hand the increase in the imports of linseed. As compared with the previous months (May 1916) the principal feature is the decrease in the imports into the ports of linseed, rape and mustard seed, raw cotton, gram and pulse, rice, jute, wheat and on the other hand the increase in the imports of tea.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN JUNE 1915 AND 1916.

It will be seen from Table I, that the imports by rail, river and sea in June 1916, as against the corresponding month of 1915 show (in round numbers) a decrease of—

68 per cent in jute.
(78,400 bales as against 247,200 bales last year.)

68 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour).
(84,800 tons as against 266,700 tons last year.)

48 per cent in rice (including paddy).
(76,400 tons as against 147,400 tons last year.)

(16,276,800 lbs. as against 23,277,200 lbs. last year.)

27 per cent in rape and mustard seed.
(8,900 tons as against 12,300 tons last year.)

19 per cent in gram and pulse.
(27,900 tons as against 34,300 tons last year.)

15 per cent in raw cotton.
(200,600 bales as against 236,800 bales last year.)

The imports of linseed by rail, river and sea into ports show an increase of 11 per cent (25,300 tons as against 22,900 tons last year) due mainly to larger exports from the United Provinces, the Central Provinces and Berar and Bihar and Orissa.

NOTE.—400 lbs. are equivalent to 1 bale of cotton or jute
82⅔ lbs. are equivalent to 1 maund
1 maund of paddy is taken as equivalent to 25 seers of rice

It will be seen from Table IV (wheat, excluding wheat flour) that the principal sources of the imports in June 1915 were the Punjab, the United Provinces, and Sind and British Baluchistan. During the corresponding month of 1916, the Punjab sent by far the largest quantity, namely, 72 per cent of the total. Table XI shows the exports out of India of wheat (including wheat flour) month by month during the last five years.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN THREE MONTHS ENDING JUNE 1915 AND 1916.

The three months' figures in table I show (in round numbers) a decrease of—

68 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour).
(223,800 tons as against 702,600 tons last year.)

64 per cent in jute.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUGUST 18, 1916.

First COTTON Forecast, 1916-17.

This forecast is based upon reports on the condition of the crop at the end of July or early August. They relate, as will be seen below, not to the entire cotton area, but to 76 per cent of the total, as sowings especially of the late crop have in many places not yet commenced. No attempt has been made at this stage to estimate the probable outturn.

The returns show that an area of 12,325,000 acres has been sown this year as against 11,847,000 acres on this date last year, an increase of 4 per cent.

The increase, as against last year, occurs in Ajmer-Merwara (175 per cent), Madras and Central India (13 per cent each), Hyderabad and the United Provinces (9 per cent each), the Bombay Deccan and the Central Provinces and Berar (4 per cent each), Rajputana (8 per cent). On the other hand, the North-West Frontier Province shows a decrease of 55 per cent, Mysore 26 per cent, the Punjab 17 per cent, Bengal 14 per cent, and Burma 10 per cent.

Conditions at sowing time have been favourable except in the Punjab, the North-West Frontier Province, Burma, and Bengal; in these latter provinces early rains were deficient. The present condition and prospects of the crop are on the whole fair to good. Continuous rain is, however, affecting the crop adversely in parts of the Central Provinces, the United Provinces, and the Bombay Deccan, and a break is now required in these tracts.

Detailed figures for the Provinces and States are as follows

First forecast, August.

The provincial reports are summarised below:—

Bombay (26·9 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The report relates only to the early crop of the Deccan (7·8 per cent), which up to the 1st August showed 1,488,000 acres (7,000 acres being in Native States), or an increase of 4 per cent over the area reported at this date last year. The high prices obtained last year induced extended cultivation. Rains for sowing came early in the north; elsewhere rains were late, and even resulted in delayed sowings. Later rains have been generally favourable, and the seedlings are doing well, except in a few places in Ahmednagar and Sholapur where excessive moisture has turned them yellow.

Central Provinces and Berar (19·9 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 4,285,000 acres (2,950,000 acres being in Berar), which is 4 per cent above the area reported at the corresponding date of last year. Good and generally well-distributed showers were received in June. Moderate to heavy rain fell in July and continued up to the date of report (9th August). A break would at present be beneficial. Sowings were generally successful and germination good, some resowing being necessary in parts of Jubbulpore, Wardha, and Yeotmal. Heavy and continuous rain damaged to some extent the plants in parts of Buldana and Yeotmal. Otherwise the condition of the crop is generally good and prospects are favourable.

(a) Includes Hyderabad (2,515,000 acres)

(b) Includes 14,000 acres for Mysore for which trade descriptions have not been received

Madras (10·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown up to date is reported to be 120,000 acres as compared with 106,000 acres reported at the same date last year, showing an increase of 13 per cent. It is, however, too early to say whether this increase will ultimately be maintained. The south-west monsoon broke particularly early this year. This has led to early sowing of the "Northerns and Westerns" variety in Bellary and Kurnool, but has to some extent thrown back sowing of "Cocanadas" in Guntur, where so much rain was received that in some cases early sown crops were damaged and have to be resown.

Punjab (7·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under cotton is estimated at 900,000 acres (67,000 acres being in the Native States), which is 17 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. The decrease is almost entirely in the irrigated area and is attributed to the unfavourable climatic conditions and untoward circumstances brought about by the war. The Director of Land Records, however, says that the area in the corresponding forecast of last year was an over-estimate. As compared with the final area of last year the present estimate shows only a decrease of 2 per cent. The inadequate winter and spring rainfall left almost no moisture in the ground for early sowings. The rainfall in April and May was much below normal. In June it was fairly heavy in the montane and sub-montane tracts and light or moderate elsewhere. This assisted sowings to a great extent. The monsoon burst in the latter half of July when heavy and wide-spread rain was received except in a few districts in the south, but it was too late, although sowings still continued on unirrigated areas in certain districts. Climatic conditions were thus not so favourable for sowings as last year. The supplies of water from canals also were short and late. The heavy rains of July however, immensely benefited the standing crop, which is in good condition everywhere. Some damage has been caused by floods to crops on low lands in Gujranwala, Gujrat, and Montgomery.

United Provinces (5·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is estimated at 1,150,000 acres as against 1,050,000 acres at this time last year, or an increase of 9 per cent. The supply of water in canals during April and May was low, and the area sown with cotton in those months, although in excess of last year's area, was below normal. Early rain was, however, received in June everywhere except in the Agra division in parts of which the fall was light and insufficient for sowings. The rainfall in July was general and well distributed throughout the province, and a break would now benefit the crop. Germination is reported to be good and the crop is so far doing well.

Burma (1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is estimated at 208,000 acres, which is 10 per cent short of the area estimated at the corresponding date of last year. The decrease in area is shared by all the districts, except Prome and Myingyan, Sagaing accounting for 12,000 acres, and is attributed to the deficient early rains in Thayetmyo and Lower Chindwin and to the bad cotton market of last year in Magwe. The standing crops are reported to be doing well on the whole.

Bihar and Orissa (0·4 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown up to date with both early and late cotton is estimated at 67,000 acres, or about the same as on this date last year. Sowings of the early crop began at the usual time, but have not yet been completed in parts of Monghyr and Ranchi. Its condition is reported to be fair to good. Fair progress has been made with sowings of the late crop. In Cuttack, Balasore, and Angul sowings have not yet begun. The weather conditions for both the early and late crops have so far been generally favourable.

Bengal (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown up to date with both early and late cotton is reported to be 74,000 acres, or 14 per cent below the area at the corresponding date of last year. Weather conditions were not quite favourable at the time of sowing of the early crop, particularly in the Chittagong Hill Tracts. Its present condition is, however, reported to be fairly satisfactory. The late crop has not yet been sown in Bankura. The present condition of the sowings is fair.

North-West Frontier Province (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown up to the end of July is estimated at 24,000 acres as against 54,000 acres reported at this date last year. The decrease both in irrigated and unirrigated areas is shared by all the districts except the Tochi and Kurram Agencies, which show no change. The contraction is noticeable mainly in Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan and is generally due to insufficient rain at sowing time. The absence of water from hill torrents during February and March, on which the cultivation of cotton mainly depends, also partly accounts for the decrease in the Dera Ismail Khan district.

Assam (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is estimated at 32,000 acres, being about the same as last year. The weather has been favourable and the present prospects of the crop are generally good except in Sylhet.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area reported is 22,000 acres (Ajmer 11,000, Kekri 8,000, and Merwara 3,000) as against 8,000 acres at this date last year, or an increase of 175 per cent. The prospects are reported to be fair to good.

Hyderabad (14·6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under the early crop is reported to be 2,515,000 acres, which is 9 per cent above the area at this date last year. This area includes 565,000 acres reported last year for 27 taluks of which no forecast has been made this year on account of the Ramzan holidays. The detailed figures are as follows:—

Chart.—The chart below illustrates the variations in the preliminary estimates of the last ten years, as compared with those in the final figures :—

* Last year's figures repeated, as no forecast has been received this year.

Cotton crop in Foreign Countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, shows that in Egypt the weather has been variable, but on the whole favourable. Water supply was generally sufficient. In several places, however, it was short owing to the low water level in canals, and this coupled with the spell of extremely hot weather caused some damage to the plants in certain tracts. The condition of the crop is, on the whole, excellent. Flowering has begun throughout the country. From un-official sources it appears that in the United States of America the area sown with cotton this season is estimated at 35,994,000 acres as compared with 32,107,000 acres in 1915-16. Boll weevils are numerous in Texas, Louisiana, and Mississipi, and are reported also in Arkansas and Georgia, with prospects of serious damage.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

First SUGARCANE Forecast, 1916-17.

THIS forecast is based on reports received from eight provinces, which contain on an average 95 per cent of the entire area under sugarcane in British India. Madras, which contains approximately 4 per cent of the area under sugarcane, does not report at this time, and is, therefore, excluded from this forecast.

The returns show that an area of 2,242,000 acres is planted with sugarcane this year in the reporting provinces as against 2,415,000 acres on this date last year, or a decrease of 7 per cent. Notwithstanding the high level of prices for sugar and gur, there has been a decrease in area sown, owing to unfavourable weather conditions at sowing time. The decrease would probably have been much greater, had there not been the stimulus of high prices.

The present estimate of area, as compared with that reported at the corresponding date of last year, shows an increase of 10 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, 3 per cent in Bombay and Sind, and 1 per cent each in the Punjab and Bihar and Orissa. On the other hand, the United Provinces show a decrease of 12 per cent, Bengal 5 per cent, and Assam 3 per cent.

Conditions at sowing time were not favourable in the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bengal, and Sind, owing to deficient rainfall and inadequate water supply; in the other provinces the weather was generally favourable. Beneficial rain has, however, been received subsequently in all the provinces, and the present condition and prospects of the crop are reported to be generally from fair to good.

The detailed figures for the provinces are as follows :—

TOTAL .	2,242,000	2,415,000	−173,000

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

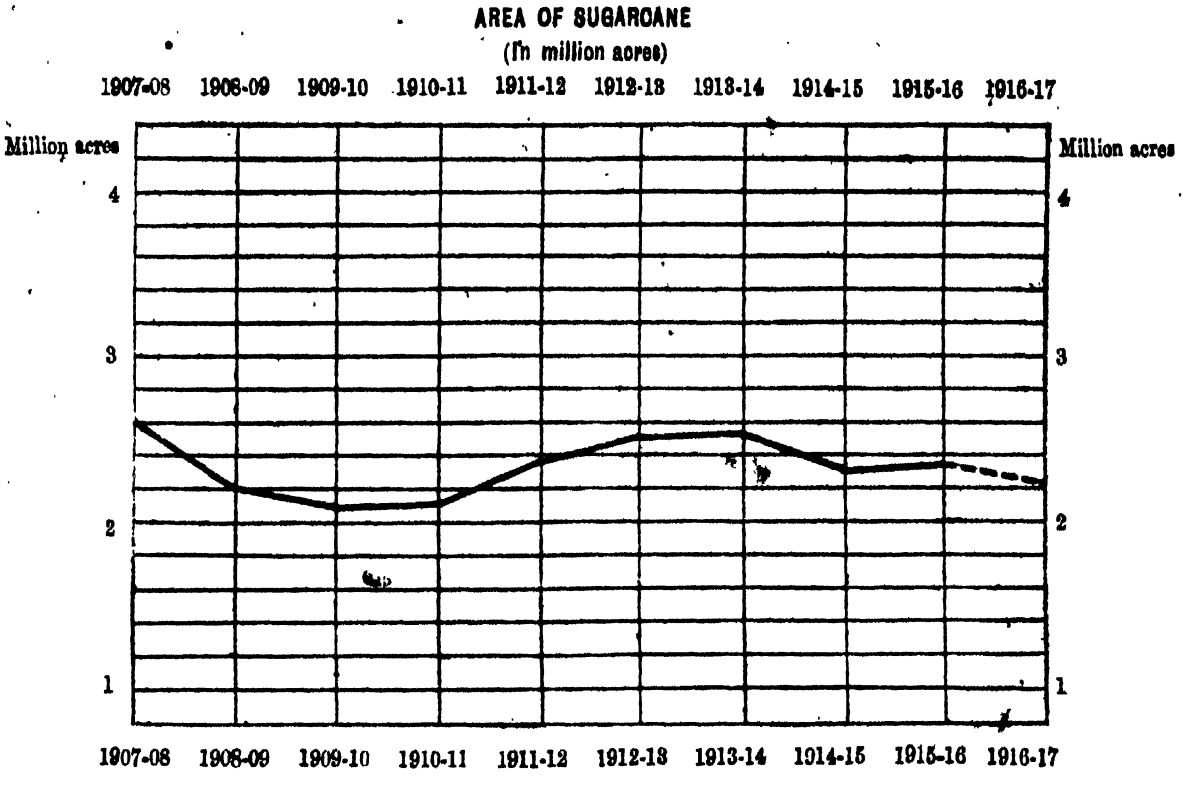
United Provinces (53·2 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted with sugarcane is now roughly estimated at 1,220,000 acres, which is 12 per cent below the area at this date last year. The winter rains were light, and the supply of water in canals was low. This affected sowings which began in April and continued till April. Germination was generally good; but during the hot weather month the crop suffered from the shortage of canal water and serious attacks of insect pests. The early rain received in June greatly benefited it. During July and August the weather was seasonable with ample rainfall; and the condition of the crop has improved. The damage by the borer was most serious in the Rohilkhand division, where the crop is estimated at 75 per cent of the normal; in parts of the Bareilly and Shahjahanpur districts the estimate is as low as 60 per cent. In the Benares division, where the crop suffered from insect pests less severely, it is estimated at 85 per cent of the normal; elsewhere from 90 to 100 per cent. The weather during the rest of the season may, however, necessitate some modification in these estimates.

Punjab (15·3 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area estimated at the end of July was 360,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area at the corresponding date last year. The irrigated area, on which sowings were considerably stimulated by the high price of gur, shows an advance of 8 per cent as compared with last year, while the unirrigated area shows a decline of 23 per cent on account of the want of rain at sowing time. The season was thus not so favourable for sowings as last year. The rain, which fell in July, proved, however, very beneficial to the standing crop, which is reported to be generally in good condition.

Bihar and Orissa (11 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted with sugarcane is estimated at 270,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The weather conditions have generally been favourable. In parts of Monghyr and the Santhal Parganas the growth of the crop was affected by deficient rainfall in the early part of the season. The present condition of the crop is reported to be fair to good, and the outturn per acre is expected to be normal. Three of the districts (Sambalpur, Gaya, and Shahabad) report more than a normal crop, nine districts a normal crop, and eight districts between 85 to 93 per cent. The district of Monghyr reports a crop of 62 per cent only. The outturn for the province as a whole works out to 100 per cent or normal.

Bengal (9·4 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area under the crop is reported to be 223,000 acres, which is 5 per cent short of the area at this date last year. Weather conditions were generally unfavourable, owing to inadequate rainfall at the time of planting and a spell of drought thereafter. The crop suffered in its early stages; but subsequently conditions improved with the rainfall in May and June. In the districts of Khulna, Rangpur, Chittagong, and Maimensingh, seasonal conditions have, however, been favourable. The prospects at present are, on the whole, fairly satisfactory. The outturn per acre of the crop is expected to be 80 per cent of the normal as against 88 per cent last year.

Bombay and Sind (2·7 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The information received is incomplete. The area so far reported comes to 80,000 acres (30,000 acres being in Native States), which is 3 per cent in excess of the area reported at this date last year. The increase in area is general in the Presidency proper, and is due partly to high prices and partly to plentiful supply of water in wells and canals at sowing time. In Sind the area was restricted owing to inadequate water supply. The crop is reported to be generally thriving everywhere.



Assam (1·5 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area planted is reported to be 35,000 acres, which is 3 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. The weather was favourable at the time of planting, except in Sylhet, and has continued to be so in all the districts except Goalpara and Nowgong. The probable outturn per acre is estimated at about 94 per cent of the normal or a little above that estimated at this date last year.

North-West Frontier Province (1·3 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area placed under the crop up to the end of July is estimated at 32,000 acres, which is about the same as returned at the corresponding date last year. The area has increased in the Peshawar district, mainly on account of high prices of gur. The Bannu and Hazara districts, on the other hand, show small decreases.

[redacted] and Berar (0·9 per cent [redacted] under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted is estimated at 22,000 acres, which is 10 per cent in excess of the area at this date last year. Conditions at sowing time were generally favourable, and germination was successful. Good rain was received all over the provinces in June, and it was generally well distributed. Moderate to heavy rain fell in July and continued up to the date of report (10th August). Prospects of the standing crops are generally favourable at present.

Chart.—The chart below shows the preliminary estimate of area now made with the final figures of the preceding nine years :—

Sugarcane crop in foreign countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, is that in Egypt the weather is variable. Watering, hoeing, and manuring of the new crop is in progress. The crop is progressing favourably and looks healthy.

From non-official sources it appears that in Cuba the weather conditions have been favourable for the growth of the cane and the making of new plantings. In Louisiana the condition of the crop continues to be all that could reasonably be desired. In the Hawaiian Islands the weather conditions have been quite favourable for the growing cane, and a large crop is expected. In Mauritius drought prevailed in most places up to the middle of April; since then moderate general rain has been received, and the crop has benefited considerably, but has not fully recovered in those localities where the shortage of rain was seriously felt.

CUSTOMS.

The 26th August, 1916.

No. 7497-W.-II.—In supersession of the Notification in this Department No. 13755-W., dated the 21st August 1915. the following regulations respecting certificates of origin for foreign goods imported into Russia are published for general information :—

Regulations concerning proof of origin of foreign goods.

I. The following will be accepted as proof of the origin of goods subject to Customs duty at the rates of the "Conventional," or, as the case may be, "General" Tariff for European trade :—

1. Certificates of origin issued by :

(a) Russian diplomatic and consular officers, with the official seal affixed ;

(b) Chambers of Commerce, Municipal or Police Authorities with the official seal affixed ;

(c) Custom houses discharging the goods from the country whose products are assessed in Russia at "Conventional" rates, or, as the case may be, "General" rates of the Tariff ;

2. Accounts, invoices, or letters of manufacturers, wholesale stores, merchants' commission, offices and traders.

II. The documents enumerated in point 1 (letters b and c) and point 2 of Section 1, will be recognised as sufficient proof of origin only when the said documents have been attested by Russian diplomatic or consular officers, if there be such in the country of origin. Not only the signatures in the documents must so be attested, but also the accuracy of the statements regarding the origin of the goods indicated. In the case of accounts, invoices, and letters of foreign manufacturers, etc., (point 2 of Section I), the above officials must also certify that the persons submitting these documents do in fact possess the commercial or industrial undertakings in the name of which the documents are submitted.

As a temporary measure and for the duration of the war owners of goods may obtain certificates of origin from the competent Consuls of allied or neutral countries resident in the country through which the goods pass, or from which they have been obtained: These certificates, however, as well as the accuracy of the declaration as to the origin of the goods made therein must be further certified by the local Russian diplomatic or consular officer.

NOTE.—In countries where there are no Russian diplomatic or consular representatives, the documents may be attested by English, French, or Belgian diplomatic or consular officials, according to a list sanctioned by the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

III. Should (Russian) Customs establishments experience any difficulties in interpreting the foreign text of documents presented, the owner of the goods must, on demand submit a translation in Russian, certifying the correctness of the same with his signature.

IV. The documents referred to in Section I will be accepted only if issued by persons residing, or institutions established in the country of origin of the goods, and not in countries through which they are being conveyed in transit.

V. These documents must contain information as to the quantity of packages, their marks and numbers, gross and net weight, and description of the goods by their technical or trade name, the following exceptions being admitted :—

(a) In proof of origin of articles assessed in the Tariff not by weight but by piece, documents will be accepted without indication of the net and gross weight.

(b) In documents concerning vessels (ships), the dimensions may be indicated by gross capacity in tons.

(c) The net weight need not be given in the case of the following: all goods assessed in the Tariff by gross weight and all goods allowed a deduction for tare if imported in packing specifically named in the Tare Table sanctioned by the Minister of Finance.

(d) Slight disparities in the marks and numbers of goods' packages, as compared with the entries in the documents need not disqualify the documents if the Customs authorities have no doubt that the documents refer to the goods imported.

VI. It is sufficient to present one of the documents indicated in Section I if the goods come to Russia direct from the country of origin.

VII. By direct importation of goods from the country of origin is to be understood :—

(a) the carriage of goods from a port of the country of origin to a Russian port without transhipment and without discharge at a port of a third country;

(b) the carriage of goods by rail or by a mixed route, by rail and by steamer, with through waybills or bills of lading, if the place of despatch indicated in these documents is situated within the boundaries of the country of origin and the place of destination is any interior or frontier point of Russia, even if the goods have to be conveyed viâ other countries to the products of which favourable tariff rates are applied.

VIII. The conveyance of goods through German, Austro-Hungarian, or Turkish territories, as also the transhipment or discharge of goods at ports of these countries, shall deprive the goods of any right to favourable tariff rates.

IX. On the delivery of goods imported indirectly from the country of origin the following will be required :—

1. For goods coming from Customs warehouses, in addition to one of the documents indicated in Section I, a certificate of a Custom house of the country from which the goods are imported into Russia to the effect that the packages indicated in the said documents were not released from the warehouses of that Custom House, and indicating by what waybills or bills of lading they were despatched directly to Russia. This certificate must be attested by Russian diplomatic or consular officials; and

2. For goods acquired in a foreign interior market, a certificate of origin from Russian diplomatic or consular officials indicating that the goods, on delivery into that country did not pass in transit through German, Austro-Hungarian or Turkish territory, and were not transhipped or discharged at ports of these countries

X. Goods specified in the appended list, on direct import into Russia from the country of origin, do not require certificates of origin. If these goods are imported indirectly from the country of origin, they require a certificate of the Custom House of the country from which they were despatched direct to Russia, this certificate indicating the country of origin, the point whence the goods were received at the place where the custom house issuing the certificate is situated, and the routes by which the goods were proceeding to Russia. This certificate must be attested by a Russian diplomatic or consular officer.

Certificates of origin will be dispensed with in the case of foreign goods which arrive in the Empire direct from Allied countries; nor will such certificates be required in the case of foreign goods despatched to Russia from Allied countries by parcel post.

When goods from Allied countries are imported into the Empire after passing in transit through other countries, or after transhipment at intermediate ports, certificates of origin issued at the place of despatch only will be required. Russian diplomatic and consular officers will certify only the signatures on the certificates and not the accuracy of the statement regarding the origin of the goods covered by the certificate.

NOTE.—At the desire of the owners of the goods, instead of the Customs certificate mentioned in this Section, documents mentioned in Sections I and IX may be presented.

XI. Asiatic goods imported by Persian, Afghan, Mongolian and overland Chinese frontiers, do not require certificates of origin.

XII. In goods' declarations, when the amount of the duty depends on the country of origin, the owner must indicate the country of origin, otherwise the declaration will be returned for the insertion of this information.

XIII. Documents showing the origin or place of despatch of goods (Sections I to X) may be presented at Custom houses at the time of import of the goods together with the lading documents, or on delivery of the declaration, or afterwards with a separate statement handed in previous to the discharge of the goods from the Custom house, but in any case, not later than six months from the date of arrival of the goods at the Custom house. Proofs of origin may also be submitted after the clearance of the goods through the Custom house. In such cases however a sum must be deposited with the customs officials to cover the possible difference in the amount of duty leviable; and the Customs official will either retain samples of the goods; or drawings, photographs and descriptions thereof must be left with them.

XIV. On inspection of the goods, the Customs authorities must see that the proofs of origin presented correspond with the goods, and, in cases of reasonable doubt, must verify the proofs, apart from the documents referred to above, and make an expert examination of the goods.

XV. If the number of packages of goods presented for inspection should be found to be less than that entered in the documents of origin, this circumstance alone should not be a reason for refusing to recognise the goods as subject to assessment under the "Conventional" or, as the case may be, "General" Tariff and the documents of origin must not be returned to the owner of the goods If the latter declares that the missing packages will be delivered later, the Custom house must on his written request, deliver to him a copy of these documents, with a note on the same explaining the circumstances.

XVI. The documents indicated in Sections I to X of these regulations, delivered at Custom houses with postal declarations will be recognised as proof of origin of goods imported in postal parcels. Certificates of origin covering goods sent by parcel post should specify the postal numbers of the parcels. For goods, received in parcels, delivered to addressees direct from Custom houses (Section 617 of the Custom Code, 1912 Supplement), proof of origin may also be presented by the receivers on the same basis as is established for the presentation of proof of origin of goods inspected according to declaration.

XVII. For goods inspected without inspection documents in the cases provided for in Sections 197, 198, 257, 391, 399 and 417 of the Customs Code, proof of origin will be accepted on the same basis as is established for goods inspected according to declarations.

XVIII. Documents of origin, as also other documents, after payment of Customs duties on the goods, shall be sent to the competent Control Chambers with the inspection documents.

XIX. In the absence of proofs of origin, or non-compliance of the same with these regulations, the goods will be assessed for duty according to the rates established for goods of German, Austrian and Turkish origin.

XX. Exemptions from the stipulations of these regulations may be made in exceptional cases on the special authorisation, in each separate case, of the Minister of Finance.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 19th August 1916.

Burma.—Good rain was general in Lower Burma, three districts reporting falls exceeding 10 inches. In the dry zone the fall was good. The cultivation of winter rice is proceeding normally and the progress of miscellaneous crops in Upper Burma is satisfactory. Standing crops are generally doing well. Live stock are healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has fallen to Rs. 116 per hundred baskets and is slightly below normal. The market for white rice continues steady.

Assam.—The weather is hot, dry and unfavourable to crops and cultivation in most districts of the Assam Valley and Cachar. Agricultural operations have been retarded by cattle disease in Nowgong and Darrang. Plucking and manufacture of tea, transplantation of winter rice and harvesting of autumn rice and jute are going on. Some damage by insect pests to autumn rice is still reported from Sylhet and Kamrup and to winter rice from the Khasi and Jaintia Hills. Prospects of tea, jute, cotton and broadcast winter rice are generally fair. The price of common rice has risen slightly. Cattle disease is reported from almost all districts Bengal.—Light to moderate rain fell throughout the Province. More rain is, however, wanted especially in western districts for the transplantation of winter rice and for the steeping and washing of jute. Harvesting of autumn paddy and jute is proceeding and is approaching completion in some of the eastern districts. Cattle disease is reported to be prevalent in nine districts. Scarcity of fodder is reported from parts of Dinajpur, Dacca and Tippera. Distress among certain hill tribes in the Chittagong hill tracts is subsiding. The average price of common rice for the Province has risen by about 0·4 per cent as compared with that of the preceding week.

The weekly report on famine in the Bankura district is as follows :—Distress in the affected areas is generally unchanged. The rainfall during the week was general. Transplantation of winter rice is progressing satisfactorily. Maize and Kheri crops are thriving well. Relief measures are adequate. The condition of people on relief works is generally good. Private charitable funds are giving relief. Sufficient advances are being made to weavers. Prices are stationary. The price of rice is 8¼ seers per rupee. The number of persons on relief works was 8,171 and in receipt of gratuitous relief 20,517, total 28,688. The decrease in the number on works is due to a local festival. The number of persons relieved on private works was 2,599.

Bihar and Orissa.—The rainfall during the week was general over the Province, the fall being mostly light to moderate. Weeding of autumn crops continues. Transplantation of paddy is in progress. Standing crops are, on the whole, doing well. The average price of common rice has risen as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from fifteen districts. The attendance of persons on test works in Singhbhum was 8,872. Gratuitous relief was given to 567 persons in Manbhum and 2,071 persons in Singhbhum. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—During the week light to moderate rain fell throughout the Provinces and a break is everywhere required. Sowing and weeding of autumn crops and preparation of fields for spring crops continues. Some damage to standing crops from excessive rain is again reported from several districts and from grasshoppers in Ballia but the crops are generally in good condition. Cattle disease is inclined to spread but is still slight and sporadic and the condition of agricultural stock is good on the whole. Fodder and water are sufficient everywhere. Prices are practically stationary.

Punjab.—Fairly heavy rain has fallen in parts of the submontane and western districts and light to moderate elsewhere. It has been beneficial and more rain is not required for the present. Standing crops are in good condition but they have been slightly damaged by floods in parts of the submontane tracts. Sowings of autumn crops continue in some districts and are normal. Cattle are healthy and fodder is sufficient. Water for drinking and irrigation purposes is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and in the case of wheat they range between normal and warning rates and in other cases between normal and scarcity rates. Price of wheat:—Lahore and Lyallpur 10½ and Ambala, Ferozepore and Rawalpindi 10½ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell all over the Province. The weather is comparatively cool. The condition of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas is average. Harvesting of extra spring crops is proceeding with average outturn in Bannu. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are sufficient. The Paharpur canal has been damaged by recent rains and is partly running. The public health is good except for a few cases of cholera in Dera Ismail Khan. Prices are high but stationary. Prices of wheat and barley are falling in Peshawar.

Jammu.—The rainfall during the week was abundant. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 12 and maize from 11 to 19 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. Cattle disease of mild type is prevailing in the Ranbirsinghpura and Jasmergarh tahsils. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The rainfall during the week was fair. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are falling Rajputana.—The weather is cloudy. The rainfall during the week was general. The maximum fall was 10 inches and 48 cents in Banswara. Standing crops are in good condition and are being weeded. Preparation of land for spring crops has commenced in certain places. The condition of cattle is generally good. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are stationary. The number of persons on test works in Kishengarh was 4,706.

The weekly report on scarcity in Merwara is as follows:—Good rainfall has materially improved the situation. The number on works is decreasing. People are resuming agricultural operations. The physical condition of workers is satisfactory. Cash advances for seeds and bullocks are being distributed. The public health continues to be good but smallpox is reported from a few villages. The rainfall was general throughout Merwara. All relief works are to be closed by the first of September. Prices are 10 seers per rupee. The number of persons on test works was 600 and on gratuitous relief 1,400, total 2,000.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general. The principal falls were over 8 inches in Manpur, over 7 inches in Dhar, over 6 inches in Mehidpur, over 4 inches in Indore city and Alirajpur, over 3 inches in Garot and Barwani, over 2 inches in Khargaon, Kannod and Bundelkhand, over 1 inch in Jobat and sufficient everywhere. Autumn crops are being sown in Bundelkhand and weeded elsewhere. Land for spring crops is being prepared in Malwa. Standing crops are in good condition and the probable outturn is generally good. Cotton and other crops in parts of Baoni and Gaurihar in Bundelkhand have been damaged by excessive rain. Agricultural stock is in good condition except in some villages of the Petlawad, Khargon, Sendhwa, Nisarpur and Nandwai parganas in the Indore State and in one village of the Baoni State in the Bundelkhand Agency and the Bagli State in the Malwa Agency where there is cattle disease. The fodder supply is sufficient. Prices are normal in Bhopal and Baghelkhand and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather continued to be cloudy and rainy. Drug received light showers not exceeding 52 cents. More and heavy rain is required in parts of this district and of Raipur for thinning operations. Elsewhere moderate to heavy rain fell and was generally well distributed but a break seems to have set in which will benefit the cotton tracts. Transplantation and weeding continue. Standing crops are generally in good condition and prospects are favourable. Fodder and water are ample and cattle are in good condition. Variations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States:—All States received good rain but more is urgently required in three States. Crops are in good condition.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was general and beneficial to standing crops. Sowing of autumn crops and transplantation continue. The fodder supply is deficient in parts of Sind and Cutch. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition except in parts of Sind. Drinking and irrigation water is generally adequate. Prices of food grains are generally steady.
